LLIED TROOPS TO JOIN JAPAN, IS PROPOSAL NOW.

ervention Considered Necessary to Save the Country; French Press the President to Act.

BY RALPH B. ARMSTRONG.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ASHINGTON, June 8.—An Allied army in Russia is more than a possibility. It is now being considered even more thoughtfully than ever by the Cabinet and has the support of French and British authorities. In its latest form the proposal is to send into Russia a commission with experts in government and municipal reconstruction and organizers of industry.

Behind this commission will be an international army similar to the that participated in the suppression of the Boxer uprising. In this there will naturally be none but troops of our allies and the American troops will be a big factor if the plan is carried out. Numerically Japanese will be the largest in this international army.

French and British messages to this country indicate that something must be done to save Russia from and in the last analysis, from Germans. Those who know best say that only 10 per cent. of the population is represented by Bolshevik element and that not than an additional 10 per cent. are fighting to restore the Therefore 80 per cent. of the people are desirous of peace orderly conditions.

Those who support the proposal of interference in Russia say that the great bulk of the Russian nation will not wait long for Allied aid, but will seek order and where they can get it first, and if no other way is available they will accept German order and quiet rather than anarchy and chaos continually.

PACIFIC COAST.

In the event that this plan meets approval, great activity may be expected at once to the Pacific and some of the troops now on the western borders of the United States may form part of the Russian expedition. It is believed, with a strong commission supported by propaganda and a small exceedingly mobile force, Russia can be restored to the ranks of the Allies and wrested from German influence.

A decision will be announced possibly simultaneously in England, France, Japan and the United States, and it is expected shortly.

Officials at the State Department will not admit that President Wilson had modified his views in regard to the proposed intervention of Japan in Siberia, but it was recalled that in this government's reply to the Japanese inquiry concerning the question there was a phrase leaving a loophole for a future modification of opinion. It related to time, holding that the moment suggested by Japan for intervention was not ripe.

VIEW IN FRANCE.

It is known that France, which originally recommended intervention by the Japanese in Russia, has not changed its views and also that Russian diplomatists, both here and abroad, favor intervention by all the Allies, or, if found impracticable for all of them to participate in force, for all of them, and particularly the United States, to have representatives with any military ex-

BRITISH TAKE STRONG DEFENSES OF GERMANS.

EARLY MORNING ATTACK STRENGTHENS ALLIED LINES; FIFTY PRISONERS TAKEN.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 8.—British troops today carried out a well planned attack west of Voormezeele and captured a strong position held by the enemy.

The operation was a minor one, but the defenses secured greatly improved the Allied line in this sector which had been the scene of continual thrusts and counter-thrusts since Von Hindenburg began his offensive in Flanders.

About fifty prisoners were taken. The attack was launched at 5 o'clock in the morning and was successfully completed in a short time.

For the first time in the war the German headquarters has used the term "American regiment" in its official report on the operations on the western front, says the Associated Press. Even in announcing the loss of Catigny, the official communication mentioned merely "the enemy" as having occupied that place.

Several times, however, the Germans have officially mentioned the capture of American prisoners.

CZAR TRIED TO FLEA TO AMERICA, REPORT.

DISCOVERY OF PLOT REASON FOR HIS REMOVAL TO EKATERINBURG.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, June 8. — The discovery of a plot to free the former Emperor of Russia while he was confined at Tobolsk, to take him to Sweden and thence to America is reported in German newspapers received here.

According to the accounts published, the chief conspirator was Prince Paul Dolgorouki, grand marshal of the imperial Russian court under Emperor Nicholas, who placed 800,000 rubles at his disposal, with which to bribe all the members of his guard. The plot failed, the papers say, owing to the indiscretion of a servant, who divulged the plans.

A dispatch from Petrograd to London on May 13 said that the soviet government had officially confirmed reports that Nicholas Romanoff, the former Emperor, together with the former Empress and one of their daughters, was removed from Tobolsk to Ekaterinburg in consequence of the discovery of a peasant conspiracy to assist in his escape. Alexis Romanoff, the former heir apparent, remained at Tobolsk owing to ill health, the dispatch added.

RECLAIM ARMY SHOES, CLOTHES, GARBAGE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Damaged garments and worn shoes are being repaired and reused in large numbers by the army, a summary of the accomplishment of the Quartermaster Corps' reclamation division issued tonight shows.

Wives and mothers of men in service employed in a base repair shop at Fort Sam Houston fitted for reuse an average of 3000 garments per day during May, and new shops for similar work are being established at various places.

Nearly 170,000 pairs of shoes were repaired in April, while salvaging of garbage, waste and metals has shown profitable results.

Mobile laundries to travel with troops in France have been developed, the statement adds.

Allied Forces, Acting in Perfect Liaison, Slowly Pressing Back Germans Around Chateau Thierry—French and Americans Equally Divide Honors.

BY WILBUR FORREST.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES BETWEEN SOISSONS AND RHEIMS, June 8.—In the heaviest fighting of the last two days, the French and Americans about equally divided the ten-mile battle line west of Chateau Thierry. The Allied forces, in perfect liaison, slowly pressed the enemy back during the evening, though, with a battle at night, the line still was subject to fluctuation.

The French troops have taken three strongly-held villages and several heights and are now maintaining themselves on the heights southeast of Hautevenes. The enemy is contesting every foot, giving up valuable positions only at the cost of heavy casualties.

The Americans have been locked in a death grip with the enemy, attacking and counter-attacking like veterans.

Belleau Wood is a great nest of German machine guns, which the enemy is using in great profusion, in an effort to hold new territory. Some idea of the task confronting the Americans in Belleau Wood is given by the exploit of a young lieutenant who advanced alone with an automatic rifle against an enemy machine gun nest. He killed the entire crew of the Crown Prince's followers and brought the gun back to the American line.

Again, when the line was pressed back slightly, a private of the medical corps crawled forward alone to attend the wounded. Unaided he then brought back four disabled men.

The line along which the attack is progressing is a few miles

ON WEST FRONT.

SUMMARY FOR 24 HOURS.

In the battlefield of the Marne, where a week ago the Germans were hurling their masses of troops against the western side of the wedge they had driven into the Allied lines in the battle that began on March 26, the Teutons are now standing virtually on the defensive in the Chateau Thierry sector.

American and French troops are participating in a reaction on the extreme tip of the salient and are making progress in this important region.

The British are engaged on the other side of the wedge between the Marne and Rheims.

While the operations take the nature of local attacks, they have had their effect in driving the Germans back from the points they reached on the crest of the wave that carried them far on the road to Paris. The attacks, which began just to the northwest of Chateau Thierry, are spreading northward along the line, and everywhere the Allies report ground recovered from the enemy.

The rush of the American marines and the French on Thursday afternoon has not continued to gain ground as fast as it did at the inception of the movement, but it is still going on. In the meantime they have withstood two violent attacks by the Germans, and have repulsed the enemy in decisive fashion.

Reports from the whole battle line in France are to the effect that there has been renewed activity on the part of the German artillery in several sectors of the front. Notable among the regions under bombardment is the line between Noyon and Montdidier.

It is along this line that a heavy enemy offensive has been expected by military experts since the momentum of the German advance from the Aisne died away. When the Germans pushed west from St. Quentin late in March and early in April, the line from Noyon to Montdidier was almost equal in importance to that in front of Amiens. The French forces were rushed to this front and fought savagely to stop the German advance and retake ground which was of strategic and tactical importance.

At the same time the Woevre sector, just to the southeast of Verdun, is claiming attention. Large movements of enemy troops in the direction of St. Mihiel have been reported by aerial observers, and there are indications that the positions of the Americans along this part of the front may be in the storm center of a terrific attack soon.

The advantages to be gained by the Germans, if they succeed in breaking this line, are manifold. Eighteen miles west of St. Mihiel is the town of Bar-le-Duc, and still farther westward is Vitry, which would be but a stepping stone to a dash to Chalons-sur-Marne. If the line at St. Mihiel could be driven back very far, the whole Verdun sector would be in peril and might have to be abandoned.

RUSHING TO BE SEA SOLDIERS.

News of Gallant Advance by Marines in Picardy Draws Recruits.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—News of the gallant advance of the United States marines against the Germans in Picardy has resulted in an unprecedented rush of applicants for enlistment with the "soldiers of the sea," according to a recruiting officer here today. The central recruiting station was filled to overflowing all day yesterday, and extra officers were pressed into service to handle the rush.

General Situation.

LARGE GERMAN RESERVES AWAIT ORDER TO BATTLE.

Allies are Outnumbered, but Must Guard Long Line Against Attack.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, June 8.—Although quietude prevails, the general situation is grave. In the German Crown Prince's drive forty-one divisions were employed. This means that a formidable army still awaits Ludendorff's order to attack. As the Allies are numerically inferior, they are unable to concentrate their reserves, but must dispose of them so as to protect various vulnerable points, such as the channel ports, the coal fields north of Arras and Paris.

Foch's report today tells of raids north of Montdidier and west of Noyon, and the capture of prisoners. Undoubtedly Foch is anxious to learn what is happening at the junction between the armies of the German Crown Prince and Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria.

The long front between Noyon and Chateau Thierry may be the scene of the next German effort with Ludendorff aiming to advance down the historic valleys of the Oise and Ourcq to Paris. The situation is decidedly anxious because, with the lengthening battle front, Foch must distribute his reserves along a wider line, thereby automatically increasing the advantage Ludendorff enjoys.

FOE'S ADVANTAGE.

The interior lines of the enemy were never more advantageous to him than at present. Again the Allied armies have little room for maneuver on the Ypres plains, on the Amiens front or before Paris. They can't afford to allow the enemy to advance in any of these areas.

Paris seems to be the chief objective of the enemy, but his next attack may come from another quarter, giving the Crown Prince time to prepare for the second phase of the battle of the Aisne.

Meanwhile it is well to watch the Italian theater, where the Piave has subsided and fighting in the mountains has become quite practicable again. There are no Germans on the Italian front, but the Austrians have made great preparations and a battle seems imminent.

The weakness of the Italian front, presenting the possibility of turning the Piave position via the Brenta Valley, gives cause for anxiety, but during the spring Italian reserves have increased considerably and the morale of the troops is infinitely better than last fall.

In the last three days there has been practically no change on the Marne front. The outstanding feature has been the clever work of the American forces which have been co-operating with the French between the Ourcq and the Marne.

West and southwest of Chateau Thierry the Allies are in a peculiar salient or—the other way about—the German line forms a salient with the Marne as one of its sides and Charlis its apex.

This is the farthest point the enemy has reached in his efforts to push westward along the Marne.

RHEIMS'S DEFENSE.

Ludendorff seems reluctant to try a direct attack on Rheims, because it is a large city with miles of caves and hundreds of streets, which lend themselves as strong defenses. When next he strikes here the movement probably will consist of simultaneous drives from the west and northeast.

If Rheims is captured by the Germans they would undoubtedly try to repair the Rheims-Soissons railway immediately.

There is no reason for despondency, and no excuse for foolish optimism. Clemenceau's recent speech emphasized the gravity of the situation and also expressed the confidence he has in Foch and the troops under him.

Atrocities.

TURKS SLAUGHTER GREEKS, SELL WOMEN TO SLAVERY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—Mohammedan prisoners of war in Saloniki, according to a cable message from Athens to the Greek Legation in Washington, made public here today by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, say that "the Greeks in Turkey are undergoing the worst blow since the fall of Constantinople, 1453 A.D."

The messages state that the Mohammedan captives say that since the beginning of the war to the end of 1917, more than 200,000 Greeks, between the ages of 15 and 48, have been drafted forcibly into the Turkish army, and that thousands of these have died as a result of ill treatment, hunger and epidemics.

"More than 500,000 Greeks have been deported from Thrace into Asia Minor. One-half of the deportees died from torture and illness," says the cable message. "Many were slaughtered and the survivors are in a terrible plight. With the exception of Symrna, Constantinople and a few other towns, all the Greeks in them underwent terrible suffering, exile, torture and starvation.

"Women are sold as slaves, men are forced to become Mohammedans and $5,000,000,000 worth of property, belonging to the Greeks, has been confiscated. Men from Aivali and many other cities were seen working as slaves in rags and begging for bread. Forty to fifty deaths occur daily among the Greeks in Smyrna as the result of hunger and weakness. The streets in the larger cities are full of Greek orphans, half-naked and begging for bread in spite of the fact that Turkish authorities have torn them from the bosoms of their parents."

Brilliant Success of American and French Troops Improves Allied Line at Dominant Points.

Foch's Turn Now.

GERMANS' GREAT EFFORTS FADE AWAY ON MARNE.

Allies' Counter-Attacks Dishearten the Foe; Enemy, Depressed by Defeat, Makes Feeble Resistance.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 8.—The second Franco-American attack in the neighborhood of Veuilly-La Poterie and Bouresches was a brilliant success to the Allied arms. It was continued yesterday with an advance in the Chezy sector, farther northwest on the line.

The enemy seemed somewhat disheartened, replying only feebly to the Allied fire. Prisoners arriving at the rear in small batches appear to be thoroughly exhausted and depressed by the turn affairs are taking.

Important advantages have been gained by the Allies in the course of small infantry engagements during the past two days. The French, American and British troops have participated in these actions and the bag of prisoners is considerable.

The tactical situation of the Allies is improved by the reconquest of a number of dominant points.

As a general rule the great German effort in the valley of the Marne seems to be fading away as the enemy comes in contact with something approaching his numbers.

TRENCHES RAIDED.

Americans, with the French, have made trench raids along the left bank of the Avre River in the Montdidier sector. These raids have been carried out with good effect and enemy works have been destroyed as well as several prisoners captured.

Everywhere the American troops are rapidly becoming accustomed to every phase of the war. They are showing initiative and dash which has been repeatedly commented upon by veteran French and British soldiers, who welcome their appearance.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE.

The revival of artillery activity in the sector between Noyon and Montdidier is claiming attention today. Whether the Germans intend to deliver another blow here with their still powerful reserves cannot be foreseen, but the indications point to such an event.

The German gunners in this region are active in securing ranges on Allied positions. This work, however, is carried out with difficulty, as the Allied cannon incessantly harry the enemy's battery emplacements and bombard the rear of his lines.

Most of the German shock divisions used in the Marne battle field have been withdrawn from that area.

MINOR BATTLES.

The most severe among the minor battles recently in the Marne-Rheims region was in the vicinity of St. Euphraise and Champlat, westward from Rheims.

The Germans launched a serious attack here at dawn Thursday morning along a four-mile front. They planned to pierce the Allied lines to a depth of two and one-half miles, which would permit them to outflank Rheims Mountain and thus capture the city. It would have reduced at the same time the salient held by the Allies which endangers a large part of the line.

The village and spur of Bligny fell into their hands when they came forward in dense waves, but the British immediately counter-attacked and took the spur. Simultaneously the French counter-attacked and reached the outskirts of Bligny, and on a second attempt today recaptured the village and re-established the line.

The Germans suffered most severely from artillery fire, the two divisions engaged losing many killed and over 200 prisoners.

AMERICAN NEW KIND FIGHTER.

west of Chateau Thierry, where American machine gunners, fighting the first time, held the enemy a few days ago. The American infantry is now for the first time in desperate hand-to-hand fighting, and also holding its own against some of the enemy's best troops.

AMERICANS A TONIC TO ALLIES.

The performances of the American troops, beginning with the capture of Catigny in the Montdidier sector, and during the fighting on this front, have demonstrated, according to the best French military opinion, that the men from the United States are an entirely new type of fighters on European battlefields. It is believed that the constant injection of Americans into the Allied armies, which will be possible henceforth, will be a tonic that soon will tell against the enemy.

American decorations will hang from the breasts of many American machine gunners; how they threw streams of hot lead into hordes of the Crown Prince's troops, who were chanting war songs as they came forward in an effort to take the bridges at Chateau Tierry; how they withstood heavy shell fire for the first time in their lives and remained as cool as the veteran French infantrymen around them, will live in history.

The Germans at one stage of the battle gained the hills overlooking the north bank of the river. Their machine guns and their artillery observers, therefore, were able to direct a galling fire on the south bank and portions of the north bank which still were held by French colonials and two machine guns under an American lieutenant.

The enemy's position thus made the north bank untenable, and orders were given to retire to the south bank under cover of the darkness. At 9:30 o'clock at night, the French, in accordance with these plans, retired to the south bank and blew up a stone bridge. The American machine gun companies during the retirement poured a galling fire from the flanks into the areas evacuated by the retiring troops.

The enemy was now shelling the south bank most heavily and the enemy machine-gun fire was multiplied. The commander of Co. A was forced to change the position of his guns in order to secure a better field of fire. With the light Hotchkiss pieces on their shoulders he led his men into the wood farther down the river. Here they were spotted by enemy observers and thirty high-explosive shells crashed into the wood. The shelling ceased and the guns went into their positions.

IN DEAD OF NIGHT.

The French were still retiring at 10:30 p.m. It was pitch dark, except for shell bursts and the streaky flame stabs from the machine guns of both sides—the Americans were in the wood and along the south bank of the river; the Germans on the crest of the hill on the other side.

Suddenly there was an immense detonation. It was the big bridge blowing up. Then there came out of the darkness across the river, as the firing lulled, the ghostly chant of the advancing enemy. It was one of those German mass attacks where men, shoulder to shoulder, singing in guttural tones the praise of Germany and the Kaiser, blindly walk into death like fanatics.

The sort of creaky, shuffling sound their boots made as they trotted into the open road came across the river like the wailing of lost souls, converged toward the bridge and was heard by these young Americans, who strained their eyes across the river to get what machine-gun men call "the target." But it was in pitch darkness, and there was only the sound to tell them there were plenty of "targets." Every little black devil of a machine gun tore loose with hell fire. The Americans behind them, who saw their first glimpse of war about thirty hours before, fed in bullets as fast as human hands could work. And the bullets caught their "targets" on the opposite side. The "target" came on again and again, but nothing could live in that leaden hail. The enemy waves melted in the darkness.

SURROUNDED BY ENEMY.

Now come the even more thrilling experiences of the little band of Americans under the young Pittsburgh lieutenant, who had been cut off and surrounded by the enemy across the river. Even experienced soldiers could not be blamed if they had surrendered there.

At the beginning of the German mass attack a few French colonial soldiers, also cut off by the blown-up bridge, made the lieutenant understand that then it was every man for himself. The north bank was becoming a seething mass of Germans. All other forces had retired across the river. Bullets were registering on every foot of the space approaching the bridges.

The Germans chant to keep up the courage of the advancing masses. They sometimes yell to disconcert their enemies. With this ghostly chanting drawing nearer, the lieutenant and his men, with the weird yells of the Germans occasionally splitting the night had no thought of surrender. Their orders were to retreat by the main bridge and orders were orders. Picking up both guns, each man carrying his allotted piece in maneuvers, the party of thirteen started along the river for the main bridge. Reaching the vicinity of the approach they discovered their plight. The enemy was almost upon them.

CAUGHT IN OWN FIRE.

Still carrying their guns, they jumped down, taking cover under the stone parapets at the river's edge. Thus they worked their way down to the iron bridge though the Germans on the very parapet above were marching into a hail of American machine guns from the south bank. B Company did not know that a detachment had not escaped. The German attack reached its height and the enemy despite its losses, kept sweeping toward the iron bridge. Hissell and his men attempted to cross under their own fire. Three were immediately wounded. They retired, picking up their wounded.

The lieutenant knew that B Company's guns were across the bridge and he approached as near as he dared and yelled repeatedly. B Company's officers finished the story, which was narrated and corroborated by the lieutenant and others at the rest camp today.

The first B Company knew that Americans were opposite was when they heard a voice calling, "Cobey, Cobey." Cobey was the other lieutenant.

By this time the German attack had melted. Co. B's guns ceased fire long enough for Cobey to cross the bridge and lead the lieutenant and his men to safety. Throughout the remainder of the night the enemy vented his rage by heavy shelling. The next day the heavy shelling continued. The enemy had picked up his dead and wounded across the river under cover of darkness and could be seen occasionally flitting from house to house.

SNIPING CONTINUOUS.

Sniping was continuous between the French and Germans. Machine guns were silent during the day in order not to give away their positions. Nightfall was so quiet that the Americans were not able to understand such warfare. They thought all war was noisy.

However, at 9 o'clock at night the enemy made a fierce rush for the bridge. Fifteen minutes of heavy machine-gun firing squelched the attack and the shelling was resumed. The heavy bombardment continued.

The following day the sergeant in charge of one of our platoons at the iron bridge saw a German platoon of about fifty men forming on top of a hill. They made a beautiful target, according to the sergeant's story today. He and his companions believe he got them all.

The enemy brought up more artillery by night and began a terrific shelling to culminate in what appeared to be an attempted attack. The French artillery sprinkled the opposite bank of the river with a barrage which the "new" American fighters called beautiful. They thought it was less than a hundred yards away and stood up to watch it, and there wasn't any attack.

ENTICED TO DEATH.

The French engineers on this night laid a charge under the iron bridge while the American guns laid down a leaden protective barrage. When the charge was detonated the Germans rushed forward from the house to ascertain the cause of the explosion. It was here that a prearranged petrol flare lit up the vicinity like day and again American machine gunners had what they insist on calling "targets."

"I was impressed by many things," a company's captain said today. "First of all at the coolness of every man, and especially of a young Georgia theological student who had been drafted, who, on the third day complained because the Boche shells kept mussing up his gun position. Second, the attitude of those wonderful French colonial troops with us. They gave us inspiration. They said we gave them inspiration, so it was a fifty-fifty exchange. Third, that beautiful French barrage and our wonderful 'targets.'"

WAR OFFICE STATEMENTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, June 8.—New progress was made by the French last night in the region between the Marne and the Ourcq, northwest of Chateau Thierry, the War Office announced today.

In this sector French troops have pushed their way through Chezy to its eastern outskirts, and have reached the western edge of Dammard village.

In the district south of Veuilly-La Poterie the Germans made two violent attacks along the Bouresches-Le Thiolet front. The enemy was repulsed with heavy losses in each case.

"South of the Aisne there was great artillery activity, notably in the region of Faverolles. Southeast of Ambleny the French improved their positions during the night. South of the Ourcq they continued their pressure and realized new progress.

"The French have carried their lines as far as the western outskirts of Dammard and east of Chezy, and more than a kilometer north of Veuilly-La Poterie. They have taken about fifty prisoners.

"Further south the Germans made two violent attacks against positions reconquered by the French on the front from Bouresches to Le Thiolet. The French broke these assaults, and the enemy suffered heavy losses without obtaining an advantage.

"On the rest of the front the night was comparatively calm."

Heavy counter attacks launched by the Germans around Chezy and Dammard, to the northwest of Chateau Thierry, broke down under the French guns, according to the War Office tonight. The enemy suffered serious losses.

The statement says:

"There was quite lively artillery action in the neighborhood of Hangard-en-Santerre, between the Oise and the Aisne and south of the Aisne. We continued our progress in the region of Veuilly-La Poterie and Bussaires and penetrated the village of Bjop.

"The enemy tried to check the advance which we made yesterday at Chezy and Dammard, launching violent counter-attacks in this region. Our troops broke down all of the attacks of the enemy, whose losses were heavy. We have maintained all our gains.

"Calm prevailed everywhere else.

"Eastern theater, June 7: Near Lake Butkove, British troops dispersed a Bulgarian reconnaissance. On the front of Dotran-Srka-Di-Legen the enemy artillery carried out a sustained fire on our positions. In the region of Cerna and Monastir bad weather hindered operations."

AMERICAN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—A continuation of Gen. Pershing's communique of yesterday made public today said:

"Section B. Lieut. William J. Flannery, infantry, received the Croix de Guerre on the afternoon of June 5 for swimming the Marne on June 3 and bringing back a wounded French soldier."

A communique issued last night reads:

"West and northwest of Chateau Thierry we made minor readjustments of our lines, involving several advances, in the course of which we inflicted severe losses and took prisoners, among them being one officer and twenty-five unwounded men. Our advance was made in conjunction with French troops on our left.

"Artillery on both sides was active at points held by our troops in Picardy, on the Marne front, in the Woevre and in Lorraine.

"In Picardy we took prisoners in the course of a raid."

The exploit of Lieut. Flannery, whose home is in Pittsburgh, was reported in press dispatches from the American front on June 6. The dispatches stated Flannery was the first American to receive the French War Cross for bravery in the present battle on the Marne.

BRITISH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, June 8.—British troops took prisoners and inflicted casualties in raiding and patrol actions along the northern part of the front last night, the War Office announced today. The statement reads:

"We captured a few prisoners last night in a successful raid in the neighborhood of Hulluch. Our patrols inflicted casualties on the enemy in the Strazeele sector and captured a machine gun.

"The hostile artillery has been active north of Albert and southeast of Arras."

Field Marshal Haig's report from British headquarters tonight follows:

"We raided the enemy's trenches last night south of Arras and inflicted casualties on his garrison.

"Early this morning French troops carried out a successful minor enterprise east of Dickebusch Lake and captured forty-seven prisoners."

LONDON, June 7.—The British official communication concerning aerial operations says:

"Our airmen took advantage of the fine weather on the British front Thursday to accomplish much useful work in reconnaissance and photography. Together with our observation balloons they ranged our guns on many hostile batteries.

"In fighting fourteen German machines were destroyed and eight others were driven down out of control. Several observation balloons were destroyed by our airmen, and another hostile airplane was forced to descend by our anti-aircraft arms.

"During the day we dropped twenty-eight tons of bombs and a further eleven tons in the course of the following night. Among the targets attacked were Valenciennes, Le Cateau, Busigny and the St. Quentin railway station.

"We lost one machine during the day."

Aerial operations by the British are described in an official statement issued tonight as follows:

"In the air a good deal of observation and photographic work was carried out by us on June 7. Bombing was active on both sides. We dropped twenty-three tons of bombs on railway junctions, airdromes and dumps beyond the German lines.

"Twelve machines were brought down by our airmen and seven were driven down out of control. We lost three machines.

"On the night of June 7-8 no flying was possible."

ITALIAN.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME, June 7.—The official statement issued by the Italian War Department today says:

"On the front of Mont di Val Bella one of our assault parties broke into the enemy trenches, capturing more than fifty prisoners, six machine guns and a large quantity of material. French detachments took twenty-one prisoners in a surprise attack in the Sisemol lines. Enemy patrols were driven back in the Vallarsa Valley, the Posina Valley, on the slopes of Col Caprile and at Spinonia Capo Sile.

"Five tons of bombs were dropped on enemy aviation camps on the Venetian plain, the Meso-Corona railway station and marching columns on the Kuerofeltne road. At Asiago two enemy advances failed."

GERMAN.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN (via London) June 8.—Attacks by Allied troops around Chateau Thierry and counter-attacks on the Ardre River resulted in "unimportant gains" of territory, according to the official report from general headquarters today.

"Army of Crown Prince Rupprecht: Artillery firing and reconnoitering engagements revived intermittently.

"Army of the German Crown Prince: Renewed enemy attacks northwest of Chateau Thierry and counter-attacks to recover the line lost on the Ardre only brought him unimportant gains of territory. Several attacks by French, American and British regiments broke down with heavy losses.

"On the rest of the front the situation is unchanged."

The supplementary official communication issued by general headquarters tonight says that the situation is unchanged on the battle front.

GERMANS FORCED FROM LINE THREATENING LOCRE

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 8.—Locre Hospice, which the Germans captured on Wednesday night, was retaken by the French yesterday. They battled their way to this much-contested position and completely re-established their original line.

The French have thus removed a more or less serious threat to the village of Locre, which itself is an important defense for Montrouge and other hills lying immediately to the west. The hospice lies only about 500 yards southeast of Locre and is on rising ground, which is but slightly lower than the site of the village.

The enemy has long coveted Locre and retention of the hospice would give him a good jumping-off place for another assault in the long list which he has delivered against the village.

There were heavy bursts of shelling from German guns at various points along the British front last night, but no unusual operations have been reported.

BRITISH CONVOY SAVES AMERICAN TROOPSHIP.

ATTACKED BY ENEMY SUBMARINES IN WAR ZONE, DESTROYERS WORK FAST.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Thursday, June 6.—German submarines were foiled in their attempts against a convoy, which included ships carrying American troops and American Red Cross workers, according to the Reverend Father Joseph Wareing, one of the Red Cross party, who arrived in London yesterday. The protecting destroyers got into action quickly on two occasions last Sunday, but Mr. Wareing did not know whether any submarines had been sunk.

To the Associated Press, Reverend Father Wareing, who had a trying experience following the torpedoing of the steamer Laconia in February, 1917, said:

"After we reached the danger zone our convoy was attacked by German submarines and for a few minutes I thought I was in for another experience of the same kind as I had on the Laconia. The exact number of the enemy U-boats was not determined, but at least two were seen.

DESTROYERS GET BUSY.

"We had a lively escort of British destroyers, however, and they were on the trail of the periscope like a flash. Guns and depth charges began popping like giant firecrackers on the Fourth of July. Fifteen depth charges were dropped into the nest of German submarines. Whether any submarines were sunk I cannot say, for we were on a fast ship and enveloped in smoke, but I know we did not lose a single ship. Our convoy carried a large number of American troops—I cannot tell you how many.

"When the first alarm was sounded for the passengers to go to their lifeboat stations late on Sunday afternoon, I was in my stateroom. Word was passed around that enemy submarines had been sighted. I had no sooner reached my station than depth charges began to explode, shaking our ship. After a few minutes of anxious waiting at the lifeboat stations we received the signal, 'The enemy has been beaten off.'

NERVES OF STEEL.

"Discipline on board was superb. The troops behaved as if a submarine attack was part of the everyday routine and there was not the slightest flurry anywhere on board. For coolness in time of emergency I do not think you can beat these young Americans. Their nerves are like steel.

"Two hours later on the same day while I was preparing for dinner another alarm was sounded and almost simultaneously the destroyers began dropping depth charges. One landed within about 500 yards of our ship and gave it a good shaking.

"At no time during the attack did I see a periscope or the track of a torpedo.

"When the first alarm was sounded, I have to admit, I felt a certain nervousness, for the alarm bell brought back to my mind my Laconia experience when I suffered considerably from exposure."

WHISTLES FORBIDDEN WHILE TROOPS MOVE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—Except for the giving of proper and necessary signals, locomotive whistles on the Pennsylvania Railroad eastern lines are forbidden to be blown during the movements of troop trains.

An order to this effect, issued today by Elisha Lee, Federal manager, was in compliance with the desires of military authorities.

Shop whistles must also cease the practice of saluting the troops.

VICTORIA CROSS TO A BRAVE SERGEANT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, June 8 (via Ottawa.)—Announcement of the reward of three Victoria crosses, including one to Sergt. Albert Mountain, West Yorks, is made in the official gazette. Mountain's company was compelled to fall back before the advancing enemy mass. Volunteers for a counter-attack were being called when Mountain and ten men stepped forward. He advanced on the flank with a Lewis machine-gun and enfiladed an enemy patrol, of which about 100 were killed. Mountain rallied and organized the party for defense and covered the retirement of the rest of the company. With one noncommissioned officer and four men he successfully held at bay 600 Germans for half an hour.

Later he took command of a flank post and held on for twenty-seven hours until finally surrounded. Mountain was one of the few who managed to fight their way back.

The American artillery was active all night in the Belleau Wood sector.

The fire increased in intensity at 4 o'clock this morning, when the Americans attacked in the southern part of the wood, taking prisoners and a number of machine guns. The battle was still raging here this afternoon.

German prisoners report that new German troops are moving up in the rear of the American sector on this front.

The enemy artillery fire is increasing, indicating that the Germans are bringing up additional big guns.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday, June 7.—Reports of recent heavy German train movements from the direction of Metz toward the St. Mihiel salient have aroused discussion in the American Expeditionary Forces as to whether the enemy is planning an assault in the Woevre.

HUNDRED CHURCHES RAZED IN SOISSONS.

BISHOP SAYS AT LEAST 100 OTHERS WERE STRIPPED BY THE GERMANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Friday, June 7.—The Bishop of Soissons, who is now in Paris, today described the havoc wrought in the bishopric of Soissons during the recent offensive of the Germans. He said 100 churches had been razed to the ground by the Germans and that at least 100 others had been pillaged and partially demolished. The famous cathedral in Soissons suffered severely.

The bishop added that the Germens knew neither faith nor law; they knew nothing but war and pillage. They were methodically stripping and carrying away everything, he said.

The bishop also asserted that women, children and old men had been brutally murdered by German aviators, who flew over and with their machine guns fired upon long lines of refugees on country roads.

CHECKERBOARD ON AMERICAN

They Have Put the Kaise[illegible] Dangerous [illegible]

BY HARRY CAR[illegible]

WELL, Lafayette, what do you think of them?

Are those American boys, dead on the heights of Chateau Thierry, worthy to be remembered with your gallant young Frenchmen who laid down their lives for America?

Leaving all the hurrahs out of it, and getting down to cold military facts, the battle of the American marines at Chateau Thierry is a most astonishing performance.

It is a poor compliment to our boys to think of their foes as ignorant and cowardly Germans. They were neither ignorant nor cowardly, but specially selected, war trained veterans. It was the flower of European soldiery that our boys had to go up against.

Although the term "shock troops" has come to be used about as loosely as "uhlan" was the first year of the war, still there seems to be a real foundation for the belief that our boys had to charge against shock troops—the pick and elite of the Kaiser's army. These German soldiers, used in this latest advance, have proven their worth and courage on a hundred battlefields. But, according to all accounts, our boys went through them like a hobo through a mince pie.

When we consider that these German veterans must have heavily outnumbered our green, inexperienced troops, the feat of the marines becomes next door to miraculous.

Certainly, any American who can think of Chateau Thierry without a queer glow stealing down into the region of his heart ought to apply for membership in the I.W.W.

Even in our pardonable pride we will not, however, speak of the repulse of the Germans as an "American victory." We should never forget that, with our boys in this terrible battle fought Frenchmen and Britishers, not a whit less gallant and courageous.

Nevertheless, I think we can feel sure that the German defeat has had a special significance on account of the American troops.

In his recent book "Deductions from the World War," Lieut.-Gen. Baron von Freytag Loringhoven of the German General Staff said, "Notwithstanding the power and effectiveness of modern weapons, now as ever, it is the moral element that is finally decisive in war."

THE EFFECT.

The moral effect of the defeat of the finest troops of which Prussia could boast by these inexperienced American youngsters will be sweeping and important.

The Germans have always professed to have a contemptuous opinion of American soldiers. They said that no lessons were to be had from our great Civil War because it was nothing but a scuffle between armed mobs. One night in Berlin I heard a famous German war correspondent telling a German officer about some of the military mistakes of our Spanish-American war; and he laughed until the tears ran down his face.

They could not imagine that men could be modest and simple in their manners and still be dangerous; so the American boys that they saw from time to time in Germany did not impress them as military material.

I imagine that, if we could see a composite photograph of the Americans who fought at Chateau Thierry, the net product would be an amiable-looking boy, very stocky around the shoulders, with a clean skin and quick eager eyes. There isn't a shade of cruelty in his character. He doesn't like to hurt things.

One night in Berlin [illegible] a famous German war correspondent telling a German officer [illegible] some of the military mistakes [illegible] Spanish-American war; and [illegible] laughed until the tears ran down [illegible].

They could not imagine that men [illegible] modest and simple in their [illegible] and still be dangerous; so [illegible] American boys that they saw [illegible] time to time in Germany did [illegible] impress them as military ma-[illegible]

[illegible] that, if we could see a [illegible] photograph of the American [illegible] fought at Chateau Thierry, [illegible] product would be an amiable [illegible] boy, very stocky around the [illegible] with a clean skin and [illegible] eyes. There isn't a [illegible] of cruelty in his character. [illegible] like to hurt things.

It is extraordinary to look back over this war and see with what uniformity the Germans have failed to judge men. They understand engines of war; but they seem utterly lacking in the ability to understand men. The estimation of men requires imagination and sympathy. These two qualities are notably lacking in the analytical German mind.

Because he is naturally slow to anger, the German thought this American boy of ours wouldn't fight. The arrogant Prussian lieutenant did not look at him as having any fight in his anatomy. A deeper examination would have shown him that the reason the American is an amiable creature is because all his school boy games are rough, fighting games. He has learned to fight for fun; to take a punch with a grin.

The American game of football is without doubt the greatest training for battle that has ever been devised.

KRIEGSPIEL.

It is characteristic that the Germans should have a war game that is played in a house. Kriegspiel is more like a laboratory experiment than a game, approximating as it does all the conditions of real war. In another way, American football is as near to the conditions of modern battle as kriegspiel. Only you do it yourself instead of moving blocks of wood on a board.

The American boy had had a war training that the Germans little realized. Not only is football fought on the same lines of strategy as battles; but football teaches the American boy how to think in the midst of a scuffle.

There is perhaps one other element in the character of the American boy with which the Germans forgot to reckon. As a heritage from the pioneer days when every man was more or less his own law, the American boy has been taught to consider himself the protector of the weak and helpless. To see a bully torturing defenseless women and children, starts something going inside of him. When the dander rises, look out for this amiable, happy-go-lucky lad! The madder he gets the more coolly he thinks. The lessons of his football field strategy come surging back to him and he goes whooping across No Man's Land with his automatic rifle sputtering and his bayonet gleaming, a picture of cool rage, a rage that looks out of keen, shrewd eyes.

None of us can be sure what kind of showing the American boy would have made had he been called upon to stand hip deep in water in the trenches, month on end, without fighting. But the Lord has been good to him. He has been called into the mix-up just when it was getting to be his kind of a fight.

For the vivid qualities of headlong dash, the American boy is the equal of any soldier ever seen on a battlefield.

THE SHOCK OF IT.

Now the importance of all this to the present situation is this: The German General Staff has without doubt placed their faith in the belief that the American army now being sent across could not be of the slightest use against trained German troops for at least a year. That green troops of very slight experience can be hurled into a fight like this and win it must be an eye opener.

They must be appalled by the fact that, not only can America place an almost unlimited number of troops into the field, but they will be able to hold their own with very short training. The realization of that fact certainly wipes away the last hope that the Germans have of eventual victory.

It is not next year that America is to fight, it is right now.

This discovery about the American boys is not the only thing that affects the breakfast appetite of the Crown Prince. The Allies have beaten the Germans at Chateau Thierry with valuable assistance from the Germans themselves.

THE CROWN PRINCE'S PLIGHT.

The Crown Prince's army is in a bad fix. At the risk of repetition, it may be permissible to again remind the reader of the objective of this Rheims-Soissons drive.

Having been stopped at Ypres and Amiens by the pouring in of French reserves, the Kaiser saw that before going further, he must make it impossible for the Allies to continue shifting troops back and forth along the line.

This necessity weighed upon the Germans with the more force, because, for the first time in the course of the war, the Kaiser found himself at a disadvantage in moving troops.

Although on the inside of the circle, as usual, the Germans had advanced into an utterly devastated country where railroads had been destroyed. The Allies, on the other hand, had fallen back onto a network of railroad lines that improved their mobility.

To obliterate this advantage, it was absolutely necessary for the Germans to plunge through the line and break up this system of railroad communication.

The most likely point at which to accomplish this was at Amiens. But a renewal of the advance upon Amiens was to place the Germans in great danger of a flanking movement from the strategic triangle at the points of which are Compiegne, Soissons and Noyon. Upon the high land in this triangle were troops which stood ready to pounce upon any German expedition headed toward Paris.

Military campaigns, like the undertakings of civil life, are not wholly designed for a single purpose. We buy an automobile to please the family; but we hope also thereby to spite our loving neighbor.

Just so, the Kaiser had more than one object in the Rheims-Soissons campaign. By cutting in behind the Soissons triangle, he hoped to get rid of the French army on the flank of his Amiens campaign, but he also had other objectives.

The plan was to go crashing down to the Marne, use that river as a pivot, turn westward and proceed to the forest of Compiegne.

This achieved, the Kaiser would have a strong strategic position to safeguard his flank in the event of a swoop for Paris, a safeguard for his Amiens attack, in the event that after capturing that city, he might find it desirable to swing around toward the north.

The importance of this strategic position that he hoped for between the two ends of the Allied army cannot be overestimated.

The first part of the offensive in the Rheims-Soissons sector proceeded swimmingly. As at the beginning of the March offensive, the Germans broke through by concentrating an overpowering number of men.

At San Quentin we know that the Germans brought up seventy-nine divisions to a sector supposed to be guarded by seventeen. We can assume that a like preponderance of numbers was concentrated at the opening of this drive.

NO UMBRELLA.

The Crown Prince broke down all opposition and drove down to the Marne. His advance was the shape of a deep pocket. Unfortunately for him, the pocket was lined with foes.

Having driven down between two points of high ground—the heights of Rheims and the heights south of Soissons, the Crown Prince found himself unable to execute the umbrella-opening movement with which the Germans usually follow these line bucks.

So he plunged on until he rested on the Marne. Not daring to stretch this pocket any deeper, he turned westward and tried to fight his way on toward the forest of Compiegne, hoping thereby to cut in south of the Soissons triangle and force the Allies to abandon it.

The trouble was that, when he got down to the bottom of the pocket, he found himself fighting three battles at once: one to the south on the Marne line; one to the east on the Dormans-Rheims line, and the most violent on the Chateau Thierry-Soissons line.

As they were also fighting all the way down on both sides of the pocket, this triple battle at the bottom of the pocket called for a great number of men.

The German prisoners are reported to be half starved. This is probably due to the fact that the Crown Prince has been rushing in men to the bottom of the pocket so rapidly that the supply trains have been crowded off the roads.

What the Crown Prince undertook was a most difficult maneuver in any event. It could be accomplished only by going through with a whoop before the Allies could catch their breath. Unhappily for him, the Allies caught their breath.

TRAPPED.

Apparently he can't fight his way any further. He certainly can't back out; that is a cinch. The only way to get the Crown Prince out of this predicament is to start a fight somewhere else to relieve the pressure.

It was on the cards that, should the Germans manage to drive a wedge in between the ends of the Allied army, they would first turn on the English and drive them into the Channel. They would next herd the French back against the Lorraine front and send a new force charging against them from Verdun or St. Mihiel, thus catching them between two fires.

It looks as though the Germans might be obliged to launch this St. Mihiel attack ahead of time in order to relieve the pressure upon the young man in the pocket.

We cannot deny the possibility that this might develop into a very dangerous maneuver for the Allies.

Space forbids a discussion of the submarine activity off New York other than to say that it is partly for political purposes.

The fact that the American transports continue to cross the sea in safety has no doubt made a bad impression in Germany, where the submarine campaign is a much quarreled over question anyhow. One reason for this activity was to show the home people that the Allies did not bottle up the subs by the raids at Ostend and Zeebrugge. To my way of thinking, it is an indication that more harm was done at those two places than we ourselves have dreamed of. The German subs operating off New York very likely have a secret base on the Mexican coast.

TROOPS FORGET OLD RIVALRIES.

Artillery and Infantry Now Cheering Each Other.

American Negroes Having the Time of Their Lives.

No Jim Crow Cars in France, Says Senegambian.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

AMERICAN FRONT, May 8.—All rivalries except those which come from a desire to be the first at the throat of the Teutons are wiped out in the trenches.

In proof of this I saw something today that one wouldn't witness in forty years' travel among the cantonments of the United States.

The rivalry between artillery and infantry is hereditary. It is one of the traditions of the army. And while healthy rivalry promotes efficiency, it sometimes borders on animosity. The artilleryman makes no attempt to disguise his contempt for the "doughboy," while the infantry characterizes the artillery as sort of a "cushy" job, and which only smells the smoke of battle when it happens to be blown in that direction.

In reality, each is of equal importance, and either would be comparatively useless without the coordination of the other.

Still that doesn't prevent them from having about as much regard for one another as a sophomore for a freshman, or vice versa.

AN INCIDENT.

On one of the roads leading to the front, a regiment of artillery had pulled up for a few minutes. There was a rumble of motors over a near-by hill, and soon a line of motor lorries came over the brow of this rise. Each was packed with men in khaki wearing metal war bonnets.

As they approached closer, they were recognized.

"Hell, fellows, that's our doughboys, and they are on their way to the trenches," said a big artilleryman seated on a caisson, looking up from the cigarette which he was rolling, and there was about the nearest thing to real affection in his voice that will ever roll from the lips of a profane artilleryman, discussing doughboys.

"Damned if it isn't," replied half a dozen buck privates in chorus. "Let's give 'em a cheer when they go by."

And it was some cheer, and the doughboys came right back with one for the artillery.

From that minute it was the field against Germany—doughboy and ammunition buster united to lick the common enemy.

NEGRO TROOPS.

Negro troops with the American Expeditionary Force are having the time of their lives.

For many of them it is the first time that they have been outside the realm of chicken gumbo, 'possum, corn pone and sweet "taters," while some had hardly been beyond the boundaries of the plantations of their forefathers. France to them has been some sort of a vague, dreamland, very beautiful and overrun with some sort of savages.

Incidentally, they are showing themselves to be excellent soldiers, willing and fearless, as the American negro has shown himself to be in other wars when properly officered.

The rigors of modern warfare and the rather inclement winter and spring, while lessening somewhat their exuberance, have not served to dull their droll, native humor and they seem at times to radiate the soft, mellow sunshine of the land from which they came.

A regiment of them were being hurled through France on a troop train. Now there is nothing de luxe about the average troop train. It is not equipped with buffets, compartments or observation cars. It is built for service, strength and speed rather than comfort.

NO JIM CROW CARS.

"Ah ain't seen no Jim Crow cahs in France, so Ah rekon they judge a man by the cullah of his heart rathah than the kinks in his haih, ovah heah," remarked a long Senegambian with a burnt sienna complexion, as he tried to find room for his attenuated legs. "But Ah ain't suah that Ah hain't seen Jim Crow cahs that wah excrutiatingly comfotable beside dis heah French flivvah."

Somewhere along the line of communications a colored soldier, displaying a certain alertness that indicated Texas breeding, where the negroes are not quite as dreamy as those of Alabam and Louisan, walked into the arms of a sentry.

"What in blazes are you doing out here in the wilderness?" demanded the sentry. "Where are you headed for? Where is your regiment?"

A WANDERER.

"Well, Ah is on mah way, but Ah ain't zatly shuah as to wheah Ah is going," replied the lost soldier with a wide grin, although he was shivering with cold and rain. "As foh mah regiment Ah doan know any moah whar it is than it does mah present situation in life. Ah rekon though dat regiment am somewheah in France. Dat's wheah it wah supposed to be when Ah become disjointed from it."

"Where did you leave the regiment; what town?" demanded the sentry.

"Ah slipped off de train to get mahse'f a platter of ragout at one of des heah Red Cross chop suey places at de daypo, and when Ah cames back der ain't no moh train der dan a jack rabbit. As to deah name of de town Ah can't pronounciate it. Neah as Ah can discribe it de name of dat town sounds like three explosions of de mouf an' a couple of hyphens."

The sentry decided that it was no use, and sent him to the nearest camp until his unit could be located.

"A HOMIN' PIGE'N."

Another soldier from the section of sun, song and happy shiftlessness, was asked how he liked France and if he ever yearned for the banks of the Mississippi, where in the happy days of yore he had angled for the succulent river catfish.

"Well, sah, Ah ain't specially qualified to say what Ah thinks of France, as Ah ain't seen none 'cept the muddy side of it," he said, thoughtfully scratching his kinky thatch. "Ah spose th' dry side of it am a good place to live. As for thinkin' 'bout that ole Mississippi rivah, with its yaller water and yaller sunshine and yaller malaria, say, Mistah, when dis wah am over, if Ah had feathas instead of haih you'd say, 'Dere goes a homin' pigen.' "

Now that the weather has turned warmer, and the softness of approaching summer is in the air, the negro troops are beginning to thaw out and their spirits are going up with the thermometer. In another month they will be at their best. Open warfare appeals to them more than the comparative cramped trench actions. Much as they may yearn for the South with its indolent life, not one of them cares to go home until he can take with him evidence that he has accounted for one German over here where a man is judged more by the color of his heart than of his hide.

Baldness

—Is rapidly increasing — says Prof. John H. Austin, Chicago's bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of 39 years' practice—and is in many, many cases directly or indirectly caused by—

Alopecia Pityrodes—

—A very common scalp trouble.

—It starts with a scaling of the scalp, sometimes slight, called "dandruff," sometimes abundant—producing thick, grayish-white, dry or greasy scales—which leads to falling of the hair.

—At first, when the hair starts to fall, it is hardly noticeable, but as this ailment, "Alopecia Pityrodes," becomes more deeply seated, and the germs multiply, as they always do, the falling of the hair increases rapidly, and in time the top of the head becomes entirely bald. Both men and women of all ages of life are subject to Alopecia Pityrodes, but particularly those between the ages of 20 and 35 years.

—Prof. Austin, who is now at Hamburger's, says that people who are at all troubled with any kind of hair and scalp trouble, such as

—Itching Scalp
—Falling Hair
—Excessively Oily Hair
—Dry and Brittle Hair
—Dandruff
—Split Hair
—Gray or Faded Hair

—Should have their hair examined at once under his powerful microscope.

—Prof. Austin says that the use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonics, vaseline and elixirs is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

—During the past three years Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp of Hamburger's patrons—and they enthusiastically appreciate this free service.

—Prof. Austin invites both men and women to take advantage of the FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATIONS of the hair and scalp this week in his private office on the Second Floor of Hamburger's. Hours, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4.

New Life Vibrator
HAMILTON-BEACH MFG. CO. RACINE, WISCONSIN

"Vibration Week"
at The Owl Drug Stores

During the week beginning Monday, June 10th, the Owl Drug Stores will have special displays and demonstrations of the famous and most successful

New Life Vibrator
For Health and Beauty

The desire for vibration or massage in case of pain of any kind is instinctive in mankind. When you bruise yourself, or have a toothache or a twinge of rheumatism, the first thing you unconsciously do is to rub the affected part. NEW LIFE Vibration is merely this same rubbing or massaging reduced to scientific perfection. It induces a healthful flow of fresh blood to that part of the body immediately under its influence and tones up the entire system thus aiding nature in her efforts to relieve pain and rebuild wasted tissues.

If the free circulation of the blood is obstructed the toxins or poisonous substances which are usually carried off by the blood are congested and cause pain. A few minutes' application of the NEW LIFE Vibrator breaks up these obstructions, and stimulates the flow of blood which causes the disease breeding toxins to be washed away.

The same principle is applied in facial massage. Vibration stimulates blood action in the tiny veins and produces the natural health glow.

Special personal demonstrations every day this week.

DEFEND PARIS, PEOPLE PLEAD.

Abandonment of Capital is Held Impossible.

Committee Formed to Study Method of Defense.

Protection of Citizens Under Consideration.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, June 8.—In an article in the Matin dealing with the recent appointment of the Paris Committee of Defense, Frederick Brunet, a Socialist Deputy, says:

"By another drive made without regard to sacrifice, the Germans, if they did not enter Paris, perhaps could approach near enough to hold the capital under the fire of long-range guns, not as now for an intermittent bombardment, but for methodical, permanent fire.

"Such conditions would render industrial life impossible and the government's will to resist must not be influenced by the fear of sacrificing the lives of noncombatants or by fear of the consequences which a cessation of the output of the munition factories surrounding the capital would entail."

APPROVES COMMITTEE.

M. Brunet highly approves the formation of the committee. "Even the most unlikely, the most extreme possibilities ought to be considered," he says, "until American contingents can turn the scale of effectives in our favor. Although I am convinced that our armies will keep the enemy far enough from the capital to prevent the horrors of an intensive bombardment, all measures should be taken to fortify the defense and insure the safety of the aged and the children.

"Paris cannot be abandoned. It must be defended with energy, for it is a supreme retreat where the fate of the country might be decided, and everything ought to be subordinated to its preservation. So long as Germany seeks to impose domination by force no peace is possible and but one duty is imposed upon us—to fight to conquer."

The committee in question, whose duty it is to defend the Paris area, will not only study plans to meet the threat of invasion, which is regarded as improbable, but will deal with the problems caused by night air raids and the long-range bombardment, says a Havas Agency review of the committee's work, which summarizes the newspaper comment.

The committee also will take into consideration the question of the morale of the population with the confident assumption that while the enemy can strike at, he cannot break down the resolution or courage of the people.

This morning the long-range bombardment of the Paris region was resumed.

PERSHING URGES MEN TO WRITE RELATIVES.

KEEP UP CORRESPONDENCE WITH HOME FOLKS IS ORDER OF GENERAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The War Department today made public a general order issued by Gen. Pershing encouraging members of the American Expeditionary Forces to keep up correspondence with their relatives and friends at home. One of the greatest arguments for a constant flow of letters between France and America, Gen. Pershing said, was that it relieves much distress and anxiety on the part of relatives and friends at home.

Gen. Pershing's order said:

"1. Duty to one's country does not end on the parade ground, nor even on the battlefield, but consists in doing everything in one's power to help win the war. To write home frequently and regularly, to keep in constant touch with family and friends is one of the soldier's most important duties. Mothers and fathers will suffer if they do not hear often from sons fighting in France. In the present large companies it is not possible for officers to write letters for their men and every man must do it for himself.

"2. When no letters are received from overseas the greatest distress is caused to those at home. They either feel that letters have been written, but lost en route, or else they imagine all sorts of evils, such as sickness, wounds, even death. Both are bad for the active militant spirit which every true American man and woman must possess if our army is to obtain the real victory that all so earnestly desire.

"3. Everyone in the United States who has a son or brother in the American Army Expeditionary Forces is proud of him, is constantly thinking of him, is anxious to hear from him. Letters home will bring many letters in reply and the closer home ties will have potent influence for good both in France and in the United States. All officers should realize this fact and both by encouraging their men and providing them with proper facilities, do everything in their power to interest them in this vital question of writing home."

WEATHER ELSEWHERE.

Chicago Wakes Up to a Hangover of Low Temperatures, But They Rise.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, June 8.—For a time this afternoon things were dark and gloomy in Chicago, but this was once that the weather man could not be blamed. Until the eclipse took place, the sun shone as brightly as any one could wish and there was an upward trend in the temperature that also made for improvement. The highest temperature recorded today was 78 and the lowest, 55, was recorded before daylight and was in the nature of a hang-over from yesterday.

DRAFT REGISTRANTS MAY ENLIST IN NAVY.

MARINES ALSO OPEN TO THOSE WHOSE NUMBER IS NOT IN CURRENT QUOTA.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 8.—Draft registrants whose serial number does not bring them within the current quota may enlist in the navy or the Marine Corps, according to a telegram Gov. Stephens received today from Provost-Marshal-General Crowder.

Persons with deferred classifications who desire to enlist in either branch must first be reclassified and placed in class 1; then they will be allowed to enlist, provided their number does not place them within the current quota, the telegram said.

Announcement that draft registrants of all classifications would be permitted to enter the aviation sections of the Army Signal Corps by voluntary induction through their local boards beginning Monday for training at Mather aviation field, near here, was made today by Capt. A. D. Penney, acting commandant in charge of the training camp. He said he had received instructions from Washington to that effect.

Preference will be given registrants from Sacramento, Capt. Penney said, but men probably will be drawn from the territory between Redding and Fresno.

An official inspection of Mather field has been made by Capt. W. P. Willetts, member of the staff of directors of the United States military aeronautics, who was said to have expressed satisfaction over the progress made in preparing the field for actual training.

GERMANS TORTURE BRITISH TO DEATH.

FORTY PRISONERS MURDERED SLOWLY AS ALLEGED RETALIATION.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, June 7.—The slow murder of forty British prisoners sent by the Germans to work under fire on the Russian front is related by a member of the Royal Navy Division, who has just reached England after escaping from Germany.

It had been decided, he said, that out of a party of 500 British prisoners, thirty-six should die in consequence of an allegation that thirty-six German prisoners had been murdered by their British sentries. The men were formed into groups of three, and the misdeed of any individual was visited upon all three men in the group.

They were taken from working parties at the end of the day, made to mount on a block, and then tied to a hole. The block afterwards was kicked away, leaving the men suspended with their feet a little off the ground. In this position they were kept for two and a half hours each night for fourteen nights in intense cold. Forty men died under the treatment.

NEW GROUND TRAINING SCHOOL FOR AVIATORS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, June 8.—Lieut. J. C. Monfort has arrived here, it was announced today, to open a school for naval student flight officers at the naval training camp on the University of Washington campus.

Men will be sent here from every State west of the Rocky Mountains to receive ground training as naval aviators. Later, they will go to San Diego for flight work.

WAR POSITIONS FOR PROFESSIONAL MEN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—To meet an immediate need for engineers, the War Department announced tonight that 2000 professional men were wanted. They will be selected by a special board of examiners, commissioned as first lieutenants and captains, sent to camps in Virginia, and will receive officers' pay while going through a short training course.

Qualified men between 36 and 42 years of age are invited to apply now and await orders to appear before the examining board in one of the thirty-three cities of the United States it will visit shortly. No man of draft age will be considered.

Gen. March's Daughter Married.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The marriage of Miss Josephine March, daughter of Gen. Peyton C. March, Acting Chief of Staff of the United States Army, to Maj. Joseph M. Swing of Newark, N. J., Field Artillery, United States army, took place in St. Margaret's Church here today.

Snakes in Grass.

TREASON PLOT COUNTRY-WIDE.

National Crusade Begun to Trap All Spies.

Hundreds of Arrests Expected in Many Cities.

New York Indictments Held Only Beginning.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—The indictment of two German spies and five persons plotting treason against the United States in the Federal District Court on Friday is only the beginning of a nation-wide crusade, which will result in the arrest and indictment of hundreds of persons who have considered themselves immune. This information was given today by a Federal authority who knows of the complete evidence gathered against these people.

Complete evidence of the treasonable plans of these persons, not only in New York, but in Chicago, Boston and other large cities, are being obtained by the Department of Justice.

One person referred to in the indictments against the spies and traitors is a mysterious man, who used the alias, "Henry Hurley." He maintained an establishment on Riverside drive, which was used frequently as a meeting place by Mme. Victorica, Karl Rodiger and Jeremiah O'Leary. So far the authorities have been unable to ascertain his correct address. They know that he was in the confidence of the plotters because John T. Ryan, the fugitive Buffalo attorney, brought them to his home, and, according to certain witnesses, vouched for him as a man to be trusted.

MYSTERIOUS "BIG MAN."

Much mystery surrounds the part played by Willard Robinson in the plot. He loomed up today as the real big man, and may have been the master of intrigue who directed the others. He was arrested near the home of Dr. Daniel O'Leary, a brother of the fugitive editor of Bull, near Newburg, N. Y. The Federal authorities are said to have been more anxious to apprehend him than Jeremiah O'Leary. However, nothing could be learned as to the extent of his activities.

He has been working in various parts of the country in humble positions, but always managed to keep in communication with the radical Irish leaders. He was arrested by Agents Bishoff and Tatem of the Department of Justice after they had traced his movements in various parts of the State for a week.

When Dudley Field Malone returned to the city from Washington today and learned that he had been assigned to defend Mme. Victorica by Judge Hand, he issued the following statement:

"I trust that it is not true that I have been assigned as counsel to Mme. Victorica, but if so, I shall refuse under any circumstances to represent her or any other spy or agent of the German government.

AMERICAN FIRST.

"I have already been thanked by Atty.-Gen. Gregory, United States Attorney Caffey and Capt. Hull of the Alien Enemy Bureau for valuable assistance to the government in this case to get the real truth of the conspiracy.

"I am as anxious as any man of Irish blood to see Ireland win her freedom, but I have never belonged to any Irish societies and have always considered it the duty of every American to give his brains and energy to the problems of the United States. Any American who, even for the purpose of helping Ireland, dares to treat with Germany or her agents is a traitor to this country and the cause of the Allies."

After receiving formal notice of the refusal of Mr. Malone to act as counsel for Mme. Victorica, Judge Hand will assign counsel early this week.

Atty.-Gen. Gregory today gave out a statement in Washington explaining that all the evidence against the plotters was obtained in America. He denied that any of the evidence had been submitted to another foreign government.

TO RUSH TRIAL.

Francis Caffey, the United States Attorney, yesterday held a conference with Mr. Gregory concerning the trial of the persons under indictment. It is understood that the cases will be rushed, and if O'Leary and Ryan are not apprehended when the case is called for trial, the others will be tried. Other important arrests are looked for this week.

A copy of the Gaelic American, edited by John Devoy, has been examined by Atty.-Gen. Gregory, and action against the radical Irish editor, who bitterly assailed the Postoffice Department, the Department of Justice and the British government, is expected shortly. The government is determined to stamp out the menace of war obstructionists, and action against these persons will be taken this week.

The United States Attorney's office in New York has not yet disclosed its evidence against Devoy, and Assistant Attorney Ben A. Mathews refused to discuss the case tonight.

BUILDING MATERIAL IN FRANCE CAPTURED.

STUFF IMPORTED BY MISS MORGAN'S COMMITTEE ENGULFED IN OFFENSIVE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, June 8.—Millions of dollars' worth of building material imported from America by Miss Anne Morgan's committee to rebuild French villages was engulfed in the last German offensive, according to the Paris edition of the New York Herald.

A certain amount of the material had been hurriedly removed to the south, but the bulk is now in the hands of the Germans, as also are most of the forty-three villages, for which it was intended.

KAISER'S AWARD "PURE GERMAN."

$5000 "Gold" Yachting Cup Is Only Pewter Worth Few Dollars.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 7.—German proof of the saying that all is not gold that glitters was forthcoming here today, when the disclosure that the "magnificent" cup which Emperor William awarded to the American winner of his ocean yacht race in 1905 was not gold, and was not worth $5000, as was announced at that time.

It was made of pewter with a thin veneer of gold, and was worth scarcely $40.

The deception recoiled against the Emperor during the recent Red Cross drive, it was revealed today, as it was auctioned and reauctioned until it added $125,000 to the nation's mercy fund.

VIGOROUS MEASURES PLANNED FOR ALIENS?

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—John W. Preston, United States District Attorney, was called to Washington today by Atty.-Gen. Gregory for a conference.

The nature of the matters to be considered was not disclosed to Mr. Preston, but it was indicated that they concerned greater war efficiency, more vigorous measures against enemy aliens, possible changes in Mr. Preston's office.

W. R. HEARST HANDED HAT BY RUMSONIANS.

NEW JERSEY TOWN APPOINTS COMMITTEE TO ELIMINATE HIS PAPERS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RUMSON (N. J.) June 7.—The Village Council of Rumson voted last night to compile a "Who's Who" of Rumson and Rumson newspaper readers. A Council committee was appointed to go to the local news dealers and ask for the names of those citizens, if any, who still read newspapers published by W. R. Hearst.

The committee is under instructions, after getting these names, to take steps to keep Hearst papers out of Rumson. According to the plan of the committee, one of these steps will be to request news dealers to cease handling Hearst publications. Another step is expected to be personal appeal to any citizen found to be still reading Hearst papers.

Rumson is the first town in which there has been any suggestion of a personal, individual appeal to Hearst readers. In other towns those readers have been addressed collectively.

George A. H. Churchill, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, brought the Hearst question before the Council.

"Last week Rumson unfurled its service flag, containing seventy-four stars," said Mr. Churchill. "As you gentlemen know, the citizens there assembled cast a unanimous vote requesting the Council to take action regarding those newspapers.

"Many of our citizens have sons in France today. While their sons are away fighting for this country's very existence, these citizens do not want in their village any newspaper which apparently works insidiously to undermine the morale of the American people.

"Having one son in the uniform of Uncle Sam, I, for one, will not read newspapers which have defended and praised Germany. I am opposed to having within the village limits any newspapers which have sought to incite hatred for England, the strongest ally of my boy, your boy and the rest of us. The citizens of this village ask you Councilmen to deal adequately with the kind of newspapers which delete a victory prayer from the President's Memorial Day proclamation."

COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

Mayor John Corliss said that any newspaper which hampered the successful prosecution of the war ought to be barred from the village. However, he said, he was opposed to the passage of an ordinance to bar Hearst sales in view of the court decision regarding the Mt. Vernon ordinance. Mayor Corliss expressed the belief that Hearst papers could be kept out of town merely by appointing a committee to take the matter up with the news dealers. With the unanimous approval of the Council, he appointed a committee, consisting of Councilmen Richard Rogers, Dalton Varmly and George Kuhn.

Councilman William H. Mahoney suggested that, in addition to asking the dealers to cease selling Hearst papers, the committee should ascertain the names of citizens who have still been reading those papers.

Councilman James Ryan was particularly outspoken in his opinion of Hearst papers; "If I had my way they would be consigned to the uttermost depths of ——," etc., he said.

Councilman Charles F. Briggs, former Chief of Police, said Hearst would be locked up in the village calaboose if he came to Rumson and uttered what he had printed in his newspapers.

LIGHT BUSINESS WAIL BY CONEY ISLANDERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—Coney Island business men, whose trade has suffered since the light-dimming order, issued by the New York police department, at the behest of the military authorities, as a safeguard against a possible German air raid, protested today that favor was being shown other resort towns along the coast, particularly in New Jersey. The glare of their lights, they said, was noticeable every night, while Coney Island remained dark.

A Coney Island committee, who sought permission of the police to light up Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights, were told it was for the Federal authorities to decide.

BRITISH AIR SQUADRON FIGHTS AGAINST ODDS.

GERMAN SEAPLANE FALLS INTO OCEAN AFTER BATTLE OFF DUTCH COAST.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

THE HAGUE, June 8.—Five British and seven German seaplanes of the largest type fought a battle Tuesday evening off the Dutch coast, according to a Terschelling dispatch to the Handelsblad. One of the German machines was observed to fall in flames into the sea. One British machine was forced to descend, but landed safely.

Another British machine, which had descended to the surface of the sea for repairs two hours before the battle, was set on fire by its five occupants, all of whom waded ashore and gave themselves up for internment. The crew included two Canadians.

The British squadron of five seaplanes started Tuesday on a reconnoitering expedition off the Northern Dutch coast. They met a squadron of five German airplanes which they drove off in three successive encounters.

The Germans, however, returned, reinforced by seven seaplanes. A lively fight ensued and in addition to the German machine, which fell in flames, another German was brought down.

A British machine commanded by Robert Paul of Buffalo, N. Y., member of the Canadian Flying Corps, developed engine trouble and was forced to descend to the surface. Ensign Joseph Eaton, a New England man, who was senior pilot of another of the squadron, was detailed to protect the disabled plane and circled about it for an hour, while the Germans were continually attempting to attack the cripple.

During Eaton's defensive work his machine was riddled with bullets, but he was able to keep the air until the Germans were driven off. He then descended, his machine wrecked, but all the crew got ashore safely.

This engagement was reported by the British Admiralty in its statement of June 6, which announced that a squadron of large seaplanes, while reconnoitering over the North Sea, met a large formation of hostile machines which was engaged and two of the enemy machines shot down. Two of the British machines, it was stated, were forced to alight close to the Dutch coast because of engine trouble and the aviators were interned.

M'ADOO MAY ABANDON NEW FREIGHT RULES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Protest has been so strong against the double system of raising intrastate freight rates by applying interstate schedules to intrastate shipments where these schedules exist, and then increasing those rates 25 per cent., that the Railroad Administration is considering abandoning the provisions of the rate order.

A number of modifications in the new high schedules, to go into effect June 25, will be announced next week.

ALLIES TO JOIN JAPAN IN ASIA.

pedition which may be dispatched to Siberia.

It was emphasized by Russian diplomats here, and declared by them to be the view of their colleagues in other countries, that they do not distrust Japan, and recognize the advisability of intervention, but believe that any possible troubles, which disassociated Japanese intervention might create, would be obviated if the action should be taken jointly by all the Allies.

Russian authorities, as well as Allied observers of the situation in Russia, fear the consolidation of German influence in occupied Russia, the effects of this dismemberment of Russia, which the Central Powers are prosecuting, and the suspected treachery of the Bolsheviki. The incompetence of the Maximalists, they assert, is as dangerous to the interests of Russia, as their proven infidelity might be.

It is understood that the Supreme War Council at Versailles has reviewed the suggestions for bringing about an improved situation in Russia and especially the possibilities of rendering aid to Russia from the European front, but that they offer such small opportunities as to make impracticable any concerted and effective movement, despite the fact that Archangel is now ice-free. Whatever can be achieved through the use of Archangel and Kola is being attempted, but the improvement can only be local, it was declared.

The French authorities are also understood to hold the view that if the present processes at work in Russia are permitted to continue uninterruptedly, action next year, barring the crushing of Germany on the western front, will be too late to save Russia. They refuse to discuss the probabilities concerning the renewal of the war by selfish powers for the distribution of weakened Russia's territories, but it was hinted that Germany, even if defeated in the west, might fall back upon her Russian conquests and rapidly recoup, despite even harsh conditions, which might be imposed upon her by the Allied nations.

An important German agent, now interned, it was learned today, informed a War Department authority last December that Germany would surmount any difficulties she might have from a shortage of men through the enlistment of Russians this past spring. It is not doubted here that Germany already has obtained large numbers of Russians for her army, and that the number will tend to increase rather to decrease as long as Germany is permitted to work her will upon Russia without interference.

AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE REVELATION.

ONE MONTH'S GROWTH NEAR THAT OF WHOLE FIRST YEAR OF THE WAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The steady growth of the American merchant marine in all classes of vessels was revealed today for the first time since the war began, in statistics from the Department of Commerce, showing that in the first five months of this year there have been built in this country and officially numbered by the Bureau of Navigation, a total of 629 vessels, of 687,055 gross tons.

The merchant fleet of the United States now amounts to approximately 10,000,000 gross tons, not including merchant craft under control of the army and navy as transports and supply ships. At the beginning of January, 26,742 merchant vessels of 9,343,224 gross tons were flying the Stars and Stripes on trips across the Atlantic with food and munitions, into the Caribbean and Pacific with American products for foreign customers, and on the lakes and rivers of this country as part of the nation's domestic transportation system.

This tremendous fleet is second only to the merchant tonnage of Great Britain. It includes all the new vessels built under the direction of the Shipping Board and thousands of other ships, smaller in individual tonnage, but greater in aggregate carrying capacity, which play so large a part in commerce and the maintenance of a favorable balance of trade.

There has been a steady increase in new ships this year, the May tonnage being three times as great as the January output. In the first month of 1918 there were fifty-seven ships, of 64,795 tons, given official numbers. In February, eighty-four ships, of 111,601 gross tons, were numbered. March saw a notable jump in the production of small ships, numbers being awarded to 138, the tonnage being 147,145. The record in April was 165 ships, of 163,050 tons, and in May 185 ships, of 194,464 tons.

In a single month this year the American merchant fleet has seen a growth almost as great as during the entire first year of the European war.

Eloquent Testimony

It is a matter of great satisfaction to us that our Watch Repairing Department is the largest in the West. It tells more convincingly than any advertisement can of the unequaled service we give.

Think you this pre-eminence could be possible if our work was not the most satisfying, if our prices were not the most reasonable?

At Davidson's, if your watch is a Hamilton, or an Elgin, or a Waltham, an expert from that particular factory takes it in charge, repairs it, tests it, and you are delighted because it runs-to-the-second, and it has cost you no more—indeed, it has cost you less than is usually charged for vastly inferior work. Put us to the test.

FINAL plans for the registration of German alien women were announced yesterday by Chief of Police Butler, following a conference with United States Marshal Walton and Sergt. E. M. Slaughter, in charge of the police war squad.

The police will maintain two bureaus for the purpose of registering women during the time designated in the President's proclamation, from the 17th to the 26th inst., inclusive, exclusive of the Sunday intervening.

The main bureau will be maintained at police headquarters, No. 326 West First street. For the convenience of residents of the harbor district, registrations will be taken at San Pedro at the San Pedro Police Station. The registration deputies will be on duty from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Chief of Police Butler, who is the chief Federal registrar for the city of Los Angeles, has detailed a squad of fifteen men, in charge of Sergt. Slaughter.

German alien females will apply at the registration bureau between the days mentioned, with four unmounted photographs of themselves, three inches square, on light background and light paper. They will be required to fill out three affidavits, which will include answers to the following questions:

All natives, citizens, denizens of subjects of the German Empire, or of the German Imperial government, being females of the age of 14 years and upwards, who are within the United States and not actually naturalized as American citizens.

Female natives, citizens, denizens or subjects of the Austro-Hungarian Empire are not required to register under the President's proclamation of April 19, 1918, nor under these regulations, unless they come within the provisions of the preceding paragraph.

Failure of a German alien female to complete the registration within the specified time, is liable to restraint, imprisonment and detention for the duration of the war.

A female, irrespective of the citizenship or parents, born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, is an American citizen and is not required to register, unless: she has become naturalized in or taken an oath of allegiance to Germany, or she has married a citizen or subject of Germany, who has not acquired his naturalization in the United States, and marital relations have not been terminated by death or divorce, and she has not resumed her American citizenship.

Any American woman who marries a foreigner, takes the nationality of her husband. At the termination of the marital relation by death or absolute divorce, she is presumed to retain the same, unless she makes formal renunciation thereof before a court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens.

Females born in, or residing as German subjects in Schleswig-Holstein, subsequent to August 23, 1866, and now dwelling within the United States, are, unless naturalized as, or married prior to April 6, 1917, to American citizens, required to register.

Females born in or residing as German subjects in Alsace-Lorraine subsequent to May 10, 1871, and now dwelling within the United States, are, unless naturalized or married prior to April 6, 1917, to American citizens, required to register.

MARRIED MAN BEST FRIEND OF SALOON.

YOUNGER MALES CREDITED WITH HIGHER IDEALS, IS Y.M.C.A. REPORT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) June 8.—Saloons do not attract young men between 17 and 24 years of age as they do older men, nor are single men so numerous as married men at the bar, according to a report submitted tonight by C. C. Robinson of New York, to the conference of the Association of Employed Officers of the Young Men's Christian Association, in session here. Mr. Robinson headed a section on social influences that investigated the lure of the saloon.

Explaining the reasons for the conditions noted, Mr. Robinson said: "This is partially attributed to the higher idealism of the young men and also to the fact that unmarried men spend a good deal of time in the company of their sweethearts. The saloon seems to be most popular in the years between 35 and 45, the dull, drab years of middle age."

Mr. Robinson asserted that the use of public libraries was greater by the 17-to-24-year-old group than by any other group of working men, and at the same time the lowest interest in church and religious matters was among this same group of younger men. The greatest interest in religious matters, he said, was among men 46 years old and over.

GIBBONS PERILS SELF TO GET BATTLE NEWS.

CORRESPONDENT NOW IN HOSPITAL WITH SEVERAL SERIOUS WOUNDS.

By M. F. Murphy.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, June 7 (delayed.)—Floyd P. Gibbons, war correspondent, who was wounded last night, is now in an American hospital at Neuilly, with a fracture of the skull over the eye, and one eye badly damaged, and a flesh wound in the left arm. His condition is serious, but is not regarded as dangerous.

Gibbons was watching the battle, which began at 5 o'clock under conduct of Lieut. A. E. Hartzell. They observed operations for a while from the top of a hill, and then, hearing a machine gun putputting away lower down, decided to go down where it was. They stayed with this company until it was ordered forward, and Gibbons, always eager to be in the thick of it and never afraid of consequences, requested he be allowed to go forward with it. The commander of the company refused permission.

They started for another portion of the front, where they met another officer, superior to Hartzell, whose machine gunners had been ordered forward, but not to so advanced a post as the first company with which Gibbons had tried to go.

Gibbons and Hartzell went along, the two proceeding through a wood. Coming to a clearing, they started across it, when enemy machine-gun bullets began to rain about them. The superior officer told Gibbons and Hartzell it was time to get under cover. He got into the woods, but Gibbons and Hartzell threw themselves flat in the grass as the best way to avoid the bullets. They were lying several yards apart in the long grass when Hartzell heard Gibbons say in a matter of fact tone: "Believe I'm hit." A little later he added: "Believe I'm hit in the eye." Hartzell crawled over to him and every movement of the grass brought a fresh swarm of machine gun bullets. This was about 6 o'clock in the evening. Hartzell thought it best to wait for dusk so as to get Gibbons out of his exposed position without attracting the German gunners.

They lay there a couple of hours and then Hartzell conducted Gibbons to a dressing station, where his wounds were cared for before he was brought into Paris to the American hospital at Neuilly.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Renewed warning of a coal shortage next winter was given last night by Fuel Administrator Garfield. HEWITT FOR CONGRESS.

First District Republicans Indorse Marysville Man; Hayes Addresses Meeting.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SANTA ROSA, June 8.—Republicans here to attend a conference of the First Congress District adjourned late today after having indorsed A. H. Hewitt of Marysville for the Congressional nomination, and listened to an address by J. O. Hayes of San Jose, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor.

The district conference organized at a morning session by selecting P. R. Lancaster of Willits, and J. E. Mobley of Santa Rosa to be temporary chairman and secretary, respectively. An adjournment was then taken until the afternoon, when the temporary organization was made permanent. A telegram was read from Mr. Hewitt, saying he would accept the indorsement and seek the nomination, and a letter of withdrawal by Mrs. Elizabeth Hughes of Oroville was presented. Mrs. Hughes had made a start on a campaign for the nomination, but said she did not care to enter a contest before the primaries.

Mr. Hayes was the only avowed candidate present and he addressed the conference on the topics of party and national unity. No reference was made on the floor of the convention to objections to such a gathering that had been suggested by some of the party workers when the call was issued.

DUTCH HOSPITAL SHIP TORPEDOED, CREW SAY

VESSEL SUNK AFTER REPORT THAT IT CARRIED BRITISH DELEGATION.

BY GEORGE F. STEWARD.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AMSTERDAM, June 8.—Sir George Cave, Lord Newton and Gen. Belfield, British delegates to The Hague on exchange of prisoners of war, were not on the Dutch hospital ship Koningen Regentes, which was sunk in the North Sea. They witnessed the disaster from the deck of the Sindoro.

Hearing a tremendous explosion they looked toward the Regentes and saw the vessel broken almost in two and sinking rapidly. The Regentes was hit amidships. Sir George Cave said:

"There was no excitement on board our steamer. Boats were got away to the rescue in splendid fashion. We all admired the Dutch seamen who acted very calmly and promptly. Everybody on board the Regentes was calm and courageous, including three nurses."

Lord Newton also praised the behavior of the Dutch sailors.

The belief is gaining ground here that the Koningen Regentes did not strike a mine, but was torpedoed. According to the Nieuw Rotterdamshe Courant, five members of the steamer's crew have made declarations to that effect, to the naval authorities. The ship's quartermaster declared that he saw a torpedo clearly at a distance of 200 yards coming in a slanting direction toward the Regentes. In this connection the Rotterdam paper calls attention to the fact that it had been reported that the British delegates with 160 other passengers were to sail on the Koningen Regentes and that it was not until 2:30 a.m., after the anchors were weighed that the delegates boarded the Sindoro.

The British delegates left for The Hague this morning. When Sir George Cave's attention was drawn to an article in the Berlin Vossiche Zeitung, suggesting that the conference might have a wider scope, he remarked with a smile:

"We are here simply and solely for negotiations over prisoners of war."

O'LEARY EVIDENCE ALL OBTAINED IN AMERICA.

NO INFORMATION FURNISHED BY ANY FOREIGN GOVERNMENT, SAYS GREGORY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Evidence on which the indictment in New York of Jeremiah O'Leary and others on treason and espionage charges was based, was worked up entirely in this country and none of the information leading to the arrests was furnished by any foreign government, Attorney-General Gregory announced today.

Furthermore, he said, the evidence the government holds against the indicted persons has not been forwarded to any other government.

This was explained in answer to queries prompted by the suggestion that the British and American governments had worked in common for the prosecution of this particular group of Irish agitators and suspected German agents.

SAFETY VAULT HIDES CZAR'S CROWN JEWELS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

HOBOKEN (N. J.) June 8.—Federal authorities have removed from a safe deposit vault in New York, leased by the wife of a man who is said to have posed as an American army lieutenant, $350,000 worth of precious stones alleged to be part of a consignment of Russian crown jewels smuggled into this country.

This announcement was made here when Montefort Kahn and Vladimir Jogelson, charged with complicity in the smuggling, were arraigned before a United States Commissioner and released on bail.

Federal agents, it was said, will continue the search for the remainder of the jewelry claimed to have been owned, prior to the Russian revolution, by members of the Romanoff family.

SERVICE CROSS INARTISTIC.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—That the distinguished service cross adopted by the War Department is inartistic and ecclesiastical rather than military in form was claimed tonight by the National Sculpture Society, which asked the government to recall the design, together with a shipment of the decorations sent to France for American soldiers. The society, which was active in obtaining legislation awarding decorations for gallantry, complained that a design for the cross was accepted and medals struck off without an opportunity being given its members and sculptors generally to compete.

U-BOATS PERIL RED CROSS PARTY ON WAY TO FRANCE

Fate of Steamer with Submarine Close by is Unknown.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, June 8.—A party of forty American Red Cross workers, on their way to France, Italy and Switzerland, reached London today after an eventful trip, during which two submarines were encountered. Last Sunday the first of the U-boats appeared about 500 yards to [illegible]ward. The American troops and civilian passengers took their boat [illegible] promptly and in perfect order.

Two hours later another U-boat was sighted, but submerged immediately.

WIRELESS TELLS OF SUBMARINE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 8.—A British trans-Atlantic steamer which arrived tonight reported that a wireless message had been received from an Anchor Line steamer 800 miles off the New England coast last Wednesday that a submarine was close by.

The steamer at once headed at full speed for this port.

Whether the Anchor liner was attacked was not known.

SPEEDS ZIG-ZAG COURSE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 8.—Racing at full speed for nearly a week to escape German submarines, an American steamship arrived today from the West Indies with [illegible]-nine passengers, more than half of whom were women and children.

With the first inkling that U-boats were at work, the captain took ample steps to protect his ship and the lives of his passengers. Taking a zig-zag course, he ordered the engineers to get up every pound of steam possible and then ran far off the route usually followed by steamers engaged in the West Indian trade. Life boats were prepared for instant lowering and passengers warned that if they appeared on deck they would be thrown into irons.

Officers and men obtained no sleep for the last seventy-two hours, keeping a constant lookout for submarines, floating mines or life boats from the raiders' victims. The wireless operator picked up an S.O.S. call from the Harpathian.

Both crew and passengers showed the tension under which they had been. A. J. Danyon, a Philadelphia banker, and Frank H. Gilroy, a mining engineer from Denver, in relating their experiences, paid tribute to the work of officers and men and to the courage of the women passengers.

GERMANY'S BIG U-BOATS SINK FEW ALLIED SHIPS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Friday, June 7.—The new type of German submarine cruiser accomplishes little, according to an official note commenting on German undersea boats. Exact information relative to the operations of two of these boats, which left Germany at the end of 1917, traveled as far as the equator, and were absent for four months, shows that they accounted for only 29,000 tons of shipping.

This was equal to only one day's loss from submarines in April of the same year.

At this rate Germany would require sixty submarine cruisers at sea simultaneously to inflict the same loss as that visited upon shipping by submarines in European waters in a month.

"But Germany cannot maintain more than twenty of these boats," says the official note, "since the Allies destroy submarines faster than they are built. However, if they sink few ships, the submarines operating in European and American waters are useful because their cargo space enables them to bring back to Germany valuable materials which are totally lacking there."

TROOPSHIP WINS IN RACE WITH U-BOATS.

TRANSPORT SIGHTS TWO SUBMERSIBLES BUT BEATS THEM TO HARBOR.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 8.—How a transport raced up the Atlantic Coast with darkened lights at night and under a full pressure of steam in order to elude German submarines, at least two of which gave chase was told by men on shore leave here.

Members of the transport's crew declared they were warned in ample time by wireless of the nearness of the U-boats and were advised to keep in near the coast and make all possible speed to this port. They asked in return that the ship be met at once by American destroyers.

Two of the submarines were sighted, but at such distance that they were not identified by number and the race began between the submersibles, and the troops ship for harbor. It lasted for twelve hours, and although handicapped by having to steer a zig-zag course, the transport maintained a lead on the torpedo and gunfire until the American destroyers came to the rescue.

The U-boats submerged shortly before the destroyers appeared, evidently having picked up a wireless message indicating that the armed craft were near.

CONCRETE SHIP ERA SHOWN TO BE HERE.

SHIPPING BOARD STATEMENT SAYS EVEN TUGBOATS TO BE NEW TYPE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Evidence that the government regards the concrete ship as having passed beyond the stage of experiment to become a practical and efficient aid in the country's transportation system was given today in a statement by the Shipping Board, showing that no less than five different branches of the government contemplate building concrete vessels.

Chairman Hurley soon will place contracts for twenty-four more concrete vessels, in addition to the eighteen already let, making a total tonnage of 298,500 ordered by the Shipping Board. Most of the new ships will be 7500-ton tankers and will be built in the five government yards announced several days ago.

The Inland Waterway Commission is making bids on twenty-one concrete cargo barges of 500 tons capacity, while the Navy Department has let contracts for twelve concrete barges of 500 tons each for harbor use, and the Quartermaster's Department of the War Department has advertised for bids on twenty-two tugboats of reinforced concrete.

Concrete barges can be built in one-fourth the time and at one-half the cost of steel barges, while concrete ships complete cost only half as much as steel vessels.

"When concrete shipbuilding is well organized," the statement quotes R. J. Wig, head of the department of concrete ship construction, "the only limit on the capacity to produce concrete ships will be the limit of the machinery and equipment. There is no reason why we can't turn out hundreds of thousands of tons a year."

PREMIER OF CANADA SEES OUR SOLDIERS.

DECLARES FOE WILL PAY HEAVILY FOR SAME PRIVILEGE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, June 8.—Sir Robert L. Borden, Premier of Canada, who is here to attend the imperial conference, today made the following statement in regard to the fighting men of the United States:

"I recently had the privilege of observing the quality of the United States troops who are moving rapidly toward the fighting line. They are of magnificent physique and fine spirit and are strong in the determination that this war shall not be fought in vain.

"Their spirit is that of the people of the United States as a whole. The wonderful power that this great sister commonwealth will be able to exert in this struggle is not yet fully realized. The enemy will yet learn this to his cost."

SENATOR MAKES AIR FLIGHT TO DAYTON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

INDIANAPOLIS, June 8.—U. S. Senator New of Indiana, who left the Indianapolis speedway at 3:45 p.m. in an airplane for a trip to Dayton, O., arrived there safely, making the trip in an hour, according to a telegram received by Mrs. New this evening.

The trip was made in a Curtiss biplane, equipped with a Liberty motor and piloted by Caleb Bragg of the Dayton Aviation Field.

Senator New is a member of the Senate Aircraft Investigation Committee and expected to join two other members of the committee at Dayton.

HEAVY TAX URGED ON PICTURES AND AUTOS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Hearings on the new war tax legislation before the House Ways and Means Committee will continue to June 20. The committee today extended the time limit ten days because of the large number of requests for hearings which have come from corporations and individuals who would be affected.

Suggestions made to the committee at today's hearings included an increased tax on moving pictures and a heavy license tax on automobiles, to be paid by owners of the machines.

NOTED ACTOR DIES.

Robert Peyton Carter, Noted Actor and Tennis Player, Dies at Monrovia.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, June 8.—Robert Peyton Carter, famous English actor and tennis player, who for over twenty years was a member of Maude Adams's company, died here today at the home of his brother, Kenneth Carter, on East Mountain avenue. He was 55 years of age, and had been in ill health since August, 1916, when he underwent a serious operation. He left Miss Adams's company in March of this year in New York and came to Monrovia, hoping that the climate would benefit his health, but his condition steadily became worse until the end. Besides the brother here, Mr. Carter is survived by a brother and sister in Winchester, Eng. The funeral service will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Renaker chapel, Rev. A. J. G. Dowie, rector of St. Luke's, reading the service.

Mr. Carter came to Southern California in 1887, and for four years lived in Los Angeles. During that time he held the Southern California lawn tennis championship. In '91 he went East with Modjeska, and has continued to make his home in New York City since that time. Later he toured the country with Otis Skinner, and in 1897 joined Maude Adams in her first big success, "The Little Minister." He has been with Miss Adams continuously until March, when ill health forced him to leave the East. He expected to join her company in San Francisco May 20, and would have been with her next week in Los Angeles. In "Peter Pan," perhaps Miss Adams's greatest triumph, Mr. Carter played Capt. Hook, the pirate.

Mr. Carter was one of the best-known members of the Lambs' Club and universally admired by his profession.

COULDN'T SWALLOW IT.

Chinaman Tries to Down Incriminating Evidence, but It Lodges in His Throat; Now He's in Jail.

It did not take more than one slip 'twixt the throat and the lip to land Louie Yook, a Chinese, in jail on the charge of violating the State Poison Act yesterday.

Had Yook been able to swallow the evidence, Officers McD. Jones and Littlejohn, of the Chinatown squad, would have had to turn him loose, but Yook could not get away with it.

The two officers were at Alabama and Apablasa streets when they saw two Chinamen running in an opposite direction. McD. Jones and Littlejohn soon had both under arrest. The other Chinaman had nothing on Yook and lost no time in saying so. But Yook maintained a deep silence, all the time swallowing hard.

A little Irish massaging over the prisoner's throat soon disclosed the fact that firmly lodged in the trachea was a folded playing card containing a large pill of opium.

Tonight! Take Dodson's Liver Tone! Better Than Calomel For Liver

Calomel sickens! If bilious, constipated and headachy read my guarantee.

Listen to me! Take no more sickening salivating calomel when bilious or constipated. Don't lose a day's work.

Calomel is mecury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful tonight, and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous by morning, I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is a real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

WON'T STRIKE, KEYMEN WIRE THE PRESIDENT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Several thousand telegraphers employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company in Chicago, Seattle and Spokane wired President Wilson today that they would not be parties to any movement looking to a disruption of the country's commercial telegraph service during the war. They deplored agitation looking to a strike of telegraphers and pledged their loyalty to the government.

Some 3000 telegraph operators in Chicago told the President that they were not represented by any labor leaders who had threatened to call a strike and that they resented the inference that they might be "so base and disloyal" as to support a strike.

SEPTUAGENARIANS START WEDDED LIFE.

MARRY QUIETLY AND DISCARD HONEYMOON AS WAR-TIME NONESSENTIAL.

After a year's acquaintance and an engagement of three months, William D. Downs, 71 years old, of No. 215 East Sixty-first street and Martha L. Lee, 70 years old, of No. 468 East Forty-third street took out a marriage license yesterday from "Cupid" Sparks and were married last night at 8:30 o'clock at the bride's home.

The groom came to California about eight years ago from Kentucky and formed a partnership under the name of Hennesey & Downs, in real estate, at No. 5010 South Park avenue, where he is still in business. The bride's birthplace is New York City, but she came to California from Indiana.

Mr. Downs has six children, Mrs. Effie Hart, Mrs. Sylvia Lundy, Mrs. Mabel Foote, Mrs. Opal Douglas, Mrs. Jessie Reynolds and W. A. Downs, who are all in this city and were present at the wedding. Mrs. Lee has no children.

A quiet wedding ceremony was held last night and about forty relatives of the couple and their close friends were present. Mr. and Mrs. Downs will take no honeymoon, and will reside at the bride's home. Rev. Bruce Brown, pastor of the South Park Christian Church, officiated at the ceremony.

ADVERTISING CLUB ON ANNUAL OUTING.

One hundred and sixty-two persons started by automobile yesterday afternoon on the annual outing of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles. Sulphur Mountain Springs, near Santa Paula, was the objective, and the party arrived there last evening in time to enjoy a big barbecue dinner, followed by bowling and dancing. There was a pleasing impromptu programme of amateur vaudeville and an address by Harold Carroll, the president-elect.

Today the party will enjoy the bathing at the springs and hikes in the mountains, followed by a great pig's head dinner before the start homeward. The party will return to Los Angeles this evening.

JAPAN DENIES RULING CHINA.

Equality of Nations is Shown by Terms of Pact.

Treaty Relates Only to War Co-operation.

Commercial Matters are not Involved, Says Tokio.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE AND A. P.]

TOKIO, June 8.—The official statement issued by the Japanese government explanatory of the Chino-Japanese military agreement declares that this agreement relates only to co-operation by the two nations in defense of the peace and welfare of the Far East, and explicitly denies various rumors to the contrary.

The text of the explanatory statement which accompanies the notes exchanged between the two governments reads:

"Having regard to the steady penetration of hostile influence into Russian territory, jeopardizing the peace and welfare of the Far East, and recognizing the imperative necessity of co-operation between Japan and China adequately to meet the exigencies of the case, the governments of the two countries after a frank interchange of views caused the annexed notes to be exchanged on March 25 between the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Chinese Minister at Tokio:

CONCLUDE AGREEMENTS.

"In pursuance of the purpose of the notes, the imperial government subsequently sent commissioners representing the imperial army and navy to Peking, where they held conferences with the authorities of the Chinese army and navy. The negotiations progressing [illegible] two agreements were concluded, [illegible] relating to the navy, on May 1[illegible].

"These agreements embody only the concrete arrangements as to the manner and conditions under which the armies and navies of the two countries are to co-operate in their common defense against the enemy on the basis of the above-mentioned notes exchanged on March 25.

"The details of the arrangements constituting as they do a military secret, cannot be made public, but they contain no provisions other than those pertaining to the objects already defined.

RUMORS DENIED.

"Currency has been given to various rumors alleging that the agreements contain, for instance, such stipulations as that the Chinese expedition is to be under Japanese command; that Japan may construct forts in Chinese territory at such places as she may choose; that Japan will take control of the Chinese railways, shipyards and arsenals, and even that Japan will assume control of China's finances, will organize China's police system, will acquire the right of freely operating of China's mines, producing materials for the use of arsenals, [illegible]

"It cannot be too emphatically stated that these and similar rumors are absolutely unfounded."

FRANCIS IS REPORTED IN PETROGRAD AGAIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The presence in Petrograd of Ambassador Francis was reported to the State Department today. Other dispatches to the department said conditions in Petrograd were bad, especially as to food supplies.

Swedish reports to the State Department announce that the Russian Soviet republic has abolished all titles of ambassadors and ministers. Both their own and foreign representatives are called without distinction "representative plenipotentiaries."

DANIELS DISAPPROVES RE-RANKING MARINES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Secretary Daniels said today he had informed members of the House Naval Committee that he does not approve the Senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill, giving the rank of lieutenant-general to the commandant of the Marine Corps and that of major-general to the staff officers.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 24, 1918.

Drs. WHITE AND WAINWRIGHT:

Dear Sirs—While you have not asked me for a testimonial, possibly you will give a short one from me space, should you get up a new pamphlet. Also that these few lines may be read by some one or more of my many friends and former customers in the Mississippi Valley (Quincy Territory) or in the Inland Empire (Spokane Territory,) I wish to say: I had inward piles for thirty-five years and for the last ten a "full crop." So much so for the last three years, I have had no time to attend to anything else. I hope that none of my friends that may chance to read this will so foolishly procrastinate in taking treatement as I did. The total pain of becoming completely cured in my case amounted to less than the pulling of a small tooth. Had I a business to attend to, I would not have lost three days' time. Doctors White and Wainwright, you are "master mechanics" in the treatment of piles. Not for $2000 would I have mine back. I thank you. Yours Truly, J. W. HELME,

WOULD CONSOLIDATE THE JUSTICE COURTS.

GRAND JURY POINTS THE WAY TO LARGE SAVING IN COUNTY EXPENSES.

The suggestion of the grand jury embodied in a communication received by the Supervisors yesterday for a reduction of the number of justices of the peace and constables in the various townships by consolidating townships, will be considered by the Supervisors on the 19th inst. The consolidated townships, if effected, will result in a saving to the county of $15,000 a year. Incidentally it will increase the labors of the justices of the peace in the Courthouse. Already the latter have been clamoring for more salary.

The grand jury letter stated that the reorganization "may cause some protest, but in these times we need conservation of man power as well as finances."

There are now forty-two justices of the peace, including six city justices, in the county at a yearly total salary of $48,000, with a monthly expense allowance of approximately $6600 a year, the grand total being $55,800.

The proposed consolidation of townships is as follows: Azusa-Covina, Burbank-Calabasas, Downey-Norwalk, El Monte-west portion of Rowland, Gardena-Lomita-Redondo-Inglewood, except a part north of the west coast annex; Long Beach-Compton, Monrovia-Annandale-Sierra Madre, Pasadena (one justice)-San Antonio, San Jose-San Dimas, San Gabriel, Santa Monica-Venice (one justice,) Soledad, South Pasadena-San Marino, Whittier.

All of the cases arising in a proposed consolidated township of Malibu-Cahuenga-San Fernando-Belvedere-Monterey Park-Catalina-Inglewood, north of the south line of the west coast annex, will be tried at the Courthouse.

If the suggestion is adopted by the Supervisors, the consolidated townships will be renamed. The total expense under the proposed arrangement is estimated at $32,904.50. The cost per case filed will be reduced from $4.26 to $2.01.

The hearing before the Supervisors will occur on the 19th inst.

SUES FOR DIVORCE.

This Action Comes as Aftermath of Mrs. Helpling's Separate Maintenance Suit.

An aftermath of the Helpling separate maintenance action brought by Mrs. Margaret J. Helpling against Osmund T. Helpling, traffic attorney and rate expert, was a suit for divorce filed by Mr. Helpling yesterday. Attorney E. A. Miller declined to state the allegations in the complaint.

Judge Wood, in the maintenance action, granted Mrs. Helpling a decree, and approved an arrangement by which Mr. Helpling will pay Mrs. Helpling $50 a month for two years. The trial of the separate maintenance suit ran the gamut of the alleged cruelty of Mr. Helpling, based on the "Dear Daddy" letter and the association of his name with that of Miss Elizabeth Seagraves.

FOR NAVAL RESERVE.

More Men Wanted for Force in this District—Good Opportunities Offered.

The drive of the Twelfth Naval District (California) for enrollments in the United States Naval Reserve force, is proceeding with leaps and bounds, according to word received here from District Enrolling Officer Jaffee at San Francisco. He states that there is need, however, for many more men to man and handle the enormous amount of tonnage that Uncle Sam is constructing to combat the U-boat menace and to maintain an uninterrupted supply of troops and munitions to France.

The Naval Reserve force is an actual part of the United States Navy, created for active service in time of war. Men enrolling in the Naval Reserve are subject to call for full and active naval service when actually needed. In time of peace, they may continue as members of the Naval Reserve or they may resign.

Men with trades are being given corresponding ratings in the Naval Reserve, while practically every branch of the service is open to enrollment. Men with no trades are being enrolled in the seaman branch, or in the engineer's forces, with every opportunity for advancement.

PASSENGER TRAFFIC BUREAU OPENED HERE.

Owing to government control of all railroads and steamships and the natural congestion of business at the Federal railroad office, a passenger traffic bureau has been organized with offices in the Hibernian Building. D. F. Robertson, during the last fourteen years local agent of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, has been appointed manager.

Mr. Robertson returned yesterday from an extended tour of the Northwest and Canada, when arrangements were completed to represent over 100 steamship and railroad lines. The Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern railroads of Canada, having closed their offices in the United States, will be represented by the bureau, together with the Japanese steamship lines.

WANTS NAME CHANGED.

Although he is the son of a Civil War veteran and Indian fighter, Karl F. Lauterbach, a native of California, petitioned the courts yesterday to change the name to K. Fred Lawter. The sound of the family name, he says, is proving embarrassing to him both socially and in business. Mr. Lauterbach says he stands ready to serve the United States government at any time.

GOV. STEPHENS HERE ON SOUTHLAND TOUR.

ADDRESSES IN SUPPORT OF WAR WILL BE FEATURE OF PROGRAMME.

Gov. Stephens arrived in Los Angeles yesterday to remain in Southern California until the 23d inst., carrying on his campaign, in which patriotic addresses in support of the war programme will be the principal feature. He began his work here last night in an address at Shrine Auditorium at the benefit for the Red Cross given by the Order of the Eastern Star.

This forenoon, at 11 o'clock, Gov. Stephens will speak in the Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, Eighth and San Julian streets. An elaborate programme for this event has been prepared by the colored people of Los Angeles. This evening he will speak before the Temple Baptist Church, in Temple Auditorium, Fifth and Olive streets, on "California and the War."

Tomorrow and Tuesday, Gov. Stephens will spend in Imperial Valley, visiting the valley towns by automobile and giving several short addresses. He will be in San Diego Wednesday and Thursday, and in Redlands on Friday. On Saturday he will visit Beaumont, Chino, Upland and Monrovia.

The programme for the remainder of his sojourn in Southern California is as follows:

Sunday, the 16th inst., evening address in La Verne Federated Church; 17th, Woman's City Club at noon and Texas Society at night; 18th, Ad Club at noon, druggists' convention at 1:30 and evening address at Van Nuys; 19th, noon meeting of shipworkers at San Pedro, afternoon meeting of women's clubs of Santa Monica, night meeting of Santa Monica Chamber of Commerce; 20th, noon meeting of War Savings Society of the Pacific Mutual, night meeting at Alhambra; 21st, noon meeting of Rotary Club, night addresses at Covina and Whittier; 22nd, National Defense review; 23d, night address at Lincoln-avenue Church, Pasadena, Orange Grove and Lincoln avenue.

For Water-Power Development.

EDISON COMPANY SEEKS TWENTY-MILLION LOAN.

THE Southern California Edison Company has made application to the War Finance Corporation for a loan of approximately $20,000,000 to provide for some maturing obligations and to comply with recommendations of the State Railroad Commission and the Fuel Administration. The greater portion of this large sum is required to meet these recommendations for the development of additional water-power plants to furnish hydroelectric energy as a substitute for the rapidly disappearing fuel oil supply.

The paramount necessity for a very large supply of fuel oil for the navy and merchant marine makes the development of additional water power plants of prime importance for conducting industries and bringing more agricultural lands under production, it is set forth. If this loan is granted, the money will be available for construction work, employing a large amount of labor and the purchase of material, much of which can be secured in Southern California.

Chairman John B. Miller of the company said last night that these water power plants if built would provide additional power supply of approximately 100,000 horse power, and the output would be substituted for 1,500,000 barrels of oil per annum, and that the company's application for the loan was based upon the provisions of the act creating the War Finance Corporation to lend assistance to established concerns whose business is necessary or contributory to the successful prosecution of the war, [illegible] the declaration of policy [illegible] the directors of the War [illegible] Corporation. OLAR ECLIPSE SEEN BY WORLD'S BIGGEST CROWD.

llion Persons Within Shadow Path; Local Phase Interests Thousands; Spots are Visible.

BY WILLIAM H. KNIGHT,

President of the Astronomical Society of Los Angeles.

[illegible] remarkable solar eclipse which occurred yesterday afternoon excited the keen interest of the entire population of [illegible] States. It was remarkable because it is the only one in [illegible] the narrow path of the moon's [illegible] has crossed the American [illegible] entirely within the territory of the United States for cen- [illegible] and it will not be repeated [illegible] to come. But the [illegible] of many have crossed sections of our country, curving off [illegible] other regions, and there will [illegible] of that character in [illegible] will cross Central Califor- [illegible]

[illegible]'s eclipse began in the [illegible] near the northern [illegible] Japan, crossed the ocean [illegible] curve to the north, and [illegible] of totality entered the [illegible] at South Bend, on the [illegible] Washington, at 2:50 p.m.; reached Baker City, Or., where the Lick Observatory astronomers were located, at 3:05 p.m.; arrived at Green River, Wyo., where the Mt. Wilson observers had established themselves, at 3:12 p.m.; speeded on to Denver, where the astronomers of the Yerkes Observatory had the rare opportunity of witnessing a total eclipse from a well-equipped observatory, through a large refractor with a twenty-inch objective. And so the path of totality extended southeasterly through Dodge City, Kans.; Guthrie, Okla.; Warren, Ark.; Jackson, Miss., to Orlando, Fla.

When the round shadow reached the coast of Washington it was sixty-six miles in diameter and the total phase lasted two minutes. From that time it continually diminished in size, till in Florida, it was only forty-two miles in diameter and the total phase lasted only a little over one minute. The total length of the shadow's journey from coast to coast was 2700 miles, and that distance was traversed in forty-seven minutes or 2820 seconds, averaging about one mile per second.

MAKING CALCULATIONS.

When the astronomer is making his calculations for an eclipse, he has to take into consideration the motion of the earth's surface as it turns upon its axis once in twenty-four hours; the motion of the moon as it revolves round the earth in a period of about twenty-eight days, and the motion of the moon with the earth as the latter moves round the sun at the rate of eighteen and one-half miles per second. Now, the diurnal motion of an object on the earth's surface depends on its latitude. If at the Equator it moves at the rate of 1000 miles per hours, at the latitude of Los Angeles and Florida, the rate is 840 miles per hour; at the latitude of Aberdeen, Wash., the rate is 650 miles per hour. These are approximations.

The motion of the moon as it revolves in its orbit round the earth is the slowest of any known heavenly body—only three-fourths of a mile per second. That is why it is so deliberate in passing across the sun's disc. This is very fortunate for the astronomer who wishes to study the phenomena of the red prominences and the pearly corona.

Consequently in the solar eclipse which occurred yesterday we had two favoring factors—a near body, the moon, which was apparently just a little larger than a distant body, the sun, so that it could just hide the latter when interposed, and moving so slowly that the sun was hidden from view one and a half minutes. This enables the astronomer to see a good deal if he is on the right spot and has his instruments adjusted for the occasion in advance. In no other planet, although some of them have several moons, is there such a nice adjustment of motions, sizes and distances of heavenly bodies as to enable them deliberately to observe the fascinating phenomena of a total solar eclipse.

JUPITER AS EXAMPLE.

Take Jupiter, for instance. We have seen the shadows of one or more of his satellites traveling over the surface of the giant planet, but always with an enormous velocity compared with the shadow of our moon as it travels over the earth's surface. His nearest moon, Io, which is comparable with ours in size, is 2500 miles in diameter, (our moon 2160,) and its distance from Jupiter is 261,000 miles, while our moon is 240,000 miles from the earth. But while our moon moves slowly round the earth in a period of about twenty-eight days, and at the rate of three-quarters of a mile per second, Io speeds round its great primary in the very brief period of one and three-quarters of our days, and to accomplish that rapid journey it is obliged to fly along its orbit at the enormous velocity of eighty-three miles per second in order to overcome the mighty attractive force of its gigantic primary. Consequently its shadow would flit past the Jovian astronomer in about nineteen seconds. This would hardly give the observer time to wink twice before the phenomenon was gone.

Probably more persons witnessed the total phase of yesterday's eclipse than in any previous event of the kind in the world's history. It is estimated that there were a million persons within or very near the shadow path. Besides these hundreds of thousands journeyed from ten to a hundred miles in their machines to witness the phenomena. In ancient times the eclipse came suddenly and unheralded and was always a great surprise. Sometimes it boded evil and fear seized the populace. Then again, it often passes over sparsely settled territory, or over long stretches of the oceans which cover three-quarters of the earth's surface.

But in the present instance the moon's round shadow, fifty miles in diameter, passed over the entire length of one of the largest and most populous countries on the globe, and its approach was announced, its interesting phases described, and keen interest in the attending phenomena awakened, many weeks before its appearance.

The local phase of the eclipse was of great interest to many thousands of young persons who had never witnessed an eclipse before. Smoked and colored glasses were in great demand and in every part of the city and surrounding country people were peering at the partially eclipsed sun in all its stages of progress. The invisible moon, advancing from the west, made an indentation in the Sun About Three-quarters Obscured at the Maximum; Wind Dropped.

At its period of maximum covering in Los Angeles yesterday the sun was 74 per cent. obscured by the moon, according to the official report of Ford A. Carpenter, meteorologist of the Weather Bureau. This occurred at 4:21 p.m., summer time.

The sunshine recorder at the Weather Bureau ceased at 3:52 p.m. and began again at 4:52 p.m. The sky was cloudless. The temperature at 2:50 p.m. was 76 deg.

During the eclipse the wind decreased to four miles per hour from five miles per hour.

Dark Strip Fifty Miles Wide Crosses Country.

Eclipse Reaches Baker Five Secconds Late.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BAKER (Or.) June 8.—Untimely twilight, fast followed by a deeper darkness, swept over a strip of the Northwest fifty miles wide today when the solar eclipse, foretold by men who have reduced the movements of astral bodies to an exact science, came to pass.

The predicted phenomenon found noted scientists ready for it here. Glasses were trained to read the riddle of the heavens and to study and photograph the sun's corona and spectrum. Definite conclusions drawn from these observations will be available only after comparison of results attained and deductions as to their significance. The observations were declared to be successful, a slight cloudiness being the only drawback.

The expected results of plunging the world into darkness as of night were observed. Birds sought their nests and chickens went to roost. A gloom as deep as that at 10 o'clock at night enveloped the favored strip of country at the moment of totality. Electric lights were turned on indoors and street cars and automobiles had their headlights burning.

Within a few minutes after the total eclipse, daylight rapidly returned.

REWARDS GREAT.

Those devoting their time to study of the corona were amply rewarded for the wonderfully colored glow of the inner circle with its moving multi-covered shafts of light, which offered a spectacle rarely seen by humankind. It was of maximum sunspot type, with the glowing and pulsating light nearly equally diffused about the sun surface, whose prominences also were plainly visible. Those watching for effects on nature also were rewarded, for crescent-shaped shadows on the ground were seen and in some cases where cloth was spread mysterious and unexplained shadow bands were observed, although some failed altogether of results in this particular detail of study.

Scientifically the "Baker eclipse," as the solar phenomenon observed today will be known in records of the United States Naval Observatory, whose party made its observations from this city, was successful. Belief was expressed that development

Hair Made Beautifully Wavy While You Sleep!

Just think, girls! You apply a little liquid silmerine at bedtime and in the morning your hair has a prettier wave and curl than probably it has ever had. The waviness looks perfectly natural, and the hair is sleek and glossy like plush. It will remain in curl the longest time, regardless of heat, wind or moisture, and you won't have to be continually fussing with loose strands or flying ends.

Liquid silmerine is of course entirely harmless. It leaves no sticky, greasy or streaky trace. It has the peculiar quality of drying in beautiful waves, creases and swirls. It is also an excellent dressing for the hair, keeping it delightfully soft and silky. A few ounces from your druggist will last for weeks. It is best applied with a clean tooth brush, drawing this down the full length of the hair.

CLOUDS ECLIPSE ECLIPSE OF SUN.

Elaborate Preparations to Study Phenomenon go for Naught.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, June 8.— Astronomers from the staff of the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago and other observatories who gathered at the University of Denver Observatory today to make observations of the total eclipse of the sun found that their elaborate preparations went for naught as a result of heavy clouds which covered the sky during the greater part of the eclipse.

MILLION SEES SUN'S ECLIPSE.

edge of the sun at 3:03 o'clock, the precise moment predicted according to the wonderful astronomical calculations—predicted many years previous to the event. The eclipse was shorn of all the terrors which formerly accompanied such an event by a knowledge of the laws governing the motions of the two heavenly bodies producing the phenomena.

At 4:21 p.m. the maximum effect was produced, and the black body of the moon had obscured three-fourth's of the surface of the sun, leaving a bright narrow crescent, which still gave the effect of nearly full daylight, having only a tinge of gloom.

A great number of photographs were taken along the entire line of totality from Washington to Florida, and for the first time moving pictures were attempted. Photographs of the partial phases of the eclipse were also produced in all other parts of the country. In this city Samuel J. Keese, at No. 1509 Shatto street, successfully employed the five-inch telescope belonging to the Academy of Sciences to view the sun, and projected a large image a foot in diameter on a white screen for the benefit of numerous visitors, and the result was very effective. Several large sunspots were visible near the western limb.

One of the novel effects was produced by the rays of the sun percolating through the foliage of trees and forming reverse images of the crescent on the smooth pavement. Similar images were formed by puncturing a card with a pinhole and permitting the sun's rays to shine through it upon a white surface.

Whittier thus describes such an event in the olden times:

'Twas on a May-day of the far old year
Seventeen Hundred and Eighty, that there fell
Over the bloom and sweet life of the Spring,
Over the fresh earth and the heaven of noon,
A horror of great darkness, like the night
In day of which the Norland sagas tell—
The twilight of the Gods. The low-hung sky
Was black with ominous clouds, save where its rims
Was fringed with a dull glow, like that which climbs
The crater's sides from the red hell below.
Birds ceased to sing, and all the barn-yard fowls
Roosted; the rattle at the pasture bars
Lowed and looked homeward; bats on leathern wings
Flitted abroad; the sounds of labor died;
Men prayed and women wept; all ears grew sharp
To hear the doom-blast of the trumpet shatter
The black sky, that the dreadful face of Christ
Might look from the rent clouds, not as he looked
A loving guest at Bethany, but stern
As Justice and inexorable law.
Meanwhile in the old State House, dim as ghosts,
Sat the lawgivers of Connecticut,
Trembling beneath their Legislative robes.
"It is the Lord's Great Day! Let us adjourn,"
Some said; and then, as if with one accord,
All eyes were turned to Abraham Davenport.
He rose, slow cleaving with his steady voice
The intolerable hush. "This well may be
The Day of Judgment which the world awaits;
But be it so or not, I only know
My present duty, and my Lord's command
To occupy till he come. So at the post
Where he hath set me in his providence,
I choose, for one, to meet him face to face,
And therefore, with all reverence, I would say,
Let God do his work, we will see to ours.
Bring in the candles."
Then by the flaring lights the speaker read,
Albeit with husky voice and shaking hands,
An act to regulate the fisheries,
His awe-struck colleagues listening all the while,
Between the pauses of his argument,
To hear the thunder of the wrath of God
Break from the hollow trumpet of the cloud.

ASTRONOMER'S FLYING SON HURT IN FRANCE.

REPORT COMES AS FATHER STUDIES ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

GOLDENDALE (Wash.) June 8.—Prof. W. W. Campbell, of Lick Observatory, at Mt. Hamilton, Cal., who is here to study the phenomena of today's solar eclipse, received a cablegram from France today, stating that his son, Lieut. Douglas Campbell, an American aviator, in France, was slightly wounded.

The cablegram was signed by an officer of the American expeditionary forces, it was said, and brought little information beyond the fact that young Campbell was wounded in action and that his injury was not serious.

Prof Campbell, in the rush of final preparations for the scientific observations he hopes to make when the moon obscures the sun and darkness descends on this region later today, was unperturbed by the news and apparently paid it slight heed, beyond expressing belief that the boy's life was not endangered by his wounds.

When informed several days ago of his son's latest exploit, in bringing down his sixth enemy airplane, Prof. Campbell made the comment that his son is a good athlete and chauffeur, quick to decide and quick to act, and without fear. When a friend spoke of the dangerous character of the aviation service, the scientist said:

"A man's life should not be measured in years, but by what he accomplishes. My son's letters say he is happy to be over there."

The honor of being known as his country's first aviation "ace" was earned spectacularly by Lieut. Douglas Campbell on May 31. It was a twenty-minute air battle in which his opponent refused to surrender, but accepted instead the alternative of being shot down by the American.

Lieut. Campbell sighted the German at the height of 4500 meters. The German tried to escape when his ammunition became exhausted, by fleeing toward his own lines. Campbell got on his tail and signaled to him the opportunity of landing safely on French soil. The German declined.

"I did not like the idea of shooting him down when he was not fighting," Campbell said later, "but I could not let him get away." A stream of incendiary bullets ended the German's career.

Campbell downed his first enemy air pilot on April 15; his second on May 21, and his last three, during the subsequent ten days.

HAZE HAMPERS ASTRONOMERS.

of plans of more than fifty photographs made will almost, if not quite, solve the few remaining problems as to solar atmosphere and distance from sun surface.

FEW LIGHT CLOUDS.

While the sky was not entirely clear, light, hazy clouds prevailing are not believed to have seriously hampered observations.

"We secured fine results undoubtedly," said J. C. Hammond, head of the Naval Observatory party. "The thin clouds hindered little, if any."

That the photographic and spectroscopic work will produce most successful results was the opinion of Dr. S. A. Mitchell, director of Leander McCormick Observatory, University of Virginia. He has been to many foreign lands for similar study, and in comparing observations elsewhere with those today said, in part:

"The conditions were better than during the Sumatra eclipse, but not quite so good as in Spain, where an absolutely clear sky prevailed. However, we certainly will get excellent results from our work today and the expedition is a success, and very much worth while. We have been amply repaid for the trip."

A SLIGHT ERROR.

The first contact reported from the five-inch equatorial by Mr. Hammond and flashed to the Naval Observatory at Washington was at forty-six minutes and fifty-five seconds past 2 o'clock, five seconds earlier than figured, due to a slight error in computation of the moon's position.

According to Dr. Mitchell, the first contact of eclipse in Spain was ten seconds early, showing closer calculation in the present instance than then.

The Naval Observatory work was under the direction of J. C. Hammond, assisted by C. C. Wylie and W. M. Conrad, solar atmospheric composition and extent from the sun surface being their objective. Spectroscopic work was directed by Prof. S. A. Mitchell and Prof. L. G. Hoxton of Leander McCormick Observatory, University of Virginia, of which the former is director, Drs. Mary Murray Hopkins and Harriet Bigelow of Smith College, the only two women astronomers here, assisting.

Visual observation was made by Dr. George H. Peters of the Naval Observatory, who, while he has traveled all over the world studying eclipses, today for the first time actually witnessed one, on the previous occasions having operated instruments in dark rooms.

Special study of the corona lights was made by Edward D. Adams and Kempton Adams of New York and Howard Russell Butler, an oil painter of Reno, who came from Princeton, N. J., and made a study of the colors of the corona, listing several hundred varying shades by shorthand system of numbering. Dr. P. R. Merrill of the bureau of standards also confined his work to the study of the coronal light effect.

SUCCESSFUL OBSERVATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LICK OBSERVATORY (Cal.) June 8.—A telegram to the Lick Observatory from Director W. W. Campbell, reports the entirely successful observation of the full programme planned for the station at Goldendale, Wash. There had been threatening clouds up to near the time of totality, but an unexpected break in the clouds gave an absolutely clear sky at the critical time.

The eclipse was an unusually dark one, with less diffused light than often has been seen at totality. The type of the solar corona was intermediate, at this eclipse, between those observed respectively at the maximum and minimum of sunspot activity.

Notably fine groups of sunspots were visible on the surface of the sun wherever observations of any phase of the eclipse were made.

The first and last contacts were observed at Mount Hamilton, where the eclipse was partial.

At the station at Goldendale, the observing party included Astronomers Campbell, Curtis and Moore of Lick, Prof. Lewis of the University of California and several volunteer observers.

This is the eleventh total eclipse for which thirteen expeditions have been sent from Lick observatory. Only three failures, the Japan, Labrador and Russia, have been encountered, all due to storms at the apex of totality.

The present expedition has been financed by W. H. Crocker, which enabled the observatory to study the solar corona on several previous expeditions.

EXACTLY AS PREDICTED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

GOLDENDALE (Wash.) June 8.—The total eclipse of the sun came at Goldendale today on schedule time and all the things that the members of the Lick party of astronomers represented would happen occurred exactly as predicted. The first contact was announced by Dr. John F. Brashear of Pittsburgh, Pa., at forty-one minutes and thirty second past 2 o'clock. Dr. Brashear operated a focus telescope at the Lick station. The contact was visible to people with their smoked glasses about five minutes afterwards.

The hour following the denoting of the first contact was an anxious period for Dr. William Wallace Campbell, director of the station, his assistant astronomers and guests, as clouds kept rolling up over the sun until about ten minutes before the period of totality occurred. At this time a clear space was formed around the eclipse. At three minutes and thirty seconds before 4 o'clock, all assistants operating the fourteen instruments in place at the station were ordered to their places and at 3:59 Mrs. Joseph H. Moore started to count off the seconds of the period of totality.

A number of guests who have been with other Lick expeditions pronounced the corona of the eclipse here today the most beautiful they had ever seen.

CLOUDS BAR PHOTOS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

GREEN RIVER (Wyo.) June 8.—Clouds, appearing during the partial phase when today's eclipse of the sun neared totality caused much anxiety to the many astronomers gathered here to make observations, but a sketch of the corona and a number of photographs were secured by two astronomers who drove swiftly to a point three and one-half miles northwest of the observing station, and these, it is thought, were the only photog secured.

STUDIED BY SCIENTI

COL. FANEUF EXPRESSES GRATITUDE OF REGIMENT FOR CORDIAL RECEPTION.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, June 8.—Declaring that during their entire trip since they left Camp Kearny nearly two weeks ago they were at no time so cordially welcomed nor so royally entertained as in Pomona, the officers and men of the One Hundred and Forty-third Artillery left this city this morning at 8 o'clock on the last lap of their return journey to the camp.

Last night 5000 people thronged to the Greek Theater in Ganesha Park to attend the entertainment given by the members of the One Hundred and Forty-third Regiment Band and other talented entertainers in the regiment. As a result of the proceeds, the committee in charge of the ticket sale turned over $800 to the mess fund of the regiment.

True to schedule, the regiment arrived in Pomona yesterday at noon and was escorted to its camping ground near the entrance of Ganesha Park. For the evening meal the boys and officers were the guests of the different homes of this city, all having made preparations for a big feast for the men.

The warm place which Pomona has in the hearts of the He-men of Camp Kearny was expressed by Col. Faneuf, when he said: "Of all the places we have visited on our hike, the welcome which has been extended by Pomona has been the best. When it comes our turn to go 'over there' I can assure you that our thoughts will often turn to Pomona and to you."

FEDERAL ARRESTS.

An I.W.W. Adherent and German Who Took French Leave, Now Captives.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, June 8.—William Ingram, carpenter employed on the construction of the new residence for C. K. G. Billings, was arrested at his home today on a Presidential warrant. It is understood Ingram has been accused of pro-German utterances and I.W.W. activities. Some weeks ago his fellow employees held a patriotic flag raising to compel a number of I.W.W. followers to salute the flag.

The officers have also landed in jail Wilhelm Franz Nicholson, German alien charged with leaving Santa Barbara without leave. He was hurriedly caught at San Diego as he was crossing the border. He admits having intended to get into Mexico and says he understands thousands of German reservists are assembled in that country, but denies sympathy with their activities.

WIENER MEN UP IN ARMS.

Sale of Only One Sandwich to a Person, Decree of Food Administrator.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, June 8.—Venice wiener men are up in arms over the action of the food administrators of the bay district—F. H. Davis of this city and Harry R. Johnson of Santa Monica—in jointly ordering the immediate putting into effect of the new regulations that forbid the sale of more than one wiener sandwich to a person. The Venice men claim that they have already ordered for Sunday; that it is too late to cut down the supply, and that the new regulation means that they will lose nearly all their trade tomorrow because it will be hard to explain to the public why one person cannot purchase several sandwiches for a party of picnickers on the sands.

Food Administrator Davis is firm in his decision that the order must go into effect at once, and in this he has the support of Chief Harry J. Raymond of the Venice police department, although the wiener men declare they will appeal to Washington or to State Food Administrator Merritt for the removal of Mr. Davis and the holding up of the regulation until next week.

Many Santa Monica and Ocean Park wiener men also have protested at the short notice given, but they all realize that this is war time.

RAID OF SEA DEVILS AWAKENS THE MINERS.

HUSKY YOUNG MEN OF DESERT ARE RALLYING TO THEIR COUNTRY'S CALL.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RANDSBURG, June 7.—The U-boat raid on the Atlantic Coast has brought to life the dominant patriotism of the men in the mining district. Since Wednesday last, when The Times reached the desert camps, five young huskies have passed through this camp to join the colors as enlisted men.

The general sentiment, was tersly expressed by Frank Morrison, who had been waiting to be called by the draft. He sold out his mining interests, and left to enlist in the navy, as he had passed the physical examiniation at Bakersfield in March.

"Now that the Huns have crossed the ocean, it is time for every able-bodied man to get busy," was his parting salute as he jumped on the stage for Mojave.

The U-boat raid has awakened the miners throughout the district, and pro-German sentiment which has been in evidence in the past, is now a dead letter.

HARBOR HOTEL WILL COST HALF MILLION.

DESIGNED TO ACCOMMODATE WORKMEN AND TO COVER ONE CITY BLOCK.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, June 8.—Work is expected to be begun here next week on the construction of the long-proposed workmen's hotel, which is to be erected to cover an entire city block bounded by Beacon, Palos Verdes, First and Santa Cruz streets, and which will cost $500,000 to complete.

Financial affairs were pronounced completed by officials of the United Holding Company of San Francisco, who are financing the builders and who paid a visit to the harbor yesterday. The contract for the building will be let to the Milwaukee Building Company, they said.

The building will be of frame construction and will contain 632 rooms with 1000 beds. On the first floor will be a number of stores, a dining-room with a capacity of 2500 persons each meal, a pool hall containing sixteen tables, and a lobby and lecture hall.

The second and third floors will be built in units, each unit to have twenty-seven rooms on a floor, or fifty-four rooms per unit. The building will have fourteen fire escapes and will cover 90,000 feet of land. The land, building and furnishings will cost at least $500,000. The site selected is known as the Elliott & Horne property.

UNIQUE SCHEME FOR THRIFT STAMP DRIVE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA, June 8.—Chairman Frank J. Townsend of the Santa Monica War Savings Stamp drive is planning a striking arrangement for announcing the progress of the drive that culminates on June 28 with a pledge day when this city is expected to have $200,000 promised and the Ocean Park district, under Chairman H. H. Raymond, pledges totaling $50,000.

A fifty-foot flag pole is to be erected at the front of the City Hall, and will be rigged like the mast of a ship, to emphasize the fact that the two billion dollars asked for in the stamp drive is primarily for the building of ships. The base of the mast will rest upon a miniature ship keel and one rib will be added to the ship for every $1000 worth of stamps sold. When the vessel is completed there will be an official launching in token that this community has gone over the top in the drive.

Girls! Use Lemons! Make a Bleaching, Beautifying Cream

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp get in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is simply marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

CLAREMONT, June 8.—Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at the family home on Indian Hill boulevard for Miss Margaret Stoner who was stricken suddenly with pneumonia about a week ago and failed to rally.

Miss Stoner, a native of Republic, Kan., had made her home here with her mother for nearly ten years, was a junior at Pomona College, and a musician of rare ability, having recently acted as organist in the First Christian Church at Pomona. She leaves to mourn her loss, beside her mother, Mrs. W. W. Stoner, a sister, Louise, and two brothers, Willard Stoner of Hollywood, and Clarence Stoner of this city. Scores of friends in Pomona and Claremont were saddened by the sudden passing of the young musician.

WAR-TIME SIMPLICITY AT COMMENCEMENT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CLAREMONT, June 8.—By adopting a French orphan to support with the money usually expended on a class day programme and the purchase of a class banner, Claremont High School seniors are proving their patriotism in a most substantial manner. The time-honored class day exercises, scheduled for June 12, are to be omitted entirely this year. Formal commencement exercises will be held on Friday evening, June 14, in the High School auditorium.

On the morning of the 14th the grammar school graduation exercises will take place in the school court with the presentation of an operetta at 9:30 o'clock.

Painless Dentistry and the X-Ray Diagnosis

The X-Ray is regarded by scientific men and learned students of medicine and dentistry as the one greatest discovery of the twentieth century for the location and removal of humanity's various ailments and disorders. Second to the X-Ray in importance is the scientific method by which the most serious bodily disorders are removed without causing the patient the slightest sensation of pain. But the X-Ray comes first.

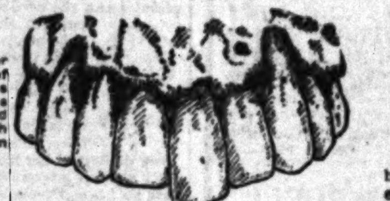
Were it not for this wonderful agent, it would be absolutely impossible to correctly diagnose many physical disorders—particularly those which are prevalent at the roots of the teeth.

The X-Ray is invaluable in locating what the dental profession terms the "blind alveolevar abscess" which forms at the root of a tooth and is caused by the exuding of poisonous gases that are formed by the decay of the dead nerve within the walls of the tooth and which have no outlet except through the optical foraman, causing a constant infection and formation of poison which is taken up by the blood and conveyed to all parts of the body. But this deadly poison demonstrates itself only in the weakest parts of the body which are unable to fight it off, and which give evidence of its presence by a diseased condition. My experience in the scientific use of analgesia enables me to guarantee to perform the most serious dental operation absolutely

Without Pain.

My record of successful dental work covers a period of 10 years in Los Angeles. I was formerly located in the W. P. Story Bldg. Prior to this time I had gained valuable experience as dental surgeon of the United States Army during the Spanish-American war, successfully treating dental disorders of the most varied and intricate nature. Included among my many patients are a number of the best known people in Los Angeles—the type of people who are used to the best. That my work and my charges have proven satisfactory is evidenced by testimonials such as are reproduced below.

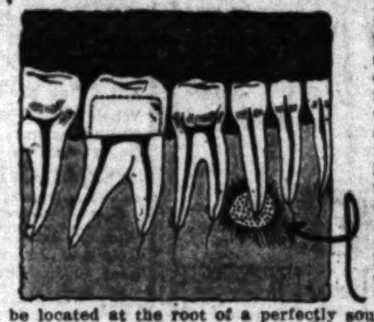
Pyorrhea Is the "White Plague" of the Mouth—I Have Successfully Treated Hundreds of Cases—



Pyorrhea or receding of the gums causes loosening and loss of teeth as shown in illustration.

My very extensive experience in the study of Pyorrhea, its symptoms and its treatment covers a period of many years and extends over three continents. I have been unusually successful in treating Pyorrhea. If taken in its earlier stages this disease easily yields to treatment. It is said that 75 per cent. of people of over 30 years of age are affected by Pyorrhea, a disease of the gums that causes soreness, bleeding and receding. If neglected it releases a constant poison into the blood which saps physical vitality and results in other serious disorders.

The X-Ray Is to Modern Dentistry What the Aeroplane Is to Warfare

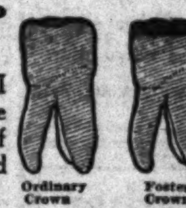


By the use of my X-ray I can determine if there is an abscess and its exact location. By the modern scientific use of analgesia I can quickly reach this trouble, permanently remove it and save the tooth without causing the patient the slightest pain, as borne out by many testimonials that I possess. I make no extra charge for X-ray treatment when other work is done.

A dull ache of the jaw or a neuralgic condition of the face and head are sometimes the only symptoms denoting the presence of a blind alveolevar abscess, as it may be located at the root of a perfectly sound tooth. Many dentists inexperienced in the diagnosis and treatment of this condition will needlessly extract the tooth.

DR. FOSTER SOLID CUSP CROWNS ARE THE BEST

The Foster crown is a solid cusp crown. I guarantee these crowns to last a lifetime. The accompanying illustration gives a fair idea of the thickness of the Foster crown as compared with the ordinary crown.



NATURAL PLATES

The Foster Thin Metal Plate Is Sanitary

The Foster thin metal plate is a far cry from the old style rubber plates that our grandfathers and grandmothers used. It symbolizes the advance of modern scientific dentistry. It is so constructed as to completely eliminate the difficulty in talking, which was one of the many disadvantages of the old rubber plates. I also make them, where the case requires it, so that they fill out the hollows of the cheeks and help to do away with lines and wrinkles. (note plate shown above.) They are entirely sanitary, pleasant to wear and closely approach the natural mouthful of teeth that God gave you.

In the small cross sectional diagram notice the difference between the Foster Thin Metal Plate and the ordinary thick rubber plate.

DROP SOLDIER'S WIFE AS VENICE TEACHER.

DISMISSAL BECAUSE OF MARRIAGE BRINGS PROTEST FROM HER FRIENDS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, June 8.—The dismissal of a Venice school teacher, now the wife of an army officer stationed at Camp Lewis, by the action of the Venice Central grammar school board today, over the protest of Charles A. Short, recently-elected school trustee, has caused a furore in this city. The dismissed teacher, formerly Miss Cordelia Smith, and now the wife of Lieut. Rutherford, was dropped from the teaching force, according to the official statement of the board, because of the rule that when a woman marries she loses her position as teacher.

According to Mr. Short, who strenuously opposed the dismissal, this rule should be laid aside for patriotic reasons, as Mrs. Rutherford's husband is about to go to France to risk his life for his country. The school trustee further told his colleagues that such action would be a disgrace to the community, and that he, for one, would not vote for the dismissal of a soldier's wife.

In spite of Mr. Short's protest, the two other members of the board, Dr. Byron Palmer and Herman Michel, voted to remove Mrs. Rutherford and to give her position to Miss Kittie Asplund, who has been supplying, in the absence teachers' room, the third grade at the Central grammar school.

Mrs. Rutherford had been a teacher for several years at Venice. She obtained leave of absence some months ago in order to wed Lieut. A. H. Rutherford and to remain near his cantonment until he was called overseas. She recently obtained an extension of her leave, with the understanding that she would not need to appear for school until next fall, according to her friends, who are agitating for a mass meeting for the purpose of causing the board to rescind its action on patriotic grounds.

HELP THE CITY TO HELP YOU!

If in an Assessment District Give City Clerk Your Address.

City Clerk Wilde has made the announcement that property owners of Los Angeles may be assured of receiving notices of any and all public improvement proceedings affecting their properties if they will furnish his office in the City Hall with their addresses and lists of properties owned by them.

Mr. Wilde advises that this be done, declaring that both trouble and extra expense may often be avoided by persons who will adopt the suggestion. He explains that much trouble arises from the fact that correct names and addresses of persons assessed for improvements often do not appear on the city map and lot records.

Trail of Earthquake?

TRANGE NATURAL PHENOMENON COSTS THE CRUSOE OF SALTON SEA HIS ISLAND.

pid Evaporation of Waters Uncovers New Set of Geysers of Boiling Mud, Miniature Volcanoes Emerging from Earth's Hot Core and Spouting Continuously—Government Geologists Much Interested.

evaporation of the Salton Sea has, during the past weeks, revealed a new set strange mud geysers or vol- which excited the attention gists prior to 1905, when the was filled by the over- the Colorado River. There of the new geysers, all and spouting mud and steam ually.

geysers lie on the east- of the great inland lake, from Niland, at the head Imperial Valley. Members United States Geological Survey already visited them, and objects of great interest to who have heard of their after thirteen years of Capt. catches the mullet which in the sea, and must have water to float his fishing craft.

THE SALTON SEA.

Salton Sea is either as calm ruffled as a pond covered or it is a churning, white- threatening body of water piles driftwood high up on gently-sloping shores, and spray upon the rocky islets fringe the sea on the eastern driven by winds born high up Gorgonio pass and with a sweep for more than sixty report of the United States Survey for 1902 mentions "mud volcanoes" southwest of was Imperial Junction, and is now Niland. They are ex- in this report as fissures ex- from subterranean bodies of similar to those in Yellow- Park, but not so active. The is created by the falling into steam body of the fine silt the surface crust of the basin, carried down in suc- overflows of the mischievous Colorado River through the New and Alamo River channels.

BECAME FORGOTTEN.

When, in 1906, the Colorado broached the diversion structure erected by the Imperial Valley Irrigation Company and flowed westward and northward through the valley into the Salton Basin, then a dry, salt encrusted area, the mud geysers were covered by many feet of water. The banks of the sea extended to the valley branch of the Southern Pacific, and forced this railroad to move its tracks on the northern shore many times. People forgot about the mud geysers. They have only emerged this year, and are a source of great interest to all who make the trip from Niland to see them.

Near the center of the group of geysers is a large, boiling pond of water and mud from which steam issues in puffs. This cauldron is not always active. On some days it is simply a round mudhole of normal temperature. On other days it bubbles mud and steam and contains pools of very hot water.

Four or five of the geysers have hollow mud pots for oulets, these seldom being active. Some of these pots are five feet high, and are formed by successive spoutings of mud and steam. Others are simply small, springlike fissures which intermittently spout mud, water and steam into the air several feet high.

The water issuing from these geysers is strongly impregnated with arsenic, and is, of course, unfit for drinking. No vegetable growth exists for hundreds of feet around them.

EARTHQUAKES, TOO.

The dweller upon Bird Island is authority for the statement that short, sharp earthquake shocks are frequent in the vicinity of the geysers. On one occasion a rock from the summit of Bird Island toppled down on Davis's storehouse during one of the seismic disturbances and mussed up a perfectly good catch of mullet cached therein.

As the grain from thousands of acres in the valley, washed down to the sea in the New and Alamo rivers, attracts the hundreds and sometimes thousands of ducks and geese, so the myriads of mullet and carp in the body of water attract the pelican, which nest in large numbers on the islands and flat shores of the sea. Several species of heron also find sustenance and happiness on the shores of the sea, and plover abound.

The parent pelican has a penchant for deserting her young before they have the power of flight, and many are lost by waddling into the mud on the shores of the sea and starve while thus held.

The geese and heron are "wild," as the sportsman would say. They make their nests in the flat marshy country between the mouths of the New and Alamo rivers, or in the many bayous on the south shore of the lake. Living comes easy with these winged denizens of the sea, as the mullet are numerous and feed near the surface.

PLENTY OF MULLET.

There are few carp in the lake at present, it seems, the Colorado River mullet having proved able to withstand the large alkaline content of the sea better than the carp. The mullet find a ready market in Los Angeles, and Capt. Davis makes shipments to the city twice a week.

At one time a group of capitalists from Los Angeles started a fish cannery at Salton, on the north shore of the Salton Sea, near its northern extremity. They planned to seine the fish in the lake and market the canned product. Financial difficulties came while the lake receded and left their pier high and dry, where it remains today.

Another project, that of making a bathing resort on the sea for the people of Imperial Valley and surrounding country, is held in abeyance because the island on which Calipatria men planned to erect a bath-house was left high and dry by the rapidly receding water. The temperature of the seashore is several degrees cooler than that of the valley proper, and many parties motor to the sea in summer to enjoy the cool breezes which almost invariably blow over the lake.

E. C. LaRue, in his "Colorado River Utilization," issued as a Geological Survey paper last year, states that the Salton Sea will continue to evaporate until 1926, when, if the present rate of flow of the New and Alamo rivers is maintained, the immense lake will be a permanent stationary body of water covering between 40,000 and 50,000 acres.

RECESSION OF SEA.

Prof. LaRue found that during 1915 the evaporation was 4.1 feet, or 373,000 acre-feet. The average evaporation since the creation of the Salton Sea by the Colorado River in 1906 and 1907, was 5.8 feet. In some parts of the basin this means that the sea receded more than three-fourths of a mile.

From March, 1907, until January, 1916, the sea evaporated from 93,000 acres, which were ready for ranching immediately after the vacation of the water. During March, 1907, the evaporation amounted to 291,000 acre-feet. During January, 1916, 198,000 acre-feet. The fall, in the nine years was 38 feet.

The total inflow from the New and Alamo rivers, formed by the water from waste ditches of Imperial Valley ranchers, was 1,700,000 acre-feet last year.

The Southern Pacific Land Company owns every alternate section under the surface of the sea. As fast as these submerged sections appear, they are placed on the market, and ranchers with their plows and seeders follow the receding waters, some of the best grain-raising soils in the Imperial basin being found on the shores of the sea, irrigation being from dams on the Alamo and New rivers.

PACIFIC SHIPYARD SURE OF FIRST HONOR FLAG.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Los Angeles, or, at least, some shipyard on the Pacific Coast, is certain to have the honor of flying the first blue flag to be awarded for the leading shipyard of the nation. The whole Pacific Coast now lead the rest of the United States in rivetting records. Washington and Oregon stand first and California second. The Pacific Coast shows a record of 33,000 rivets per week, as against 9000 for the North Atlantic, 6000 for the Gulf and 14,000 for the Great Lakes.

On the same basis, Oregon and Washington hung up a record of 46,000 and California 30,000 plus. Of the California yards, the Union Iron Works at San Francisco led all the Coast yards, with a record of 65,000 rivets per way per week, and the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company stood eighth in the list with 35,000 rivets per way per week.

Director-General Schwab has secured the appointment of a competitive board that will award to the plant making the best record all around a blue flag and the second best a red flag, and each plant winning the first or second flag can fly it until some other yard takes it away with a better record.

This same competitive board will award service medals to all shipyard workers on government ships, and will also award silver and gold medals to the men for distinguished or important services rendered by the individual. The service medal will be of bronze and any employee of a shipyard working on government ships who has done his work well and been on the job for four consecutive months will be entitled to wear the badge. Each four months will add a bar to the medal, and the winner will be allowed to wear the service medal with the bars of service until he leaves the government works. The badge is always the property of the government, and penalties for falsely wearing such a badge are provided.

Important.

FEDERAL TARIFF BOARD TO HOLD SESSIONS HERE.

Will Confer with Citrus-Fruit and Olive Growers on Crops.

THROUGH the Chamber of Commerce, notice has been given by Secretary William M. Stewart, of the United States Tariff Commission, to Southern California growers of citrus fruits and olives, and producers of olive oil and citric acid, that hearings of vital importance will be held in the chamber assembly room, the 17th and 18th inst. for the purpose of reaching a thorough understanding with reference to the tariff situation in connection with these products. It is expected that four members of the commission, William Kent, William S. Culbertson, Edward P. Costigan and David J. Lewis will be present at the meeting to discuss these important questions with ranchers and manufacturers of this section. This meeting will be the first to be held in Los Angeles since the appointment of the Tariff Commission.

The first day will be devoted to the discussion of the present condition of the citrus industry and developments since the Tariff Act of October 3, 1913 and on the second day similar data will be gathered with reference to the olive industry. The meetings will begin at 10 a.m. The chamber, under whose auspices the conferences will be held, urges all who are interested in the development of these industries to be present.

PROGRAMME OUTLINED.

The programme as outlined in the official announcement will include the following subjects:

Extent to which the American production can supply domestic requirements.

Comparison of competitive foreign with domestic products in prices, quality, methods of packing and shipping, demand.

War disturbances—effect on production, labor, shipping, markets, expansion of growing areas, supplies of commercial fertilizer and other essential materials.

Costs of production and distribution in 1918 as compared with 1913 and 1914; land values, labor, materials, shipping, marketing and other items of cost, specified. Comparison of costs with those of foreign countries.

Foreign competition: conditions in the industry in other countries that may affect competition with domestic products; extent to which foreign organizations control prices, production and distribution, and stimulate trade. Description of internal and export taxes in other countries and their effect on the trade.

OTHER SUBJECTS.

Division of domestic markets between domestic and foreign crops; to what extent has there been such a division. Comparison of rates to the eastern States with ocean freights from foreign sources of supply in 1913, 1914 and 1918.

Panama Canal: Shipments via canal, effect upon transportation costs to the East under normal shipping conditions.

Adaptability of producing areas to other crops.

Prospects for by-product industries.

Export markets: Prospects of increasing exports; restrictions; plant quarantines and inspection requirements of other countries.

The effect, if any, of the activities of the Federal and State governments in stimulating the industry—such items as standard grades, standard containers, quarantines and inspection, control of insect pests and fungous diseases.

FOR WAR PRISONERS' FUND.

A the dansant will be given on June 22 at the British Ambulance Room, No. 111 East Fourth street, between 3:30 and 6:30 o'clock. Members of the Princess Mary Chapter, Daughters of British Empire, will act as hostesses. The entire proceeds will be donated to the Prisoners of War Fund.

COMES AS PRISONER.

Man Alleged to have Taken Blank Money Orders is Brought from San Jose to Face Charge.

C. H. Branch, former assistant postmaster at Azusa, from which postoffice he is alleged to have misappropriated a block of blank money orders and then disappeared, was brought to Los Angeles from San Francisco yesterday by Deputy United States Marshal Jesson of the northern city.

Branch was arrested recently at San Jose by postoffice inspectors. He had been operating a jitney bus there. He had been a fugitive from justice for nearly a year.

HURT SOLDIERS TO LEARN ARTS.

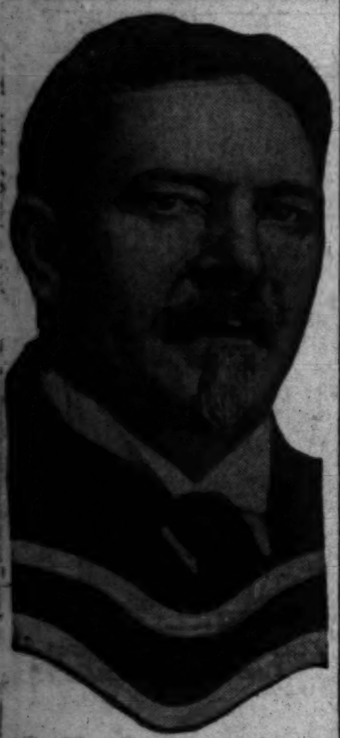
Eastern Sculptor, Here, will Aid Movement.

Useful Crafts to be Taught Returning Men.

This City an Ideal Place for One of Centers.

Karl Rydingsvard, well-known decorative sculptor of New York City, who is spending a year in Los Angeles, has just received an appeal from the United States government to take a prominent place in establishing centers where soldiers maimed or invalided by war may be taught arts and crafts adapted to their special conditions.

This is Mr. Rydingsvard's first visit to California and he believes returning soldiers whose bodies have been mutilated and minds shocked by the war will be more quickly healed in the beauty and sunshine of this land than anywhere else. In an informal speech before many of the leading craft workers of Los Angeles at the studios of Florence Erwin Walker, No. 767 Edgemont avenue, Mr. Rydinsgvard declared that science now recognized the necessity of teaching people whose physical powers are affected by suffering and disease to "do something." He strongly advocated immediate preparations for the soldiers and believes that a bungalow where all the arts and crafts could be taught on a modest scale should be the first move.



Karl Rydingsvard.

Such a plan, he said, was a tremendous success in Manchester, N. H., where he started with a few mill workers in an attic and in sixteen years they had a membership of 1600 and a property worth $200,000. "Begin small, but begin at once," was his plea.

Of Swedish birth, Mr. Rydingsvard is a graduate of the Technical Institute of Stockholm. He was chosen when he was 20 to come with several other prize-winning students to America to execute a carved frieze in the Vanderbilt mansion. He has set a pace that gives wood carvers a recognized place among the artists of the world, and has been an instructor in colleges and schools in Boston and New York, as well as the Middle West.

Los Angeles can be pre-eminent as a haven for men who have fought in France, providing there is a training place where returning soldiers may acquire an occupation that will make them economically independent, he says.

BAPTIST YOUNG FOLK WILL GIVE BENEFIT.

ENTERTAINMENT WILL BE FOR THE MISSION AT TERMINAL ISLAND.

Patriotic young folks of the First Baptist Church, under the direction of Miss Lila O. Hayes of Canada, active Red Cross worker in the recent big Los Angeles drive, have planned an interesting programme for the B.Y.P.U. tomorrow evening in the church auditorium, No. 727 South Flower street. This is a benefit entertainment for the repairing of the mission at Terminal Island, San Pedro. Associated with Miss Hayes is Mrs. Guy Bush, local song writer; Miss Josephine Landrum, teacher of elocution at Manual Arts High School, and Miss Emiah Meacham, president of the B.Y.P.U.

Miss Hayes, who spent the last winter in Los Angeles with her aunt, Mrs. J. B. Hayes, will sing several national airs. Her brother has recently been invalided back to Canada, after service at the front, and several of her cousins are with the Canadian Expeditionary Force at present.

Others who will contribute to the programme are Miss Anna M. Hayes, Lyle Gould, Mrs. Alberta Carr, Marjorie Boyd, Lenora Robertson, Catherine Southwick, Elsie Qualman, Maxine McCreery, Roy Hanlin, Earle Lawrence and Oweth Collings.

IN CHILD WELFARE WORK.

Mrs. Nina Carson, who was supervising nurse in the county health office, has received appointment as a special worker in the State Board of Health in child welfare work. She was succeeded by Mrs. Ethel Sears.

WAR STAMP RALLY.

PINE TREE ASSOCIATION HOLDS ANNUAL PICNIC.

THE eclipse of the sun cast no gloom upon the holiday spirit of 300 members of the Maine State Association, who gathered for their annual picnic in Sycamore Grove yesterday. T. R. Croswell, president of the association, started the afternoon programme early in order that there might be no competition between the entertainers on the speakers' stand and Sol. Luna & Co.

Appropriately following a reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, delivered by Henry A. Arnold, a Civil War veteran, Fenwicke L. Holmes recited a poem by Florence Varney, entitled "A Song of Maine," dedicated to the young men from that State who are now at the front. The speaker of the day was Judge Frank S. Forbes, who spoke on "Democracy in California," giving a history of the Golden State and telling of the work of the great men of the past and present who have helped to make California the "best State in the Union." Judge Forbes began by speaking of Capt. Hernando de Alacon, discoverer of California, and followed with a brief account of the work of Junipero Serra, Gen. Fremont, James King, Starr King, Theodore Judah, Stephen White and other illustrious pioneers.

While many women sat knitting for the Red Cross, several patriots from the Pine Tree State entertained with witty and patriotic speeches, among the speakers being C. H. Parsons, Rev. C. G. Mosher, Orving O. Bragg of Corona and T. R. Croswell. One of the features of the day was the presence of John S. Arian, an Armenian, who sold cigars to the men, and who never failed to "cuss the Kaiser," free of charge, with every cigar he sold.

Another interesting gathering at Sycamore Grove yesterday was the Sunday-school picnic of the Hollywood Christian Church, attended by 150 children.

GOVERNMENT JOBS OPEN AT HARBOR.

An open competitive (noneducational) examination will be held by the United States Civil Service Commission on June 20 in the engineer's office in the Central Building in this city, to fill places on the United States dredger San Pedro at the harbor. The examinations will be with respect to physical ability, experience and fitness.

The following are wanted: Two dredge engineers, $150 per month; two levermen, $130; three dredge mates, $125; one launch master, $110; three oilers, $100; three firemen, $95; ten deck hands, $90; laborers, $3.50 per day.

TAXES MUST BE PAID.

The large delinquent tax list this year, in the opinion of County Tax Collector Welch, was due to carelessness of property owners. The public is advised to read the list that was published last Wednesday and will be run again next Wednesday and the following Wednesday. A penalty is added if taxes in arrears are not paid.

ASKS CONFERENCE ON CITY IMPROVEMENTS.

COMMERCE CHAMBER SENDS RESOLUTIONS TO MAYOR AND COUNCIL HEAD.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday adopted the following resolutions in regard to public improvements in Los Angeles:

"Whereas, the Capital Issues Committee has addressed a communication to the Mayor and City Council of the city of Los Angeles, requesting that no public improvements be made which are not essential to the prosecution of the war, and

"Whereas, proceedings in reference to certain public improvements deemed to be of vital interest to the people of the city of Los Angeles have been initiated, and

"Whereas, it is the desire of the city officials to proceed with said improvements provided they are not in conflict with the general policies of the Capital Issues Committee in reference to improvements in the various cities throughout the United States, and

"Whereas, it is the desire of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce to co-operate with the government to do every act and thing necessary for the successful prosecution of the war,

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the Mayor of the city of Los Angeles and the president of the City Council be requested to confer with the Capital Issues Committee in reference to the issuance of securities for public improvements in the cities throughout the United States, and

"Be it further resolved, that the Mayor and the City Council be requested to make no public improvements where it will be necessary to issue securities, unless the same have the approval of the Capital Issues Committee."

FOR NEEDY FAMILIES.

Surplus Fruits and Vegetables will be Distributed by County Defense Council.

County chairmen of the Women's Committee of the County Council of Defense outlined the work for the summer at a largely-attended meeting in room 359, Courthouse, yesterday. They will create a center in Los Angeles, which will be under the supervision of the county committee for surplus fruits and vegetables. These will be distributed to needy families.

Children's year work, which promises to be an important feature, was planned and subcommittees for each city unit will be on file within a week. The work was outlined by Miss Julia Lathrop and Dr. Adelaide Brown. The committee directing the movement includes Dr. Russell, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, Dr. J. L. Pomeroy, Mrs. Harvey Trowbridge, Mrs. Lloyd W. Harmon, Mrs. W. H. Anderson, Dr. Louise M. Richter, Mrs. Harry Graves and Mrs. Lowell W. Frost.

GETS SENTENCE TO M'NEIL'S ISLAND.

SIX YEARS FOR COMPTON BANK EMBEZZLER—SAYS HE'S SORRY NOW.

Six and a half years in the Federal prison at McNeil's Island were imposed on C. O. Harbell, confessed embezzler of funds from the First National Bank of Compton, by Federal Judge Bledsoe yesterday.

Friends of the former bank clerk pleaded for leniency because of his wife and children.

"I now see the folly of it all. I wish I hadn't done it," Harbell told the court.

In pronouncing sentence and referring to the defendant's family, Judge Bledsoe said he was forced "to shut his eyes and steel his conscience against these third parties," otherwise the laws of the community could not be upheld.

"There are wives, children and babies already here and babies yet to come in many of these cases," the court said. "If the law takes into consideration these factors it will be making a farce of the statutes."

Harbell was charged on eight counts with the embezzlement of $6107.25 from the bank. He confessed to taking the money, explaining that he had purchased land in Arizona and did not have sufficient money to meet his notes. Later he bought a dairy, after selling the Arizona property, and used the bank's money with which to equip this dairy with stock.

Menace.

WATER HOLE CLAIMS ITS ELEVENTH VICTIM HERE.

SAID to be the seventeenth victim in the last three years, Walter Myers, 11 years old, of No. 2915 Manitou avenue, was drowned in a water hole in the Arroyo Seco, near the Avenue 20 bridge and San Fernando road, yesterday.

The boy, in company with Lewis Carlos and Ernest Amarillo of No. 116 South Griffin avenue, were playing at the edge of the large water-filled hole, and decided to use a large plank for a boat. The lads undressed and were splashing in the water when Myers lost his hold on the board and slipped into the water.

When Lieut. Plummer and several officers from the East Side station arrived on the scene, the boy was dead. For nearly an hour the officers worked over his body, but without success. Myers's two companions succeeded in getting to the sand bank.

Last year five boys were drowned in the water hole, according to the police, and a total of sixteen lives were lost there in the last three years. Through an arrangement with the Playground Commission, a guard was stationed at the place during the summer months last year, and one was to be placed on guard there this season.

MUST PAY OWN FARE.

Supposed Indigent for Whom County Bought Ticket Found to be Well Off.

Mrs. Martha Sheedy, who was about to be sent back to her home in the Middle West as an indigent when it was discovered that she had a large amount of cash in bank, was put on a train by Mrs. Jean Cracken, probation officer, yesterday, but not at the expense of the county.

Mrs. Sheedy came to Los Angeles several months ago. The county bought her a ticket to send her back home when she asked to go downtown on a matter of business. At that time it was found that she was well off, and the ticket was cancelled.

An intoxicated man would positively cause a scandal among these people.

Getting back to frenzied finance, this French money is simple and easily regulated once you become hep to it—far less complicated than the English vintage. The chief objection to it is the size of the pennies or "big sous." There is enough copper in one of these to win the war before fall, and it takes ten of them to make a franc or a hundred of them to make an American dollar. A lady going downtown with enough of these to buy a hat would have to borrow a train of motor lorries from the army.

The centime is the root of all evil in France. Centimes are the seeds from which all the money grows. It takes five of them to make one of our cents, and they are about the size of fish scales. They should never be left near the open window when there is a breeze blowing.

There was a time when you could buy a week's provisions with a centime in France. However, today the centime is a mockery. Nobody stands on the corner and shouts, "Step right up, ladies and gents; only 1 centime or a fifth of a cent."

Anyway, even in peace time who would want to monkey making change in centimines. A man would become near sighted inside of a week. It's too much like picking fly specks out of pepper.

GEORGE A. LEIGHTON ESTATE TO WIDOW.

VARIOUS OTHER SMALL BEQUESTS ALSO MADE IN WILL TO BE PROBATED.

A petition for the probate of the will of George A. Leighton, who died in this city June 5, executed September 16, 1915, was filed in the Probate Court yesterday by the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Company. The estimated value of the estate is in excess of $100,000.

To the widow, Rose A. Leighton, is bequeathed all of the real estate belonging to the deceased. All of the paintings, pictures and books on art are given to the Currier Gallery of Fine Arts, Manchester, N. H., but it is provided that they shall remain in the custody of the surviving widow until her death, or until she desires to relinquish their custody to the final beneficiary.

To his brother, William L. Leighton, Concord, N. H., and his sisters, Ida A. Baker, Baltimore, Md., and Ellen C. Barton, Manchester, N. H., are bequeathed $2000 each. To a nephew, John Leighton, Concord, N. H., and nieces, Cora Leighton and Eleanor M. Leighton, Concord, N. H., Leonora B. Willing, Baltimore, Md., Adele Barton, Manchester, N. H., and Eva Tyson, Revere, Mass., are given $1000 each. To a nephew, Howard Leighton, Revere, Mass., is given $100.

One-half of all the residue of the estate is given to the widow and one-half is to be held in trust by the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank to manage and control, the income to be paid to William L. Leighton, Concord, N. H., and at his death divided with Ada A. Baker, Baltimore, Md., Ellen C. Barton, Manchester, N. H., Eva Tyson and Howard Leighton, Revere, Mass., and the First Universalist Church, Manchester, N. H., as a memorial to Amelia F. A. Leighton, the first wife of the decedent.

EMPLOYEES NEEDED.

Large Number of Positions Open in This City and Vicinity for Help of all Kinds.

There are openings for an unusually large number of men and women, boys and girls, in desirable places of employment in this city and vicinity, according to a review issued yesterday by William L. Clark, superintendent of the Public Employment Bureau for the Los Angeles district.

"We have openings for 500 men," the review states. "We can place ranch hands at $45 a month to $2.50 per day, board included; carpenters at $4.50, plus 5 per cent. bonus on government work; blacksmiths at $4.50, etc., and janitors, bellboys and others almost without limit."

Stenographers and clerks also are in demand. "Young girls for offices and stenographer-book-keepers simply cannot be secured," Mr. Clark says. There is also a distinct shortage of housemaids and cooks.

WAR BRINGS A NEW NEED OF MUSIC HERE.

SALES OF PIANOS, PLAYER PIANOS AND TALKING MACHINES ON INCREASE.

One of the results of the swiftly deepening entrance of the United States into the great war is a greatly increased demand for pianos, player pianos and talking machines, according to the head of a prominent Los Angeles music house. This is explained by the soothing influence which music has upon the ones "over here" whose sons and brothers have gone "over there."

"New billions of war money will be coming into circulation during the next few months," said this music dealer. "Persons living in agricultural districts and industrial centers, large and small, will have more money to spend than ever. Liberty Bonds and Thrift Stamps will rightly have the first claim on the surplus. But the opportunity will not be lost to add to the home certain comforts, long desired, but never before to be afforded. Not the least among these will come pianos, player pianos and talking machines with their added special war-time appeal.

"Mothers and fathers are carrying the load of future possibilities on their shoulders and with their mind full of headlines in their morning and evening paper, they are carrying too much of the world's burden of trouble on their shoulders. Music is a real and present solace to these in such times."

Rates Between Here and San Francisco Advanced by Pacific Company.

Beginning tomorrow, passenger rates on vessels operated by the Pacific Steamship Company between Los Angeles and San Francisco will be advanced approximately one-third. R. E. McDonald, district freight and passenger agent for the company in this city, said yesterday that the increase is necessary to maintain service, as the operating cost of the company had advanced greatly.

The former charge for steamship tickets to San Francisco was $9.50 to $11, the new rates will be from $15 to $16.

While no increase has yet been made in the freight rates, according to Mr. McDonald, it will be only a short time before there is a readjustment and increase. The Pacific Steamship Company is now operating six ships, the President, Governor, Admiral Dewey, Admiral Schley, Queen and the City of Topeka.

CITY TOPS LIST AT ANNAPOLIS.

Seventeen Los Angeles Lads Become Ensigns.

All had First Training at the Harbor Camp.

Remainder of State had Total of Only Ten.

Seventeen Los Angeles youths were among the 450 men from all over the United States graduated as ensigns in the navy from the Annapolis Academy on May 29, according to word received here yesterday by M. H. Wells, father of one of them. Oakland was the only other California city having more than one representative among the total of twenty-seven from the State. These Californians gave the Twelfth District (California) first place in standing at the academy.

All of these young men were about 21 when they enrolled as second-class seamen a year ago. During the year they have passed through all stages of training. In the final four months' training is condensed the usual work of four years. The thorough preliminary work at San Pedro enables this to be done.

At the graduation exercises at the academy on May 29, after diplomas had been handed to the members of the 1918 class by Franklyn D. Roosevelt on behalf of Secretary Daniels, the 450 men were grouped on the wide marble steps of Brandon Hall, the executive building, for the class photograph. A copy of this photograph brought here by Ensign William H. Bloeser shows the twenty-seven Californians occupying the place of honor in a long row at the very front of the picture.

Seven of the boys who went to high school in Los Angeles together have been side by side all through the training, and now are separated for the first time as they receive their assignments as ensigns.

One of them, Don M. Day, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Wells of No. 229 North Wilton place, stood sixth in the class of 450. He played shortstop on the Stanford nine for his class in 1916, and after graduation was an engineer with the Shell Oil Company before enlisting. William H. Bloeser, his classmate, now here with his family at No. 162 North Alexandria street, was given the nickname of "Stupid" by his fellow-seamen because of his high marks in all subjects.

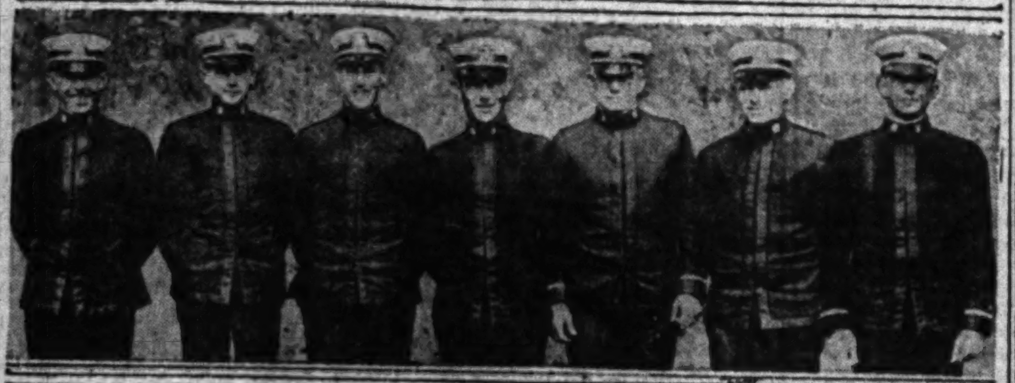
Fred Worth, also from Stanford, where he was prominent on the rowing crew, is the fiance of Dorothy Day, sister of his friend, Don Day. Another Stanford boy, Frank ("Mickey") McClure, was superintendent of the Doheny ranch before his enlistment.

Dan M. Baker, whose sister is the daughter-in-law of Arthur Letts, was a graduate of the Culver Military Academy. Richard C. Enderly, Douglas Moore, son of Charles I. D. Moore of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, and S. E. Breck of Oakland, the remaining three of the septette, were University of California graduates.

The names of the seventeen ensigns from Los Angeles are D. M. Day, Hoyt M. Leisure, Frank E. McClure, P. A. Howard, D. M. Baker, H. C. Harding, R. L. Morrow, G. M. Whiting, W. H. Bloeser, R. C. Enderly, R. R. Brubaker, Fred Worth, J. L. Seaten, J. H. Mitchell, D. E. Moore, J. M. Owen and S. W. Morris. The men making up the total of twenty-seven from California are E. F. Landon of Berkeley, D. C. McFadgen of Dixon, Frank F. Walker of San Francisco, J. H. Fenton of Sacramento, F. E. Wilson of Belvedere, M. B. Veate of Martinez, S. E. Breck and A. J. Grant of Oakland, E. Conley of Pomona and B. Cornell of Long Beach.

Every one of these men received his first training at the naval camp at San Pedro, was given provisional commissions in the Naval Reserve, which are now confirmed, making them a part of the regular United States Navy.

The 181 men who enrolled at the recruiting office of the Naval Reserve force here during the five days ending Wednesday will have the same opportunities these men have had, and a year from now some of them may be receiving diplomas at Annapolis as navy ensigns.



Los Angeles graduates from Annapolis this year,

FOR VACATION TRAVEL.

National Parks and Monuments to be Open This Year as Usual. To Announce Rates Soon.

All the national parks and monuments will be open to the public this season, as usual, notwithstanding the reports that have been in circulation that the government would forbid travel through them on account of war conditions, says a notice received yesterday by Los Angeles railroad officials from P. S. Eustin, chairman of passenger traffic for the Regional Committee of the western division.

Mr. Eustin states that all national parks and monuments will be open to the public for the usual summer season, which extends from June 15 to the last of September, and that rates of fare will be announced within a few days. Railroad officials expressed the belief yesterday that the rates will be but little higher than those of last season.

FOR BELGIAN BABIES.

California Girl, Just Returned from Europe, Raising Money Here by Theater Appeals.

Assisting the Rotary clubs of the country in their campaign to raise funds to buy milk for Belgian babies, Miss Ruby Hulin, an Alameda society girl, who has just returned from Europe, is in Los Angeles and expects to make platform appeals from the several theaters here. On Friday night $160 was collected at Clune's Broadway auditorium in nickels and dimes following a short talk by her.

According to Miss Hulin, about 40,000 Belgian orphans, all under 2 years old, are now being cared for in the "California Barracks," as an old French castle, restored by the Queen of Belgium for this purpose with money subscribed in this State, has been called. It is now proposed to raise enough in California to buy milk continuously for 200 of these babies.

FOR RELIEF OF POLES.

Miss Hala Trotzka, Polish dancer, who studied with Isadora Duncan, will be the stellar attraction at a concert to be given at Blanchard Hall next Saturday night for the benefit of war-stricken people of Poland. Jaroslaw de Zielinski will be director and the following will contribute musical selections: Grace Bennett, Hazel Gruey, Wesley Kuhnle, Eva Pickrell, Mrs. Catherine Lyle Randolph and Maj. H. C. Cassidy.

SEND SOLDIERS FRESH READING.

Old Magazines will not be Accepted at One-Cent Postage Rate.

Attention is again called by the Postmaster to the fact that many of the unwrapped, unaddressed magazines mailed by the public at the 1-cent postage rate for soldiers and sailors are so old as no longer to be of any interest, and therefore are useless for the purpose intended.

Postmasters will accept for mailing at the postage rate of 1 cent each only such magazines as are of current or comparatively recent issues. For example, a weekly publication should not be more than two or three weeks old, and a monthly publication not more than two months old.

TO TEACH TEACHERS.

State University Summer Session Classes will Instruct in Physical Education.

The University of California summer session has planned its courses in physical education to meet the demands of teachers, who must be prepared if the physical education law is to be effective. The courses will, however, be of interest to all those desiring tuition along this line. To meet the new requirements, teachers will have to give instruction without gymnasiums or equipment of any sort, and methods will be presented which will help to solve this problem for them.

Miss Ella Stevers, supervisor of physical education in Los Angeles city schools, and physical director for women of the Y.W.C.A. will supervise the course and will be assisted by instructors of ability.

SAFE BLOWING FROWNED UPON.

Hop Sing Tong Expels Chinese Caught Trying this Method.

The local branch of the Hop Sing, a Chinese society, has expelled from membership Lewis Wuey, Jew Dong, Richard Woo and Ching Hong, who were caught last Wednesday trying to blow open the safe of Jin Gong at No. 304 Apablasa street. Announcement of the action by the Hop Sings was posted on the bulletin boards in Chinatown yesterday and printed in the local Chinese newspaper. The president of the Hop Sings is Wong Su, and their clubrooms are at No. 520½ North Los Angeles street.

RESENTS ATTACK ON WAR DONATIONS HEAD.

BOARD SENDS RESOLUTIONS TO COUNTY DEFENSE COUNCIL FOR ACTION.

The County Council of Defense at its meeting Tuesday will take up for action the following resolution sent to it by its subsidiary body, the War Donations Board:

"Resolved, that a communication be sent to the Los Angeles County Council of Defense drawing that body's attention to the fact that Chairman Winsel of the Allies' Committee has not yet retracted his written attack upon the patriotism of the chairman and members of the War Donations Board of the County Council of Defense, notwithstanding that a committee of the County Council of Defense held an investigation into Mr. Winsel's charges, at which time Mr. Winsel was present and his charges were found to be without basis and at which time, also, he and his committee were called upon to retract, and

"Be it further resolved, that the County Council take any necessary steps to secure this retraction and thus clear the record, in view of the fact that Mr. Winsel is the local Belgian Consul and that it is the deside of all Americans in this country to help Belgium in every practical way, it is the opinion that his present attitude is detrimental to the Belgian interests in this community."

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

In harmony with the decision of Superior Judge Willis, in acting upon the writ of habeas corpus sworn out in behalf of Cordelia Hughes of Long Beach, who, it was alleged, was suffering from an infectious disease, ten women, alleged to be so afflicted, were removed from the County Jail yesterday and taken to Los Feliz Hospital, where they will be treated.

The point made by the court in ordering the release of Mrs. Hughes was that while the Board of Health was entitled to praise for its efforts to isolate persons afflicted with communicable disease, a hospital, and not the County Jail, is the proper place for them.

Our Boys in France and Home Protection

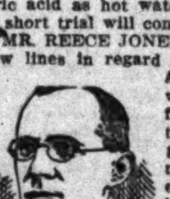
The men on the firing line represent the pick of our American youth. One in four of our boys at home was sick, rejected because of physical deficiency. Many times the kidneys were to blame.

If we wish to prevent old age coming on too soon, or if we want to increase our chances for a long life, Dr. Pierce of the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., says that you should drink plenty of water daily between meals. Then procure at your nearest drug store, Anuric (double strength.) This "An-u-ric" drives the uric acid out and cures backache and rheumatism.

If we wish to keep our kidneys in the best condition a diet of milk and vegetables, with only little meat once a day, is the most suitable. Drink plenty of pure water, take Anuric three times a day for a month.

Send Dr. Pierce ten cents for trial package. "Anuric" — many times more potent than lithia, eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. A short trial will convince you.

MR. REECE JONES says: "Just a few lines in regard to Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets which I took for kidney trouble. I am glad to recommend them to everybody. I know that they are good or I would not recommend them. After taking a few bottles I saw that the swelling was going down, so I continued their use. I have quit them now and am cured getting along fine and dandy.



"One old lady, 65 years old, to whom I have recommended Anuric, says that it did her good, took the swelling out of her feet."

A GREAT PUBLIC MOVEMENT.

The crusade against Hearst and his newspapers has assumed the proportions of a great public movement. The people are determined to have no more of quacks, disloyalists and pretenders in the public life of the nation during these critical times. This is not a newspaper controversy. The Times is not attacking Mr. Hearst or his Examiner or his Herald. The Times has merely printed the news of the action of communities, organizations and business houses, banning the Hearst publications. They are taboo in all Canada and England. They have been driven out of numerous towns in New York, New Jersey, New Mexico, etc., and publicly burned. The Allies' organization and Patriotic League and several clubs have put up the bars against them. As a part of its duty as a news purveyor The Times has published these facts—but it has not printed half of the reports of this kind that have come in. The Times has no quarrel with the Hearst sheets, and will have none. It declines to get into a newspaper fight. But these things are happening; the movement is spreading; every day will bring fresh reports of public indignation against those who apologized for the dastardly sinkers of the Lusitania; the crusade will go on to its inevitable end—and The Times will continue to print the news.

DEFENSE OF RHEIMS.

One of the brilliant pages in the history of the war will be that devoted to the Allied defense of Rheims during the present German offensive. For ten days this citadel of old France has been surrounded on three sides by German divisions. The city has been shriveled by fire and drenched by gas; its historic cathedral in which the Maid of Orleans witnessed the crowning of the French Dauphin to whom she had restored his kingdom is a smoking ruin; more than one-third of its defenders have fought their last fight; but from its shattered forts the flags of three nations, the Tricolor, the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes, are still flying. London conceded its fall a week ago; but its spirited defenders are holding on with a tenacity that only death can loosen.

METHOD AND LABOR.

With respect to early rising the real question is not what time you get up, but what do you do when you are up? Method and the improvement of time are important in themselves; but a far more important question is, HOW do you improve your time? It is well to be at your post at the very moment the clock strikes the hour; but it is far more important to be able to discharge its duties after you have got there. Mental stature, intellectual power has not a very close relation to the virtues of a martinet. A wise, thoughtful, useful man—a clear-headed reasoner, a profound thinker—may be unmethodical, dilatory, slovenly, just as a giant may be clumsy, awkward and loose in all his make-up.

A POLITICAL WEATHERCOCK.

Ray Benjamin, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, has declined to attend a Congressional convention in the First California District, giving as his reason that this unofficial convention is held in violation of the spirit of the direct primary law. Yet the same primary law was in effect when Mr. Benjamin was one of the leading lights in the Progressive State Convention and the Progressive Senatorial Convention of 1916. Mr. Benjamin's opinions as to the legality of conventions are as variable as a weathercock; it makes a vast deal of difference to him whose convention it is.

DIFFERENT VIEWS.

The writers of a former era differed in their estimates of men. Bacon placed James I before Marcus Aurelius and all other kings and emperors since Christ. He said that James I had "the power and fortune of a king, the illumination of a priest, the learning and universality of a philosopher." Macaulay took a different view of James. He said that he was "a stammering, slobbering, trembling coward, whose writings were deformed by the grossest and vilest superstitions—witches being the special objects of his fear, his hatred and his persecution."

REGULATION.

In spite of all laws and regulations concerning food prices the profiteers are getting in their work. Is there no way to call a halt? You hear a lot of talk about the price of this or that commodity being "regulated," and when you buy one of these articles you are liable to find the story has been much exaggerated. Old Colonel Supply and Demand is beating all the regulators.

PAYING.

The amount of excess profits taxes to be collected in the country is now estimated at $3,000,000,000, or a half-billion dollars more than the estimate. Also showing that "excess profits" is not a bad business to be in.

WHY, OH WHY?

Heavens! Has George Creel escaped us—or has he a twin? Here France was not permitted to know, till three or four days later, about the U-boat raid on our American coast! Why is a censor?

THE INCOME OF THE NATION.

SECRETARY M'ADOO has notified Chairman Claude Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee that "Force without stint or limit" is not an idle phrase, but America is preparing to participate in the war to an extent never before attempted by any people. In order that our Liberty Army of "not less than 5,000,000" men may be maintained abroad in the acme of efficiency, and that the civilian populations of our allies shall not go unfed, the government purposes to expend $24,000,000,000 during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1918.

To grasp the magnitude of those figures some method of comparison is necessary. The highest estimate of the total cost to the government of the Civil War was $5,000,000,000; the estimate most generally accepted is $4,250,000,000. This sum represents both bonds and taxes. The estimates for the next fiscal year are just double the amount raised by the Federal government this year. The government's financial policy provides for the sale of $16,000,000,000 in bonds in place of the $8,000,000,000 sold this year and raising $8,000,000,000 in taxes in place of $4,000,000,000 for the present year. The British budget provides for raising $2,000,000,000 in taxes during the next fiscal year, and the German budget for raising $1,500,000,000 in taxes. The British budget for next year totals $12,750,000,000, and the German budget, $12,500,000,000.

Such are the government estimates of the cost in money of what is necessary to be done next year. The unanimous response of the American people will be that, if it is necessary to be done, it can be done. American labor and industry will prove themselves equal to the task; but there must be no illusions about its magnitude. It will not be possible to save an extra $8,000,000,000 next year; the total economies possible would not produce half that amount. At the same time the revenue bill passed by Congress must provide certain sources of income which will assure that every government obligation to our own people and to our allies shall be met. There must be no collapse in our financial programme; that would be fatal alike to ourselves and our allies. Courage and good intentions are necessary to win the war; but they are not enough. The new standard of victory is efficiency. This comprises efficiency of the individual, of the State and of the nation. When the government asks for $8,000,000,000 in taxes for the coming year, it is not money that the government is seeking, but liquid credit. The government is asking for the products of labor in the form of food, man power and war supplies equivalent to $8,000,000,000 in money.

II.

BEFORE the country can pay the equivalent of that $8,000,000,000 it must produce $8,000,000,000 in addition to the necessities of the individual. In other words, the country MUST DO A BIG BUSINESS, the biggest in its history; and it must do this business notwithstanding a shortage of 5,000,000 units of man power, represented by our Liberty Army in France. Business includes production and distribution. One is as necessary as the other. In order to meet next year's tax burdens, there must be an increased production and more effective and economical distribution. In order that this may be accomplished we must avoid the mistakes of the past and must increase the efficiency alike of the government and the individual. There must be BIG BUSINESS, and big business must have a chance to make BIG MONEY, in order to pay BIG TAXES. No Congress ever faced a more important and complicated task than that in which the present Congress is about to engage—providing the machinery for raising $8,000,000,000 in taxes without crippling the labor and the industry of the country. For if industry and business are checked, who will pay the taxes? You can't get blood out of a turnip.

Excessive taxation will wreck the industry it hits; while if one industry is undertaxed there is bound to be corresponding overtaxation elsewhere. Whenever taxation becomes confiscation the government is killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. To avoid individual injustices in a general revenue bill is practically impossible; but it is possible to reduce them to a minimum. Snap judgments must be avoided; passions and prejudices must be obliterated, and political demagogues must be lashed to silence by the thongs of public scorn. Congressmen and the heads of government departments must remember that an ounce of example is worth a ton of advice. It is futile to fill the pages of the Congressional Record with preachments about economy among the masses if the capacity of the political pork barrel is not reduced. The people are a unit for a big Liberty Army, but they will not long tolerate an enormous army of useless government camp followers. Government departments should set a standard of economy for the rest of the country to follow. As it is now, the official exhorters to "less waste" are wasting more than anybody. President Wilson rose to the occasion when he appointed his political opponent of two years before to investigate charges against the aviation department. He thus gave evidence of a determination that government departments should not be used as cloaks to shield grafting and thieving politicians.

III.

PRESIDENT WILSON has been generally commended for asking of Congress that the revenue bill for the next fiscal year be enacted at the beginning of the year and not at its close. The President is fully aware of the magnitude of the task of raising $8,000,000,000 in taxes in twelve months, and he asks that the people shall know now what they will be required to pay at the end of the year, in order that they may make adequate preparation for meeting the obligation. Most of the taxes hitherto levied by Congress have been retroactive. The President has now adopted the fundamentally sound policy of letting each individual know in advance the amount of the obligation which he shall be required to meet. He informed Congress that any other plan would be tantamount to attempting to run the mill with the water that had already gone under the wheel.

Supplementing the President's address to Congress, Secretary McAdoo has outlined in a communication to Mr. Kitchin the general plan of the administration for raising additional revenue next year. These recommendations are:

(1.) One-third the revenue for the next fiscal year should be raised in taxes and two-thirds through the sale of government securities.

(2.) The new war-profits tax should be superimposed upon existing excess-profits tax in such a way that the taxpayer should be required to pay whichever tax is greater. It must be so drafted that overcapitalization shall not reduce the tax which any corporation would otherwise pay. (This strikes at one of the crying injustices of the present excess-profits tax.)

(3.) There must be a marked increase in the amount of normal income tax on unearned incomes, but this must not be made to apply to incomes from Liberty Bonds.

(4.) Heavy taxation must be imposed on all luxuries.

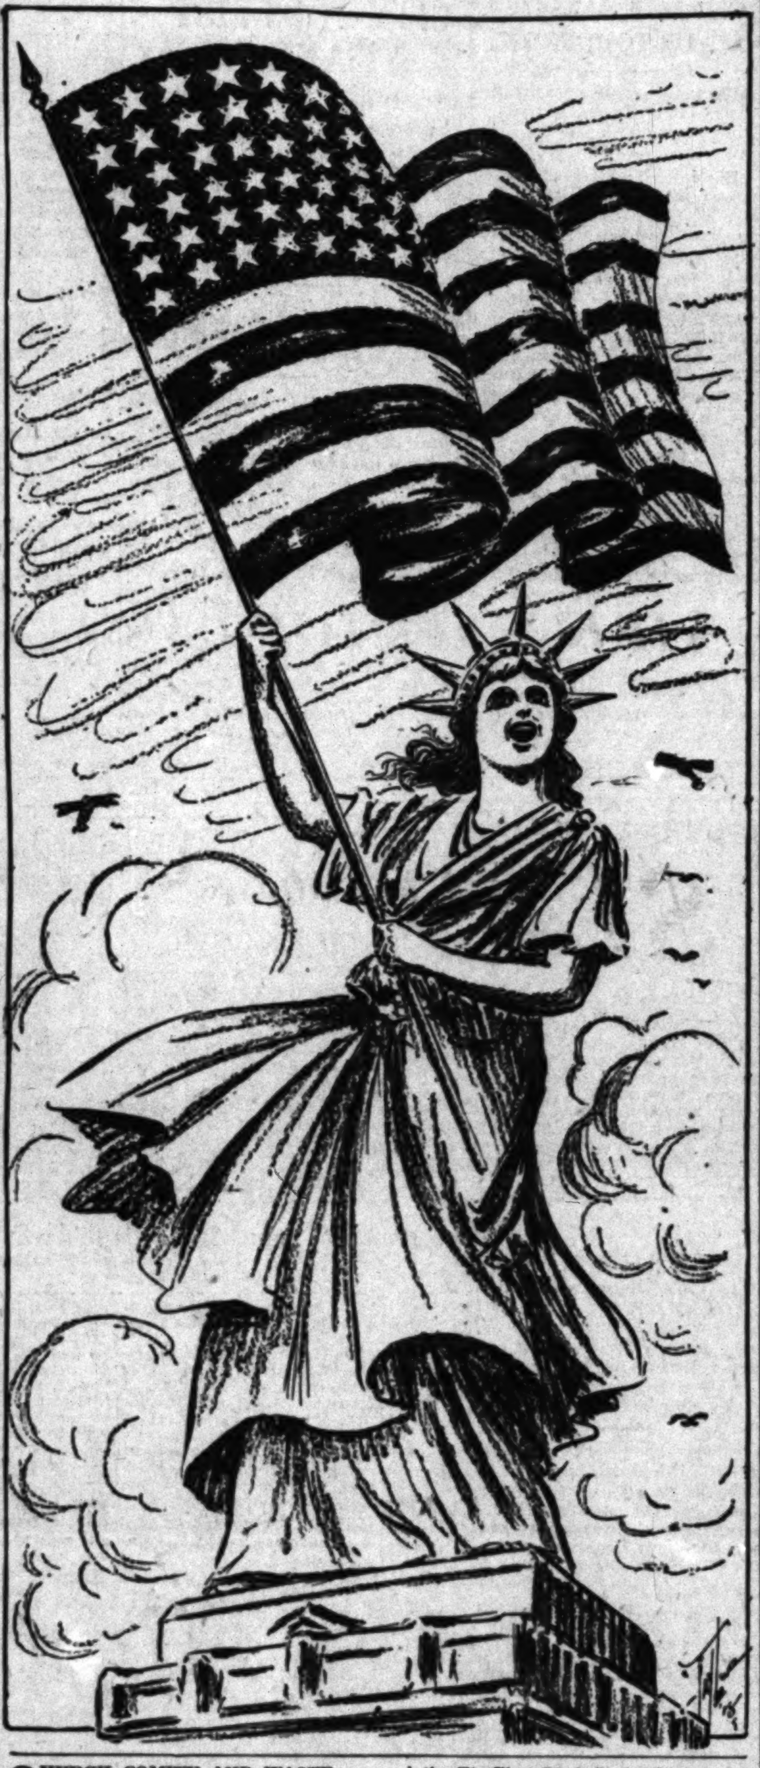
The average citizen must not permit himself to be deluded, however, into the belief that the bulk of next year's tax increase will come from the assessments on war industries and on unproductive wealth. Returns from these sources will form but a small part of that $8,000,000,000. There are not many new sources of revenue to be tapped. Broadly speaking, each person will pay twice the amount of taxes in 1919 that he pays in 1918. There will be shiftings of the burden; but we must not lose sight of the fact that the country will be carrying just twice its present load.

IV.

IT IS to be hoped that Congress will realize that, to meet this increased demand for revenue, the labor and industry of the country must be freed from gyves that now bind them. There has been a disposition in the past to penalize the producer and distributor; such a policy is deadly to production. Nationalization of industry has proved a costly and, on the whole, an unprofitable investment. Government operation of the railroads may have been necessary as a war measure; but it has deprived the government of about $400,000,000 that it would have received next year in different forms of taxation if the railroads had remained in private hands. That $400,000,000 must be made up from other sources, which must also supply the $300,000,000 increase in freight and passenger rates which the government has put into effect.

American labor and industry will not flinch before the increasing tax burden, but must have a fair field in order to make the money and pay it—must make it first. Secretary McAdoo asserts that there are war profiteers who have escaped this year's tax burdens, owing to defects in the present revenue laws. The Times trusts that the laws will be so amended that no guilty profiteer will escape. There is no more degrading depth of prostitution than that of a man who will stoop to make personal profit out of the present travail of a free people. We have some of the breed in California, profiteers in business and profiteers in politics—and The Times is of the opinion that the profiteers in politics outnumber all the rest. Both State and national governments must take heed that, whenever a thousand dollars is wasted in paying an unnecessary salary "over here," the life of a gallant Liberty boy is going to be wasted for lack of proper equipment "over there." The Times would approve an act of Congress making disloyal profiteering, both business and political, a felony.

Liberty's Jubilee.



CHURCH COMITY AND WASTE.

Today the first need before the American people is the elimination of waste. Our existence as a nation depends on husbanding and utilizing to the full all our natural resources and accumulated gains.

Since it is everywhere admitted that the churches of America have taken a leading part in arousing the people to a height of religious patriotism by presenting the sublimity of the object for which our people are making the supreme sacrifice, it is for that very reason the more necessary that our churches should not scatter or dissipate their energies. Our churches should also set us an example in economy. Through a lack of comity and friendly intercourse among the different denominations, an absence of cohesion in the machinery by which church organizations are controlled and—we are sorry to say—through the practice of small politics and a playing for jobs, economy has been sacrificed to individual whims and crochets and isms.

So it is that many publications have been asking the question, "Is the modern church a waster of spiritual energy?" Even before the war changed the whole thought of mankind on religious problems, the Century pointed out the need of more efficient team work between the various branches of the Christian church. Lately Rev. David Littell McNary in the Ladies' Home Journal published an earnest plea for the elimination of waste in the churches themselves "before proclaiming to housewives and merchants and workingmen that they must practice economy." Such church economy can never be obtained while the power that drives the religious thought is made secondary to the gear by which it is distributed. In a national crisis we have merged railroads and business establishments and educational institutions; why not churches?

In the Saturday Evening Post Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., wrote not long ago an article on the future of the Christian church deserving the careful consideration of every religious worker in the United States. It is a clarion call to the churches. It breathes the spirit of comity and true brotherhood and frankly warns the leaders of spiritual thought that the methods used to reach the American people before the war will not avail them in holding the American people after the war. As the Allied nations failed to check the wicked designs of the Huns while each nation persisted in working as a separate entity, so the churches to succeed in their fight against the forces of evil must marshal their various units under one banner.

A great step in this direction was taken at the recent general assembly of the presbyteries at Columbus, O.,—a step that is full of promise for the better co-ordination of Christian churches. A strong resolution in favor of organic church union, proposed by Mr. George E. Hunt, was carried unanimously by a rising vote amid cheers and the singing of the hymn, "Blest be the Tie That Binds." As this resolution called for a combination of all evangelical churches, we can see how surely ancient prejudices and traditions are being dissolved by the modern spirit of tolerance.

How necessary, for the sake of church economy alone, is this new leaven of church comity can be readily demonstrated in any city, town or hamlet anywhere throughout the United States, but especially on the Pacific Slope. For the last half-century we have been far more concerned about multiplying the number of church edifices than about seeing them filled with devout worshipers. About 90 per cent. of these churches have never been regularly filled at the Sunday service since their doors were first opened. In some small cities there are six churches where two would be enough. At least half of them have proved wholly superfluous; and yet, while long rows of empty pews pleaded dumbly for congregations that never matured, each separate sect and denomination hurried on to erect more commodious and pretentious edifices.

We say that it is better to keep a church pastorless so that other churches may be properly attended than to spend money wastefully by providing a preacher ahead of the religious needs of a city. Mr. Frank A. Miller of Riverside exhibited the true spirit of church comity from which a conservation of religious energy is certain to follow when he refused to indorse the calling a minister to a large church while there was still a plethora of church buildings in the city of Riverside to meet the supply of worshipers. He urged that the church should go without a pastor and worship with another denomination.

So also the Congregational Church Building Society expressed the spirit of economy animating the whole of America today when, in commenting on a request for funds to rebuild a church in San Jacinto, its secretary declared, "We are strongly of the opinion that whenever possible new church buildings should not be started during the period of the war." While there is any one church building in a community not filled to its normal capacity—no matter to what denomination that church belongs—no prima facie case can be made out for asking the public for funds to erect another house of worship in that locality. And we would like to be directed to any city or town in California where every church building is filled every Sunday to even half its seating capacity.

I GUESS SO.

BY CHARLES F. LUMMIS.

God knows what will yet be done by the Wizards of the Sound Waves. They can talk around the world without a cable. They can do what would have got them hung for witchcraft not so far back in any nation's history.

But personally I never did Lick Anyone by Wireless—nor by standing off and Sticking out my Tongue and Calling Names. For what many fights I've had, it has been At Grips.

The first fight I ever had was when I was 4; and a Son of a Copperhead objected to my classic song about one J. Davis, then sung by some million other Yankees. And that lad and I did no Telepathy. We came into Physical Contact. And when we were done this 6-year-old sympathizer was perfectly willing to have the gentleman aforesaid "on a sour apple tree" and "eating green apples till he had"—well, their perfect work and logical sequence.

All the fighting I've done in fifty years (which is some few) has been Personally Conducted—mostly bare fists or rough-and-tumble. Gun and club and machete have also sometimes been Friendly—but I like to Mix It. Four years of four hours a day (at college) in boxing and wrestling taught me that I never could Scare the Other Fellow to Death by Making Faces. And if Me-I can't make Fatal Faces, nobody can. I also learned that the Physiognomies of Sudden Death which the other fellow sometimes tried on me never did hit the point of my jaw. Also that the best way to Argue with a Contumacious Person is not over the phone; but to whip your right arm around his neck, your right hip into his bifurcation; flop him to the floor, sit straddle of him, concentrate all of your two hands on his gullet (which automatically takes care of his own two hands, even if he starts to gouge your eyes out)—and then, seriously, firmly, rhythmically bump the back of his head on the floor while you Expostulate with him. If there's a rug on the floor—add so much to your elbows. Also, you should make the Bumps exactly Punctuate your Remarks—else you lose much of the Psychological Effect. When you do a Lullaby, you must Keep Time!

Anyhow, this prescription has worked with me more than fifty times. And once when a knife was six inches through me they had to take us both up—for I was half bled to death, and the gentleman with the knife had no recollection where the back of his head was.

Only the other day I had a black-edged card announcing the death of the Rev. J. B. S. He was the biggest man in Harvard in 1881—weighed 240. He wasn't then ordained to the ministry—nor am I yet, who weighed 120. But you never saw a man agree more unanimously with another than "Stud" did with me after the Truth was Thus Brought Home to him. Whereas, I might have stood off and stuck out my tongue at him for a year without Convincing him at all.

Now, Me, I'd vote for anything that would Scare Germany to Death—or at least to a State of Coma. But I don't know what it is. And the more I Think, the more I don't see any way to Convert her except by the secrets I have herein contributed from my own experience. We've got to get the Prussian head to the floor and Bump it till it wouldn't recognize "Militarism" if it met it in the dictionary.

Mebbe that's Obvious. But it surely isn't obvious to enough of us that we're in. We are Tagged, IT. It's not only Our War—it's our Word of Honor to France and England and Italy, who are Holding the Fort till we slowpokes get there. Among all my sorrowful memories I'm glad there isn't one that I Opposed Preparedness three years ago.

But mebbe even the deepsleepers are beginning to rub their eyes at last. U-boats on our very coast, and worse than a score of vessels their victims! Of course the game is plain as when a novice leads the ace of trumps. To sink a score of coastwise schooners, unarmed and unwarned, is expected to Throw a Fright into us all. So that transports and foodships wouldn't dare sail, Lest they be Bitten by the Sharks.

Poof! Also Hell! (P.)

I have known the American People Interested—as they were about Slavery, Greenbacks, Free Silver, and so on. But I never did know Our Folks to Get Scared. That is, enough to flop like a cur dog, all four feet up, and yipping. But of course Peaceful Folk have to be at least Startled before they will run and get their gun.

But the last week ought to have wakened even the sleepiest. I never did know a war won by Resolutions. Even the noble work of the charities to which we have given millions this very year—that won't win the war, though it greatly ameliorates it. Wars are won with Blood and Money in about even Proportions.

We have, I think, looked at this too "Aloof." But now that the Sharks are at work on the American coast—who's going to turn over and go to sleep? "Atlantic," eh? Glad it isn't the Pacific, are you? By God, it's America! Are we going to let anybody pirate our very coasts? Not if the spirit of Paul Jones still lives—as I have reason to think it does!

"War's in Europe," is it? "Far off," eh? Hm! But Now Germany has invaded the United States!

Get That?

Is it anything less than Invasion? And what are you going to do about it?

Herald Was for Sale.

Some years ago a New York syndicate cabled a message to Mr. Bennett, asking him if the Herald was for sale and what was the lowest price he would take. His answer was: "The Herald is for sale—price, three cents daily, five cents on Sunday."—[Kansas City Star.

SUNDAY MORNING.

Federalized:

ANGELENOS IN HAWAII GUARD.

Company Commanded by Former "Times" Reporter.

Most Cosmopolitan Military Unit in the World.

Chinese, Japanese, Filipinos are Among Them.

With the announcement that the two regiments of the National Guard of Hawaii have been called into Federal service, interest in Los Angeles attaches to this Island Territory unit of the forces of the United States, particularly as several Los Angeles men are connected with the guard, besides the fact that military force in the world today is probably the most cosmopolitan.

Until recently, Brig.-Gen. Samual I. Johnson, of Russian birth, was in command of the four regiments of the Hawaiian National Guard, but the four regiments were reduced to two last year, in anticipation of active service, by the elimination of married men from the rank and file. Gen. Johnson resigned his National Guard rank and is now a major in the United States Reserve Army.

The First Regiment, N.G.H., with headquarters at Honolulu, is in command of Col. William Riley. Company A is composed entirely of men of Hawaiian blood, including the officers. Company B is practically all Portuguese in blood, though most of the members of the company were born in the Territory. Company F is composed of men of Chinese parentage, the majority of whom are high school graduates and intensely loyal to the United States.

OF JAPANESE BLOOD.

Company D was organized only last year, under the command of Capt. David Loring MacKaye, formerly a reporter on The Los Angeles Times. It is the first military unit in the service of the United States composed of men of Japanese blood. Many of them are graduates of the Honolulu High School, Mills Academy and Punahou College, and the company has been on guard at the waterworks near Honolulu and along the water front. This company is one of the strongest in the guard and has been commended for its efficiency by regular army officers. At many of its drills there is 100 per cent. attendance, and its white officers take the greatest pride in the enthusiasm and loyalty of the members of the company. Capt. MacKaye is also adjutant of the First Regiment.

So far as membership in the companies of the Second Regiment, N.G.H., which is commanded by Col. Harry Morehead, with headquarters in Hilo, is concerned, the greater number from the Island of Hawaii are Filipinos, with Hawaiians second, then Portuguese, Porto Ricans and Russians; the majority of the officers are American or Scottish-born whites.

GLAD OF NEW SERVICE.

The fact that the National Guard of Hawaii has been called to active service will be welcomed enthusiastically by its members, who have sought in all ways to influence Congress to call them into active service. Practically every man in the guard is anxious to go to the front as soon as possible.

Meanwhile the crew of the cruiser St. Louis is composed of the members of the Hawaiian Naval Reserve and are now serving "somewhere in the Atlantic."

IN AUTO WRECK.

Brakes on Car Refuse to Work and Three Women are Injured.

When the auto brakes refused to work on the State highway near Newhall, last Thursday, the resulting accident, when the car overturned, caused serious injury to Mrs. Slack, wife of H. S. Slack of the Standard Oil Company, and minor injuries to others in the auto party.

Mrs. O. P. Slack of Indianapolis, Ind., had her back badly sprained, and Mrs. E. E. Slack of Bisbee, Ariz., received severe bruises. The other women in the party, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. O. P. Slack, escaped unharmed. The car was badly wrecked.

Dr. W. T. Winnard, who was passing in his automobile, gave the injured women treatment and they were brought into the city.

WANT KNIFE GRINDERS.

An appeal for knife grinders to work in San Francisco was received yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce from a well-known firm of that city. It is stated that good men will be paid from $5 to $5.25 for an eight-hour day, and that while the work is not a direct order, many of the knives will be used by the government, and future work will be for the government. Details of the wages offered are on file in the trade extension bureau of the Chamber of POLITICS.

The American Game.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

J. O. Hayes was the only gubernatorial candidate to make a noticeable splash in publicity during the past week. The others kept steaming along on an even keel but apparently were unable to arouse any particular enthusiasm.

Mr. Hayes jumped into the limelight by an elucidation of his attack upon M. Lissner, the political boss of the City Club, whom he has charged with gross recklessness in the expenditure of State money. The San Jose editor first hurled the charge at a City Club luncheon, Mr. Lissner being present and promptly denying it. It then became necessary for Mr. Hayes to get the goods, which he did and proved to everyone but Mr. Lissner that the latter's Industrial Commission does squander money and conduct the office in an unbusiness-like manner. It is fortunate for Mr. Hayes that he stepped on the toes of the forty fat commissions. Every time one of the commissioners emits a yelp it means votes for Mr. Hayes.

Nothing more has been heard from C. A. A. McGee, the bombastic candidate of San Diego. He leaped into the middle of the gubernatorial ring two weeks ago, told all about his plans for reclaiming steen millions of acres of California lands, and then he quit. They say the people of San Diego are proud of him and will give him a lot of complimentary votes because of the advertising he will give their pretty city.

If California voters are interested in western lore, admire real men, men with backbones and afraid of nobody, not even the devil, Charles M. Fickert unquestionably will make it hot for some of the other candidates for Governor.

Gov. Stephens certainly is occupying an unenviable position in the Mooney case. Soon it will be up to the Chief Executive to fish or cut bait. 'Tis said President Wilson has appealed for clemency for the arch criminal upon the grounds that such interference might be advantageous to the labor situation in the country. I am of the opinion that Gov. Stephens prefers to let the law take its course, but whether he will be big enough to obey the dictates of his conscience is some question.

The body of State Senator Henry Lyon was hardly cold before one Frank Mouser was reported to have moved into the Thirty-ninth District. Before the funeral it was announced that he would be a candidate to fill the vacancy. A few days ago Mouser called upon The Watchman with the request that he be given some publicity in this column. I promised to gratify his desire. "I am preparing to put through some big things in the next Legislature," Mouser said. "Among them is a bill which would prevent a person holding the office of Superior judge, Appellate judge or Supreme Court judge, unless he has practiced law in California for ten years. You know the purpose of this bill would be to make it impossible for some of these young fellows who have gone to war from being elected upon their war records. You know when the war is over it will be an easy matter for a fellow to get votes if he has worn a uniform. This would not be right, because some of the young lawyers now at the front probably have had no experience in law."

Maybe they have had no experience in law, but believe me if one of them is a candidate for Superior judge or any other judgeship I will stamp my little cross opposite his name, so will every other patriotic citizen. If Frank Mouser had swallowed a handful of cyanide of potassium he could not have killed himself any more quickly than by making such an attack upon the lawyer-soldiers of Los Angeles. What a cinch it will be for Pete Phillips to grab the nomination and election! Of all the bone-head stands, ever taken by a candidate, Mouser's heads the list.

Just why City Clerk Wilde is so interested in the proposed creation of a license bureau or commission is a puzzle. Of course the plan is without merit, but inasmuch as it would relieve the clerk's office of a lot of labor I am unable to figure Mr. Wilde's opposition.

The strong hand of D. M. Gandier in local politics was shown the other day when the Council decided to place the nonsensical proportional representation scheme for the election of Councilmen upon the ballot in November. The plan is a dream of George Dunlop, well-known municipal disturber, but Mr. Gandier favors it because it calls for the election of but nine Councilmen. He is opposed to the district representation plan, which would divide the city into fifteen districts, each to be represented in the legislative body with a member. This plan apparently meets the approval of everybody. It is opposed by Mr. Gandier obviously because he can more easily control nine solons than fifteen.

It is reported that A. P. Fleming will be a candidate for the Assembly in the Seventy-second District. Madison Marine also is spoken of. If the latter does not run, it is possible that John Topham will be a candidate. Mr. Topham would probably have the indorsement of the drys.

Sam Browne, candidate for Sheriff, is displaying with pride a letter he just received from Col. McCarthy of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army. The colonel said if the people of Los Angeles only knew what an enviable record Detective Browne made in the Philippines they would elect him.

I don't understand why the Republicans of the Ninth Congress District are undecided. If it comes to a question of the Republicanism of candidates there can be no hesitancy. S. W. Odell, who was the first so-called Republican in the race, made statements and had others make statements for him, that he always had been a Republican. He is better known as a worker in the Prohibition organization although in 1914 he registered as a Progressive, according to the records, and in 1916 and this year registered as a Republican.

If his Republicanism doesn't contain more unwavering qualities than indicated by the registration records, the Republican County Central Committee and all other Republicans in the district have no cause to get excited over his candidacy.

A new outlook for the district was shown during the week when W. C. Mushet announced his candidacy on a straight American and straight Republican platform. Mr. Mushet has a big following in the district. Two years ago when he ran for Presidential elector he received 1500 more votes than L. L. Lostutter, who was also elected. Lostutter was a Republican candidate for Congress later.

Mr. Mushet is after Congressman Randall's goat because of Randall's shameful anti-war record in Congress.

Some politicians, eager to win, sometimes overlook the perfectly obvious truth that they are losers the minute they espouse a false cause, and winners if they uphold an ideal even if it doesn't get a majority of the votes.

The candidate who can go into the Ninth District strong in his Americanism and clean in his Republicanism will win.

Believing that his training for three years as secretary of the City Council has fitted him for higher political honors, W. C. Herb Lewis, yesterday announced himself a candidate for the Assembly from the Sixty-third Assembly District, on the Republican ticket.

After waiting all these years, it gives me some pleasure to note that nearly all the legislative candidates are coming to the front with pledges that they will support an amendment to the primary law cutting out the cross-party nominations. They have discovered that it is unfair for a member of one party to break into the primary of another and steal a nomination.

The Johnsonian Legislatures of the last few years didn't have the nerve to wipe out parties entirely and elect State and legislative candidates on a nonpartisan plan as judges are elected. These sycophantic bodies sneaked around to the back door and stabbed parties in the back by allowing self-seeking adventurers to grab nominations that didn't belong to them.

The idea of a Democrat, for instance, being permitted to run in a Republican primary by the soft subterfuge of procuring only 1 per cent. of the votes cast in the primary two years ago is repugnant to those who understand the value of political honesty and fair play.

In the Sixty-third Assembly District, the heaviest Republican district in the county, a Democrat needs to get only eighty-three good signatures to his petition as a "Republican" in order to jimmy his way into the Republican primary. The old convention system was discarded because, for one reason, it had not been giving a true expression of party preference, but the damnable primary law that allowed renegades to get into parties other than their own not only failed to correct the abuse, but actually made its continuance easier.

HOOVER ART STUDIO.

In the list of late corporations in Los Angeles is the Hoover Art Company, No. 6321 Hollywood boulevard. This concern started business in a little building on Gower street in 1905, with a line of photographic reproductions of famous paintings. About ten years later the work of portraiture was taken up, and Mr. Hendrick C. Sartov, the president of the corporation, took charge of the operating department. During the past few years the Hoover portraits have been exhibited in different salons, and in every case have taken high honors, and one is being displayed permanently in the National Salon at Washington, D. C., where it was awarded honors by the Photographic Association of America. The Hoover Art Company is adding new equipment in apparatus and lighting effects, and the management will be in the hands of William P. Harmon, recently of Minneapolis, who is also secretary-treasurer of the corporation.

Be Careful in Using Soap on Your Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Just One Application and the Hairs Vanish

(Toilet Talks)

Any woman can keep her skin free from unsightly hair or fuzz if she will follow these simple instructions: When hairy growths appear, apply a simple paste, made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. Apply this to hairy surface and after two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a harmless treatment, but be sure you get the real delatone.

LARGE FORCE TO CHECK INCOME TAX RETURNS

Deputies will be Named by the Collector; Southland Showing Well.

SIX days yet remain in which to pay income and excess-profit taxes to the government, or otherwise be classed as a delinquent. Internal Revenue Collector Carter yesterday sent out another appeal to the public calling attention to the fact that income tax time will expire at midnight of June 15 and to pay up without delay.

With $12,000,000 assessed to this district, it was reported yesterday that $5,000,000 still remains uncollected. Everybody not having thus far paid in his tax is urged by the collector to do so immediately, and to purchase treasury certificates of indebtedness from any one of the numerous banks in Los Angeles.

INCOME tax returns are flowing in in a steady stream, and if the present rate is kept up until next Saturday, the final date, there will be few delinquents in the ten Southern California counties making up the Sixth United States Internal Revenue District, according to Collector of Internal Revenue Carter.

Information from Washington indicates that returns on information from business houses and corporations in this district are meeting with satisfactory response, due to more widespread publicity on this phase of the income tax question. No figures are available here, as all returns are mailed direct to Washington.

Organization has now been effected for putting into the field a large force of deputies, in addition to those at present employed, whose duties will be to make a thorough checking up of everybody coming within the scope of the income tax law.

AS DEPUTY AGENTS.

After three days and nights of almost continuous work, Mr. Carter, with Deputy Internal Revenue Commissioner Gates, in charge of the zone west of Denver, and Revenue Agent Anderson, having supervision over California, Nevada and the Territory of Hawaii, has completed the examination into the special qualifications of a large number of eligibles for the post of deputy internal revenue agents.

This new force is to be placed in the field the latter part of this month. Appointments to the are in the hands of the Revenue Commission at Wash which will act on the recommendations of Mr. Carter and his leagues.

"The addition of this new deputies is an essential the checking up of the of income tax returns and who will have failed to returns by June 15," Mr. yesterday. "This force large accretion to the as the work to be done in its details.

RETURNS COMING IN.

"In view of the publicity ing given the income tax this district, I will say that turns are coming in than heretofore. This isfactory. We don't slackers out here. Let his or her share, voluntarily.

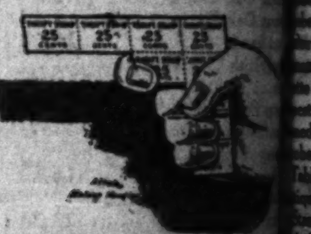
"The checking up process by the government will reach body in the country, so it everybody to pay his tax Otherwise severe penalties met.

"Between now and June the general 'pay season' out the United States. This time for all those who mailed in their individual to do so without delay."

Commissioner Gates and Agent Anderson went to San cisco after completing with respect to the new deputies to be put in the Gates is expected to return help supervise the disposition force in the various counties.

War Savings Drive.

EIGHT HUNDRED THRIFT SOCIETIES TO ORGANIZE



AIMED AT AUTOCRACY

Commence Firing and Keep on Firing!

THE gigantic task of organizing 800 War Savings Societies in Los Angeles in one evening will be successfully engineered Tuesday night by the Los Angeles Council of Defense precinct committees, under the direction of Mrs. J. T. Anderson.

The organization of these societies, in accordance with governmental orders, is taken as a preliminary step to the great National War Savings drive for $2,000,000,000 to be pledged before the 28th inst. Los Angeles' quota is $15,000,000.

The task which has devolved upon Mrs. Anderson's 2400 precinct committee women, upon whom rests the entire responsibility of the preliminary organization work of the campaign, is no small one. These women, who have already demonstrated their ability in former Liberty Loan and other governmental drives, are arranging all details for the 800 organization meetings. It is their specific duty, not only to find suitable locations for these precinct mass meetings, but the responsibility rests with them to see that each and every resident is notified and urged to attend as a patriotic manifestation.

It is announced by Mrs. J. T. Anderson that the organization of these precinct War Savings Societies, the election of presidents, secretaries, captains, subcaptains, etc., will not in any way displace the portion of the Council of known as precinct committees, serving under the chairmanship of Mrs. Anderson, are accorded recognition and authority.

MASS MEETING.

On the evening of the 17th the officers, elected to the 800 precinct War Savings Societies, will attend a meeting at Shrine Auditorium, where they will receive allotment of pledge cards and reports. These in turn will be distributed to the precinct captains, captains, lieutenants and all staff workers, who Tuesday morning, June 18, will start out upon big drive, which ends June 28.

Today from nearly every pulpit in the city, the ministers read the proclamation of President Wilson with regard to the War Savings drive, urging the co-operation of every loyal citizen. An important feature will be the reading of "Everyman's War Pledge," which ministers will ask the members of their congregation to make a manifestation of patriotism.

Knights of Pythias members all over Southern California gather this afternoon in the Methodist Church at 2:30, they will hold an enthusiastic meeting preparatory to the drive. Among the speakers Gov. Stephens, Judge B. F. W. P. Schlosser, Stanley Perry W. Weidner and a prominent speakers from the Savings Speakers' bureau, ex-Judge H. N. Wells is manager.

LAST OF SUPPLIES HAULED TO HARBOR.

RELIEF CARGO FOR FRANCE ASSUMES HUGE PROPORTIONS. SCHOOLS GIVE LAVISHLY.

Big trucks yesterday hauled the remaining supplies for the French relief cargo from the Hill-street headquarters. Donations of money, food and clothing came in up to the last minute until the cargo has increased to even huger proportions than was estimated at last Thursday's committee meeting. At that time it was announced that Southern California had gone so far over the top in contributing to the relief cargo that space on two ships, instead of one, will be required.

One of the outstanding features of the campaign was the magnificent response from school children. A list of the schools of Los Angeles that contributed would be virtually identical with a complete list of all Los Angeles schools. Some of the schools sent in a truckload each. Manual Arts sent in two big truckloads, and the other high schools almost equaled this mark. The following additional cash donations were reported by the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

We owe it to our country in these war times to study and understand the principles underlying successful business. Every one of us is engaged in BUSINESS these days—the business of winning the war.

"Turnover" is a big word in business.

The rapidity with which a merchandise stock is turned over is the tell-tale of a merchant's success. He cannot make money by holding his goods for big profits. The successful merchant must sell quickly, and buy and sell again, and repeat the process over and over.

Just as the customer gains by the necessity imposed upon the storekeeper of turning his goods frequently, so the Nation will gain by the people seeing the wisdom of hanging onto dollars less tenaciously—keeping them turning over—circulating oftener.

The Government has discovered the necessity of calling in the Captains of Industry to apply BUSINESS PRINCIPLES to the prosecution of the war. It will be just as wise for each of us to grasp and apply the same business principles to the conduct of our individual affairs.

We all have enough legitimate and non-extravagant needs to keep every dollar turning over and thus help pile up the enormous volume of business the Country requires to keep the War Chest filled with the profits from our increased earnings.

WAR RISK INSURANCE IS BOON TO SOLDIERS.

Provisions as to Allotments, Family Allowances, Etc., Explained.

FOR the information of the public, and especially the dependents of men now in the army and navy service, The Times has been asked by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Welfare Commission to publish a recapitulation of the provisions with respect to allotments, family allowances, compensation and insurance under the War Risk Insurance Act.

Allotments are divided into two classes, class A being compulsory allotments and class B being allotments prescribed as a condition to family allowances.

COMPULSORY CLASS.

The compulsory allotments are as follows:

The monthly compulsory allotment shall be in an amount equal to the family allowance hereinafter specified, except that it shall not be more than one-half the pay, or less than $15; but for a wife living separate and apart under court order or written agreement, or for a former wife divorced, it shall not exceed the amount specified in the court order, decree, or written agreement to be paid to her. For an illegitimate child, to whose support the father has been judicially ordered or decreed to contribute, it shall not exceed the amount fixed in the order or decree.

If there be an allotment for a wife or child, a former wife divorced and who has not remarried shall be entitled to a compulsory allotment only out of the difference, if any, between the allotment for the wife or child, or both, and one-half of the pay."

VOLUNTARY CLASS.

Class B, as a condition to family allowances, is as follows:

"That the enlisted man may allot any proportion or proportions or any fixed amount or amounts of his monthly pay or of the proportion thereof remaining after the compulsory allotment, for such purposes and for the benefit of such person or persons as he may direct, subject, however, to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed under regulations to be made by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, respectively."

(a) The maximum monthly allotment so required to be made to members of class B shall be one-half of his pay.

(b) If he is making no allotment to a member of class A, the minimum monthly allotment so designated to be made to members of class B shall be $15 per month.

(c) If he is making the compulsory allotment to a member of class A, the minimum monthly allotment so designated to be made to members of class B shall be one-seventh of his pay, but not less than $5 per month.

FAMILY ALLOWANCES.

"That a family allowance of no exceeding $50 per month shall be granted and paid by the United States upon written application to the bureau of such enlisted man or by or on behalf of any prospective beneficiary, in accordance with and subject to the conditions, limitations and exceptions hereinafter specified."

That family allowance shall be paid from the time of enlistmen to death in or one month after discharge from the service, but no for more than one month after the termination of the present war emergency. No family allowance shall be made for any period preceding November 1, 1917. The payment shall be subject to such regulations as may be prescribed relative to cases of desertion and imprisonment, and of missing men.

Subject to the conditions, limitations and exceptions hereinabove and hereinafter specified, the family allowance payable per montl shall be as follows:

Class A: In the case of a man to his wife (including a former wife divorced) and to his child or children:

(a) If there be a wife but no child, $15.

(b) If there be a wife and one child, $25.

(c) If there be a wife and two children, $32.50, with $5 per month additional for each additional child.

(d) If there be no wife but one child, $5.

(e) If there be no wife but two children, $12.50.

(f) If there be no wife but three children, $20.

(g) If there be no wife but four children, $30, with $5 per month additional for each additional child.

Class B: In the case of a man or woman, to a grandchild, a parent brother or sister:

(a) If there be one parent, $10.

(b) If there be two parents, $20.

(c) For each grandchild, brother, sister, and additional parent, $5.

In the case of a woman, to a child or children:

(d) If there be one child, $5.

(e) If there be two children, $12.50.

(f) If there be three children, $20.

(g) If there be four children, $30, with $5 per month additional for each additional child.

MAKING PAYMENTS.

Payments of compensation to a widow or widowed mother shall continue until her death or remarriage.

The payment of compensation to or for a child shall continue until such child be incapable, because of insanity, idiocy, or being otherwise permanently helpess, then during such incapacity.

If and while the disability is total the monthly compensation shall be in the following amounts:

(a) If he has neither wife nor child living, $30.

(b) If he has a wife, but no child living, $45.

(c) If he has a wife and one child living, $55.

(d) If he has a wife and two children living, $65.

(e) If he has a wife and three or more children living, $75.

(f) If he has no wife but one child living, $40, with $10 for each additional child up to two.

(g) If he has a widowed mother dependent upon him for support, then, in addition to the above amounts, $10.

IF DEATH RESULTS.

To widow or child or widowed mother if death results from injury.

(a) For a widow alone, $25.

(b) For a widow and one child, $35.

(c) For a widow and two children, $47.50, with $5 for each additional child up to two.

(d) If there be no widow, then for one child, $20.

(e) For two children, $30.

(f) For three children, $40, with $3 for each additional child up to two.

(g) For a widowed mother, $20. The amount payable under this subdivision shall not be greater than a sum which, when added to the total amount payable to the widow and children, does not exceed $75. This compensation shall be payable for the death of but one child, and no compensation for the death of a child shall be payable if such widowed mother is in receipt of compensation under the provisions of this article for the death of her husband. Such compensation shall be payable whether her widowhood arises before or after the death of the person, and whenever her condition is such that if the person were living the widowed mother would have been dependent upon him for support.

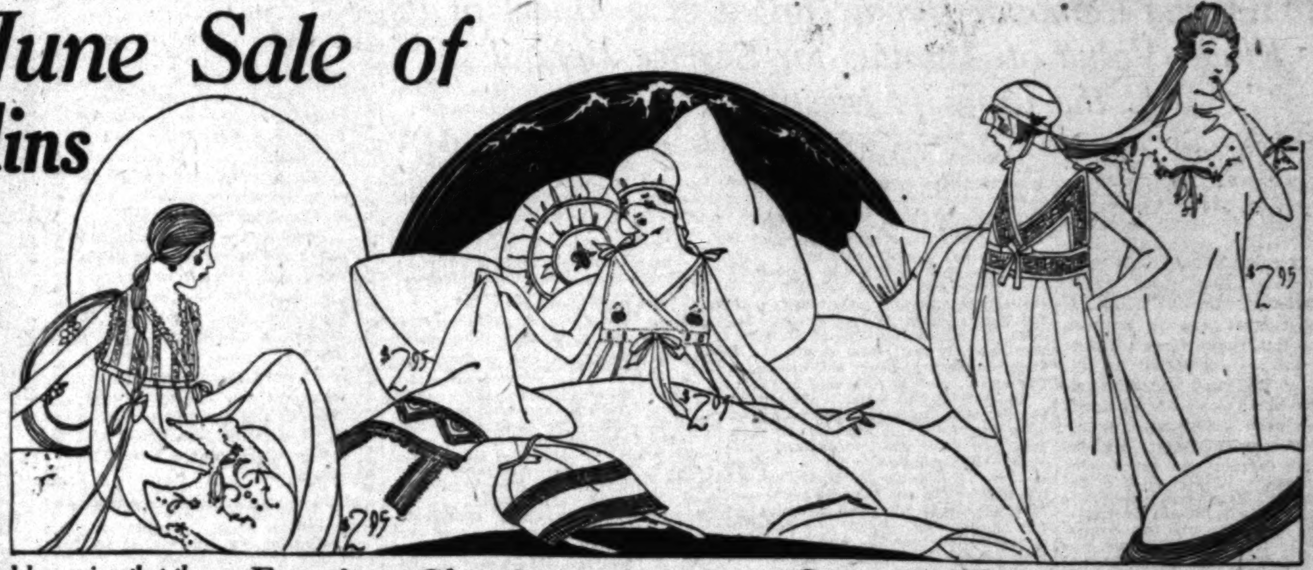
In Which the Savings are ¼, ⅓ or More on New First Quality Undermuslins and Silk Underwear



—It may be difficult for many to understand just what this annual June Undermuslin sale really offers, in the way of new Undermuslins for less.

—Perhaps it will be best illustrated by saying that the buyer of the department—a woman of broad experience in the purchasing of women's wearables—said that she was going to purchase for her own personal use all the Undermuslins she needed, right off the counters in this June sale, rather than attempt to secure them in the wholesale market—for the merchandise was selling for less than she could duplicate it for.

—Doesn't this impress upon you how determined we are that our annual June sale of Undermuslins shall be all that you expect of it?

—If this sale were not held we could very easily ask the full prices, which this class of merchandise is bringing today.

—We are giving you the opportunity of sharing in this annual affair, and we know that any woman, who needs undermuslins will do well to lay in a supply for her needs for months to come.

—The active selling of last week has not in any way, diminished the assortment, for new lots have come forward to fill in—refreshed, refilled tables greet you Monday in the second week of the sale.

TRAIN HORSES AS THOROUGHLY AS MEN FOR ARMY SERVICE.

Camp Kearny Remount Depot Hailed as a Model of Its Kind—Value of Animals for Service Behind the Lines is Inestimable.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAMP KEARNY, June 8.—When fighting in France comes into the open horses will be one of the most valuable assets the army has. In fact, the value of the well-trained cavalry or artillery horse, one of those drawing the many varieties of combat wagons or ammunition carts, ranks along with the value of the man power of the nation and of the guns and ammunition. The horse power of an army has never been under-rated, but in the days of modern warfare, as conceived and carried out by modern military leaders, it is given a prominent place. Time was when the horse was the sole means of transportation, at least on the immediate battle front. The horse was the motive power, the means of carrying messengers and was used for a hundred and one things.

Even now, in the time of motor-drawn vehicles, word comes back from France that the forces at war in France generally use animal-drawn conveyances for the last six miles of the battle front. There is excuse, if there is need of any, for the extreme care shown in caring for and selecting animals at Auxiliary Remount Depot, No. 330, about a mile from Camp Kearny and at least a part of the life of this camp.

The entrance of animals to the army is made with as much care is the entrance of the new recruit. The animal has to go through practically the same process of examination and elimination. Horses on "sick call" are treated with great care, for two reasons, first to rid them of any disease they might have and second to prevent them from spreading disease to other horses.

FINE REMOUNT DEPOT.

Camp Kearny's remount depot is said to be one of the best. This statement has been made repeatedly by officers who have come here to inspect this depot. On account of the good record of this depot, Maj. John R. Valentine, the commander, was recently sent East to aid in the establishment of other stations along the same lines as this one is run.

Of course, the human element in the depot is the most interesting, for here one finds all manner of men. You can find the horseman, who loves the animals with which he has to deal and who gave up his life of a round of clubs, of races and pleasure to do his most effective bit for his country. Again one finds the buckeroo, the cowboy and horseman who all his life has worked among horses and finds that he can serve his country best by training the animals, both horses and mules to do what they are supposed to do at the proper time.

Horses, say their trainers at the remount depot, are just what you make them. Because of this the remount depot is as much a training school for men as it is for animals. Nothing angers a man more than to see a driver yank the reins of his team, be it of mules or horses. This agitates the animal and spoils it as well. This is but one of a hundred things taught the men at the depot. From this depot thirty men have already been sent to the front to join what are known as mobile remount depots. To train the horse at the station it is first necessary to train the man and to do this it is necessary to have the horses. Several thousand horses have been taken into the depot here, wild, untrained animals, and turned over to army units as more or less fit for duty. At one time the depot had more than 5000 horses in corrals, not to speak of mules, which provide lots of work and plenty of comedy.

VARIOUS DUTIES.

More than 500 men hold forth at the remount depot and their duties are as varied as the artilleryman, who has to be a sort of doughboy as well as an artilleryman. Maj. Walter R. Pick, recently promoted to that position, is head of the veterinary corps at the depot. Theoretically a horse is dissected many times a day by the major's assistants. Lieut. R. H. Becker, Lieut. Henry C. Peterson, Lieut. Peter I. Egan, Lieut. Ray Gaskill, Lieut. A. J. Ronsee.

In olden days a horseshoer was just that. He put on a horseshoe, and if it stayed you were in luck. He never, or at least seldom ever, knew that a horse developed a regular crops of corns if the shoe was not put on right. Lieut. Ronsee is head of the horseshoers' school, and in this capacity he teaches what he calls "pathological" horseshoeing. Almost everybody has had corns in their lives, but when Lieut. Ronsee shows one a sample hoof of a horse and explains the crimes committed in the name of horseshoeing, it seems that shoe manufacturers are not the only individuals to wrong members of the animal kingdom.

SHOD SCIENTIFICALLY.

More than 5000 horses and a large number of mules have been shod in scientific manner at the depot. The horseshoers' school looks like a vast machine shop. There are thirty-five forges and fifty horses are shod in a day. When a wild one comes it is strung up on an affair made by the men, a canvas strip passing under the horse's or mule's belly. The feet are left dangling and two shoes are put on at one time.

"Pathological" horseshoeing includes putting in the nails in a certain way to prevent corns, and the shoes are fitted to the hoof, which is the way any regular shoe shop should be run, instead of trying to crowd a perfect nine in a number seven.

Men from every unit in camp are sent to this school for training, as every regiment and battalion needs men who know how to care for horses. A regular horseshoer has to keep at it for four months. Ten sergeant instructors, under Sergt. J. C. Winters, foreman, teach the practical side of horseshoeing, while Lieut. Ronsee teaches the theory.

Shoeing a horse that never before wore the iron things is like trying to put a No. 2 on the foot of a woman who never wore anything less than a No. 4. The difference is that the horse kicks.

Capt. Lawrence Rouble is in charge of the teamsters' school. That being a teamster is not just holding to a line and saying "giddap" is shown to the men who enter this school. This school includes the wagon company, which has the same kind of reputaion as the depot, the best. Sergt. William Brenin is "top soak" in this school. This outfit was the pioneer one in camp, arriving at Linda Vista with two companies of the Twenty-first Infantry, now stationed at Balboa Park, in June of last year. Sergt. John H. Savers is "top" for the wagon company.

The packers' school, where men are trained to throw the diamond hitch and to get a train of mules ready with packs on their backs in short order, is also under the command of Capt. Rouble. Sergt. Tom Remington holds sway here and puts lots of pep into the operation of getting a sack of beans on a mule's back.

The remount depot is an intricate organization. Capt. Phillip Muller, the adjutant, knows this, as he has to attend to the business end. Capt. Albert Metcalf is post surgeon and has an emergency hospital, as many accidents, such as are liable to happen in handling horses, occur. Sergts. Charles B. Talbott, W. E. Johnson and G. H. Moore and a corps of assistants have one of the best of hospitals in a camp so new.

Among the officers is Capt. Fletcher Harper, noted horseman of New York, and head of the miscellaneous detachment. He is one of many men who have given up their former life to beat the Kaiser to his own game. Out of the depot, going back to their regiments hundreds of men have come with new ideas of how to make everything count, how to take care of a horse or a mule, just the same as one would of an expensive rifle.

But in the remount depot the men all look forward to one big event, the time when they will be chosen to join the mobile remount depots in France. To really fight Germans is the big ambition everywhere in camp, whether the man is a doughboy, an artilleryman or a cowboy in the remount depot. Just getting ready for the big event is not enough. By now nearly every man in the camp is ready and fit to fight, and every report of a submarine attack, every move the German forces make is watched with deep interest, an interest which will not be abated until the American troops march into Berlin.

HOW TO SEND TO PRISONERS.

Money for Americans in Enemy Camps Must go Through Red Cross.

Persons desiring to send money to prisoners of war in Germany, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria or Turkey, or in territory occupied by the Central Powers, must send remittances through the Bureau of Prisoner Relief of the American Red Cross, Washington, D. C., which has been granted a license for such business by the War Trade Board.

Postmasters will accept applications on which the regular domestic fee must be paid for domestic money orders payable to the "American Red Cross" at Washington, D. C., which in turn will endeavor to forward the money to prisoners without additional cost. The full and exact name of the payee and the location of the prison, when known, should be given.

PRAISES FORTITUDE OF WOUNDED TROOPS.

SINGER WHO ENTERTAINED SOLDIERS IS HERE FOR VISIT.

Miss Grace De Mar, well-known light opera singer of New York City and one of the many musical artistes who have devoted their time to entertaining wounded soldiers returned from the French trenches, at the Alexandria explained the cheerfulness and indomitable will of the returning wounded heroes.

"Of all the men that I have seen in the Columbia University convalescent hospital, no matter how badly shattered in body they might have been, not one but what has expressed the wish that they could return to France and see the finish," she said.

Miss De Mar paid a high compliment to Mme. Schumann-Heink, famous opera star, who is now at the Clark.

"Recently in San Francisco, Schumann-Heink and I were billed together for a charitable affair at the St. Francis Hotel," she said. "After Mme. Heink had finished her number she impulsively picked up a gentleman's hat and stepped through the audience, collecting in a few minutes several hundred dollars for the Red Cross. This is typical of the true spirit of this woman, who is perhaps suffering more than any other, as she has sons now serving under the black eagle of the Kaiser and others under the Stars and Stripes. To those who know her, her patriotism is unquestioned, undivided and unsullied."

HE KNITS FOR SOLDIERS.

Kensington Road Man has Made Sweaters for Two Sons and Now is Outfitting Nephew.

Probably the busiest male knitter in Los Angeles for the soldiers "over there" is W. S. Bailey of Kensington road. When Mr. Bailey's eldest son, Lieut. Roy Bailey, now stationed at Fort Rosecrans, started for camp, he took with him a sweater knitted by his father. When Mr. Bailey's second son, Elba, having just graduated at the University of California, began to prepare to go to Camp Hancock to enter the ordnance school there, Mr. Bailey started another sweater, which he has just completed in twenty-four hours' actual work.

Now Dr. George Henry, a nephew, has been called to the colors and Mr. Bailey has begun a sweater for him. It is said to be an inspiring sight to see Mr. Bailey walking about with his knitting and his ball of yarn. Some of his friends are talking of taking up the habit, too.

DIES AT CAMP LEWIS.

Allen E. Goodwin, Who Went North in April, Victim of Spinal Meningitis.

Word has been received here of the death at Camp Lewis of Allen E. Goodwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Goodwin of No. 3945 Woodlawn avenue. Allen Goodwin, who was 29 years old, went to Camp Lewis on April 27, and was taken ill recently with spinal meningitis and died on Wednesday last. He was born in Manchester, N. H., and has been here since 1892. He was employed at Fowler Brothers book store, No. 747 South Broadway, where his brother, Willard Goodwin, is manager.

Goodwin at the time of his death was a private in Company B, Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry. The body has been shipped to Los Angeles and funeral arrangements will be made upon its arrival.

Physician Explains How to help Build up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance

Cites Cases of Men Even 60 and 80 Years of Age Who Have Gained in Strength and Energy and Thereby Greatly Increased Their Mental Powers From Taking Nuxated Iron

Says a weak body means a weakened brain; weak nerve force means weakened will power, lack of sufficient iron in the blood has ruined many a man's nerve and cast him upon the rocks of Failure.

Commenting on the alarming prevalence of iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.) New York and the Westchester County Hospital, said: "I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, rundown patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real and true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through your body something like corn through an old mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind."

As proof of this take the case of General Horatio Gates Gibson, U.S.A. (Retired), who says that Nuxated Iron has brought back to him in a good measure that old buoyancy and energy that filled his veins in 1847 when he made his triumphant entry with General Scott into the City of Mexico.

Then there is Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr of Chicago, who is past the three score year mark, but still vigorous, active, full of life, vim and energy. Former Health Commissioner Kerr says he believes his own personal activity today is largely due to his use of Nuxated Iron and that he believes it ought to be prescribed by every physician and used at every hospital in the country.

While former Health Commissioner Kerr is not himself a physician, still his experience in handling public health problems must give his opinion more than ordinary weight.

And then there is Former United States Senator Chas. A. Towne. Senator Towne says: "I have found Nuxated Iron of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth I shall not be without it. I am in a position to testify for the benefit of others to the remarkable and immediate helpfulness of this remedy, and I unhesitatingly recommend Nuxated Iron to all who feel the need of renewed energy and the regularity of bodily functions. But, in my opinion, you can't make strong, vigorous, successful, sturdy iron men by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a semi-digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are so ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well known physicians, thousands of people still insist in dosing themselves with metallic iron, simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases, to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken such preparations as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron."

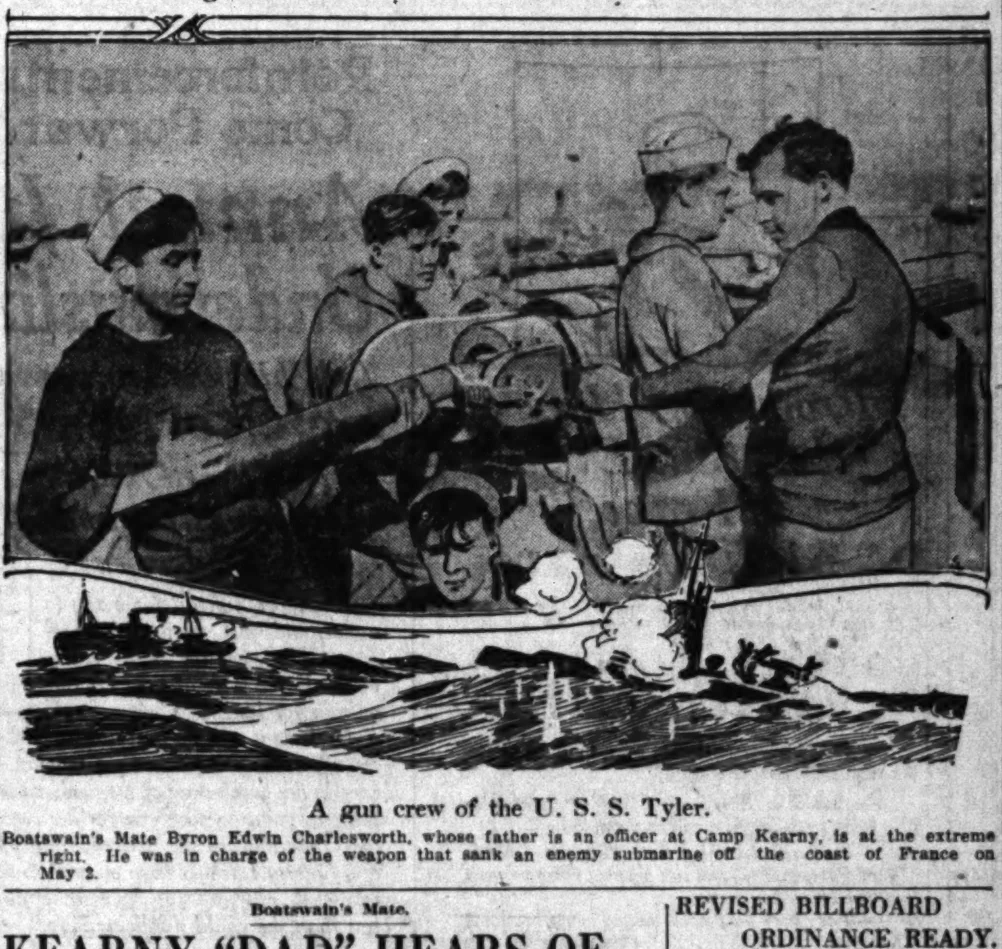
Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago and Former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, in commenting on the value of Nuxated Iron said: "This remedy has proven through my own tests of it to excel any remedy I have ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders. The manufacturers are to be congratulated in having given to the public a long felt want, a true tonic, supplying iron in an easily digested and assimilated form. A true health builder in every sense of the word."

MANUFACTURER'S NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Dr. Sullivan, and others with such surprising results and which is prescribed and recommended by physicians everywhere, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Owl Drug Co., Dickinson Drug Co., B. & B. Drug Co., Boswell & Noyes, Sun Drug Co. and other druggists.

He's a Lucky Fellow, This Man of Blood and Iron.

He has the vim and energy, the brain power and the money, too—Why not be in his place instead of being a nervous, irritable weakling haunted by fear during the day and sleeplessness and melancholia at night?

Loading the Gun that Sank a German U-boat.



A gun crew of the U. S. S. Tyler.

Boatswain's Mate Byron Edwin Charlesworth, whose father is an officer at Camp Kearny, is at the extreme right. He was in charge of the weapon that sank an enemy submarine off the coast of France on May 2.

Boatswain's Mate.

KEARNY "DAD" HEARS OF SON WHO SANK U-BOAT.

TO TALK to the dad of a young man who was in charge of a naval gun crew that sank a German submarine is like conversing with a gold hunter who has struck color. To grasp the hand of that man means that you will get a human tingle of your nerves.

Maj. John R. Charlesworth, commander of the First Battalion, One Hundred and Sixtieth (California) Infantry, Camp Kearny, has received word from his son, Byron Edwin Charlesworth, a boatswain's mate, first class, in charge of the gunners of the Old Dominion Line steamer, the Tyler, which was sunk off the coast of France on May 2, that the boy is on his way West to visit his father.

The story of the Tyler's sinking is a demonstration of the constant pluck shown by the men of the United States Navy, of things done every day and not told in print. Mate Charlesworth was formerly on the United States ships Pompey and Cincinnati in Asiatic waters, having joined the navy in November, 1912, though he is only 22 years old now. He visited his father, who was at Douglas in 1916, having received an honorable discharge. He then reenlisted and was assigned to the United States ship Arizona. Mumps kept him from the trip and he was sent aboard the Tyler later.

Two trips were made when no submarines were seen, but on November 14, three miles off Gibraltar, Charlesworth and fifteen others of his crew got busy on a Hun sea wasp. The Tyler had no convoy at the time and beat a hasty retreat, sending out wireless warnings of a U-boat danger. Two British destroyers found the spot shortly afterwards and found the bodies of two Germans and a lot of the wreckage of the U-boat in the sea.

The American gunners had espied a periscope and saw it disappear when they shot. From then on the Tyler was hunted by the Germans. Shortly before midnight on May 2 the steamer was torpedoed, six of the ship's crew and five of the navy gun crew being lost. Charlesworth was among the saved. When the navy gunners reached New York they were offered $1000 each, especially as they had extinguished a mysterious fire in the steamer at Naples at the risk of their lives. Secretary Daniels would not permit the rewarding of the sailors, as he said the men were fighting for the honor of their country. The owners say they could wait till after the war to reward the men.

Maj. Charlesworth went to Camp Kearny with the Colorado troops and was assigned to the California infantry. Mrs. Charlesworth lives at San Diego. The parents spent a few anxious days until they learned from the War Department their son had been saved and had reached a place of safety in France.

Letters from a Rookie.

CAMP KEARNY, June 7.—Dear Tim: The guy that wrote that stuff about "by their feet ye shall know them" knew what he was talking about. I know, Tim. He musta been a shoemaker or run a repair shop. There's no use talking, Tim, you can't loaf around in the army; there's too darn much to do, so that guys like me and "Rawhide" Kelly can get to France and stop this blooming war. Nobody ever worked as hard as I did this week.

The skipper came over and says, "Buck, I think you ought to do good in the reclamation department. You're good at picking up stuff." I thought he meant learning how to be a soldier, but I soon learned I was going to get the razoo again. The first thing the sergeant did was to put me at sorting out wire. I musta handled 10,000 reams of the stuff and the sergeant says, "Well, how you coming along?" I says, "Oh, it's all right I ain't kickin'. But what's the idea of fussing with this wire?"

"We use that to pester the Germans," he said. "We string 'em with it." But I was wise to him, Tim. He was trying to string me. They're going to use that wire to hold back the Yanks so there will be enough of the German devils left to surrender when this division gets over there. So he set me to sorting out old shoes. It was some job. Those guys musta had limberger cheese in the shoes, judging from the scent. I asked Nell to send me some perfume so I could make believe I was in a garden picking roses. Nell wrote back and said that was a heck of a job for a big, raw-boned soldier like me, who ought to be carrying a three-inch gun on his shoulder.

And the sergeant came along and he says, "Buck, you go over there and pick up all that waste paper." But it wasn't waste paper, Tim, it was the sporting page and I got so interested in the batting averages that I didn't notice the sergeant come up. He says, "Say, the guy that writes that may get paid space for it, but you're not paid space for reading it." I said, "No, when I get through with my Liberty Bond I don't get anything but a due bill." And he took the paper away from me and says, "Holy mackerel, Buck, there's a story from Harry Williams. He says you can buy chewing tobacco in France." And he reads it all through and then turns to me. "Say, you gold brick, get busy. You think this is dress parade." And I guess it was at that, 'cause all the guys' old clothes were there. He says, "Go over those horshoes and sort 'em out."

That wasn't so bad. But we "buck" privates chose up sides and got to playing the old village game of horseshoe, but no "top soak" is going to give you any rest in this army. I suppose when I get ready to discuss things with St. Peter some "top soak" will come along and say, "Hey, you forgot to clean your rifle." And then tell me I go on the heavenly inspection.

They can't fool me, Tim, that's me. The skipper was inspecting my rifle the other day and he looked it all over and handed it back. "Well," he says, "where's the balance of your rifle?" I looked at him and says, "I don't know, sir. It was all there this morning." But he says that was not the kind of a balance he meant. He says, "It's where you balance it." But I knew all the time, Tim, he couldn't fool me.

But I got a good one on a colonel here. He came out to the target ranch and says, "I guess I'll show you fellows how to pick 'em off." I was in the pits and the guy on the 'phone told me this colonel was going to shoot ten times. He shot and I didn't look at the target, but just waved the red flag. He turned to the lieutenant and says, "Huh, what's that?"

"That's a red flag, sir, a miss." And the colonel says, "Miss, miss. Somethin's the matter with this rifle. Give me another." Then he fired a lot more, I waved the red flag all the time. "Miss, miss," he said, "rifle no good." He got up and brushed the dust off his $60 uniform and he called me on the 'phone and asked me if I could see any hits. I said, "No, sir, I didn't see any." And I didn't, Tim. I didn't look. How could I see 'em?

I went to a dance the other night and you ought to have seen the way the chickens fell for my uniform. I was introduced to 'em all, but I didn't dance much 'cause their programmes were full and, anyway, I would rather watch them. But I got to curry some mules, Tim, and when it comes to that I'm there. I'm just aching to get a whack at Fritz. I guess I ought to enlist in the marines or the navy or got a job as a war correspondent to get to France. But then they need me and Rawhide and Sergt. Fisher to kill Germans, and I guess we'll show up the darn Huns. That's me, Tim.

Your friend,

BUCK.

FOR THE RED CROSS.

Mr. J. M. Green, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, has just received information from their New York office that that company's subscription to the Red Cross Second War Fund was a donation of $100,000, and in addition to that $100,000 in telegraph service.

REVISED BILLBOARD ORDINANCE READY.

COMPROMISE MEASURE PROBABLY WILL BE ADOPTED BY CITY COUNCIL.

The revised billboard ordinance has been drafted by City Attorney Stephens and it probably will be presented to the City Council tomorrow. That it will be adopted in amended form is believed certain, a majority of the members of the Council having indicated that they are in favor of the proposed compromise.

George W. Kleiser, president of the Foster & Kleiser Company, which recently purchased the interests of the Thomas H. B. Varney Company, has informed the Council that he is willing to remove all of the signs from the residential districts and will not contest the validity of the ordinance if the semi-district and fifty-foot clauses are eliminated.

Due to the fact that an injunction against the ordinance would hold up its operation until it went through the courts—possibly three or four years—and then the decision might be against the city, members of the Council are disposed to accept the proposition.

LOOKING ON AT CAMP KEARN

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

Corn and Wheat Diet.

CAMP KEARNY, June 7.—Men here have been put on a corn and wheat diet. The camp bakery companies were using 80 per cent. wheat and 20 per cent. other cereals. On Monday cornmeal was substituted for the other cereals. More than 2500 loaves of two pounds each are made daily for the cantonment.

Court-martial Dog.

The sentence of Pat, a thoroughbred English bulldog owned by Lieut.-Col. Karl E. Linderfelt of the One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Infantry, is nearly up. The dog was absent without leave for several days last week and since that time has been tied up at the officers' mess. The animal is named after Col. Patrick Hamrock, commander of the One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Infantry.

Leaves for Visit.

Mrs. William C. Webb, wife of Lieut.-Col. Webb, commander of the Utah regiment, has left for Salt Lake City. Mrs. Webb is now in Los Angeles and will leave, from there for Salt Lake City, after the regiment leaves the vicinity.

To Film Pictures.

Raymond Wells, a Los Angeles motion-picture director, called on Maj.-Gen. Frederick S. Strong and Col. John W. Gulick, chief of staff, recently and made arrangements to bring a stock company of ten prominent picture actors and actresses to camp every week. Arrangements were made to produce a creditable show weekly at the Knights of Columbus building No. 1, the organization agreeing to provide for the mess of the members of the troupe. The first show will be given in about two weeks and will be free to the Sammies.

Young Journalist.

Edward Payson, Jr., the 13-day-old son of Sergt. E. R. Marsh, Quartermaster's Corps, and advertising manager of Trench and Camp, the Y.M.C.A. paper here, is the youngest member of the Sunshine Press Club, the Trench and Camp organization. The babe was elected a honorary member. Capt. Morgan Vining, the division censor, is also an honorary member of the club.

Professor is Visitor.

Ernest J. Hopkins, professor of journalism of the University of Southern California at Los Angeles, was a recent visitor at camp. He will shortly address the Y.M.C.A. secretaries on the topic of publicity and newspaper work. He took great interest, while here, in the work of Lieut. J. David Houser, in charge of the work of the psychological board, which investigates and rates a man's native intelligence.

The resignation of Capt. Edward D. Giroux, One Hundred and Fifteenth Sanitary Train, has been accepted.

re have been instances where ng has been hampered because inability of the companies ng gas and electricity to keep with the growth. This has been y due to the shortage of ma- and labor. The question of al shortage will be placed be- the government as a war con- y in view of the housing con- at the harbor. Not only everal thousand more houses ed for shipyard workers and stationed at the naval and training camps, but also ing industrial plans now on ment basis.

increased pay-roll in the har- district during the past year one of the most remark- developments of Southern Cali- Workers at San Pedro are ceiving about $1,750,000 a and before the end of the is expected this will be in- to $2,000,000 a month. Ship- contracts already given out government amount to an ag- of $15,000,000, with pros- for substantial additions.

OTHER FEATURES.

the building of ships is only of a number of features that contributed to the prosperity he harbor district. The Fort Arthur barracks and the Sub- Base are permanent institu- that will also bring hundreds families to live at the harbor homes are provided.

canning of fish is an infant ry that has had an astound- developments. The fish indus- try alone will amount to about $8,000,000 this year and gives employment to more persons than the $12,000,000 annual lumber industry, which for a generation was almost the sole industry at the port. The oil shipments this year will amount in value to about $6,000,000.

All this development with shipbuilding has contributed to a demand for homes that probably will not be satisfied for several years in spite of the remarkable activity in building at the present time. During the last four months the building permits in the harbor district have exceeded $1,000,000. At this rate it is probable that building for 1918 in the harbor district will break all records on the Pacific Coast for a community of 20,000 and may run some of the big industrial communities of the East, like Gary, Ind., a close race for rapid development.

NEED MORE SCHOOLS.

Not only has the increase in population in the harbor district taxed housing facilities, but also educational, religious and social institutions as well. The Board of Education has just called for bids for six new bungalow schoolhouses to relieve crowded conditions in the schools. Two will be built at Terminal Island, and one each at Fifteenth street, Fish Harbor, Barton Hill and Fish Harbor schools.

Several of the churches have also found that pews that were often, before the recent development, sparsely filled are now too small for their Sunday congregations.

The biggest project for immediate relief of housing conditions that has been proposed is the subdivision of the Dodson ranch under the direction of the San Pedro Community Association, which has a contract with Mrs. Rudecinda F. S. de Dodson for the purchase of the property. This ranch comprises 880 acres of the most accessible land in the harbor district that is still intact in one large holding. It is planned to release the ranch in forty-acre units so that building companies and others who can promote housing plans will have an opportunity to help solve the problem.

Work Begun.

ILL MORE THAN DOUBLE HARBOR'S WATER SUPPLY.

ORK just begun at the har- bor will more than double the water supply of that dis- and will assure an adequate ply at all times for the present and for the territory of 2300 which the city proposes to an- as well.

Construction of a new water reser- to serve the harbor with a ca- of 15,000,000 gallons, or six the capacity of the reservoir in use, is under way. The old of 2,500,000 gallons will rebuilt and the two reser- will maintain a supply of 17,- gallons when full.

Shortage of water in the harbor caused by the enormous de- from the shipyards, naval station, Submarine Base, MacArthur, and other districts plants, forced the water board immediate action to prevent shortage.

Additional wells will be built at in the Wilmington district, the pumping plant for the harbor section is located. The plant is now being doubled the arrival of additional pumps other equipment. Surveyors at work last week going over territory, which it is proposed and where a water system, costing about $230,000, will be put in.

FOR AMERICANIZATION.

Special Educators Needed for the Work, Says Immigration and Housing Official.

Mrs. Frank A. Gibson of the State Immigration and Housing Commission yesterday addressed the City Club on the problem of Americanizing the foreign born.

She said there are 5,000,000 illiterate persons in the United States and that while considerable good work is going on in connection with educating them, the country needs special educators and the bureau of education should be under the charge of a centralized body.

OFF TO FIGHT, LEAVES MONEY.

Joins Marines and Sells Clothes for Thrift Stamps.

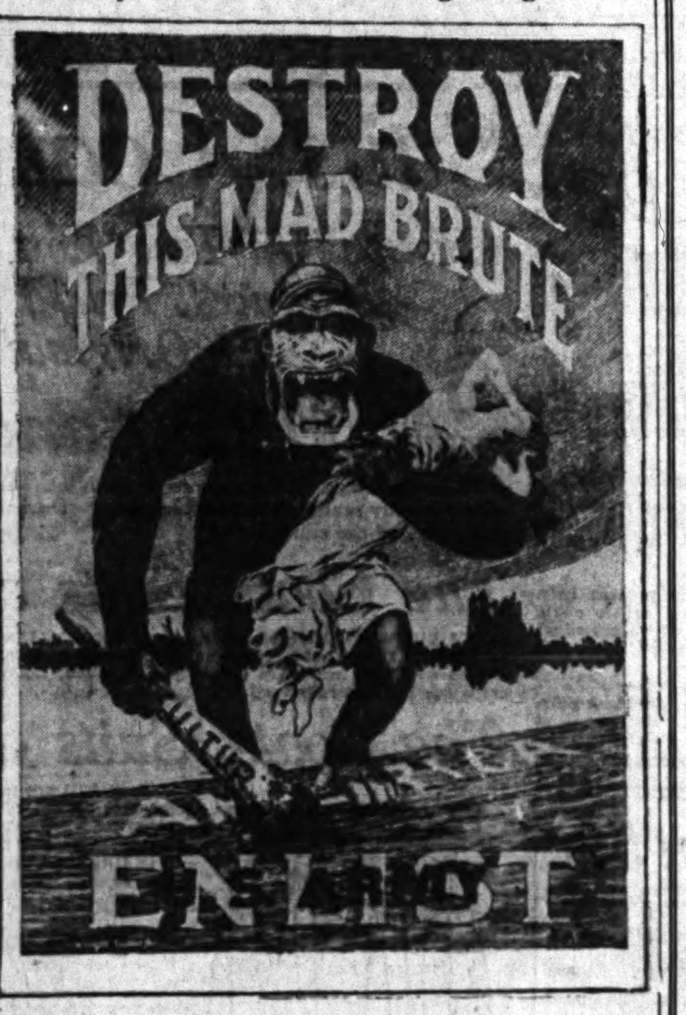
John L. McShane applied at the Marine Corps recruiting station in the Central Build- ing for enlistment. He wanted to "go over" at once, but was informed that he would first have to go to the training school at Mare Island. He took the examination, passed it successfully, and is now one of the "first-to-fight" men.

On leaving last night he asked Sergt. Sutton what he should do with his civilian ef- fects. "Dispose of your excess clothing and invest your money in Thrift Stamps," replied the sergeant. A little later Mc- Shane returned, pulled out a $50 bill, and in ten minutes had exchanged it for that amount in Thrift Stamps.

John L. McShane,

Who enlisted in the marines here and sold his civilian clothing to buy Thrift Stamps.

Exactly What We Are Fighting For.



One of the new army posters.

Depict Hun Barbarity.

NEW POSTERS TO SPUR RECRUITING FOR ARMY.

A NEW series of army recruiting posters has just been issued and will shortly flame from every available public posting place. Aiding the government in its various war activities are many of America's leading artists and illustrators, advertising and publicity specialists. Inspired by the great cause of humanity, these men have raised the art of advertising to a higher standard than ever before.

The San Francisco recruiting headquarters recently held a contest for illustrated posters and the prize-winners have received widespread attention throughout this country and abroad. Some fairly breathed the spirit of the Marne bridge and of Cantigny, while others faithfully portrayed the horror and the menace of Hun brutality.

When the "Destroy This Mad Brute" poster first appeared on the boards, crowds gathered and there were some who thought it too horrible. Yet it has proved to be one of the most effective means ever devised to get recruits. There are a few persons who may think the little Belgian boy poster is an exaggeration, but like the entire series it is a faithful portrayal of a truth. The artist, F. N. Beringer of San Francisco, saw the little fellow while in New York. Minus his hands and eyes, this forlorn little figure arouses a sympathy which gripes the heart.

The latest brutality practiced by the Huns has given the idea expressed in a sketch "Hun Mercy." This design was executed by Harry L. Bailey of Los Angeles, whose work has been recognized among the best in art centers from coast to coast. In an effort to carry on this work, the San Francisco district is raising funds through the distribution of national organization tablets, the proceeds from which are devoted to securing enlistments in various branches of the army.

FRAUD CHARGE HEARD.

Brokerage Firm Asserts Money was Advanced for Purchase that Proved Mythical.

Testimony was heard before Justice Brown yesterday in the charge of fraud made against Julius Langner by Quirk brothers, dealers in stocks and securities, with offices in the Hibernian Bank Building. It is alleged that Langner represented to the firm that he had an opportunity to buy a $1000 bond of the Victor Portland Cement Company for $650, and that he had a purchaser, W. H. Jacobson of No. 1235 West Twelfth street, who would give $725 for the security. He exhibited a check, it is said, for $50, signed by Jacobson as an earnest of the deal.

On these representations Quirk Bros. advanced to Langner $400, which he said he needed to carry out the deal, the understanding being that the profit of $75 was to be divided among them. Fraud in the transaction is alleged, as Jacobson, the alleged purchaser of the bond, never appeared. Langner stoutly denies any wrong-doing in the trade. The case will be resumed tomorrow afternoon.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, migitation or prevention of disease.

In Silent Drama.

FORTY CLUB WOMEN REGISTER CLASS; RED CROSS BENEFITS.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

FORTY stylish dames from clubland earned $200 for the Red Cross, Tuesday, as film actresses. There was visible excitement when the Biograph Film Company offered to make the donation in exchange for the services of forty "stylishly-clad ladies" to populate and add "class" to the entrancing garden party scenes in the new play, "The Man from Broadway," to be filmed in the lovely Arthur Letts gardens in Hollywood. The response was prompt and adequate, and whether they proved future film heroines or not, the Red Cross is richer by that amount.

As the order had gone forth that participants appear on the scene promptly at noon, sumptuous machines were loaded with amateur "extras" long ere anyone thought of so mundane a thing as lunch. And thereby hangs a tale. Arrived at the Letts grounds, an impressive scene was in the making, with Grace Darmond, the lovely serene princess, and her consort in brave Czarish uniform, ensconced in a royal box, with Earl Williams, the gallant American hero, leaning intimately over the Princess's chair. It was obvious from the start that the amateur "extras" had not donned their flutterfullest party dresses and shady hats and parasols in vain.

GIVE 'EM THRILLS.

The occasion was full of thrills for the novice, who would come upon a company of gorgeous looking soldiers lying around on the grass awaiting their cue, or haughty looking specimens of masculinity, in frock coats and silk hats, looking cynical and bored under a rose bower, while gay little ladies calmly smeared grease paint and lip tints and eye-beading over their pretty countenances.

As the hours wore on our amateurs became restive. No one seemed to care whether they were there or not, it was 2 p.m., and lunch became an imperative thought. They had rather expected to be home again by now. Then a rest interval was proclaimed and all the professionals brought forth sustantial looking lunches. Even the beauteous heroine, who looked as if she couldn't eat anything but rose leaves and morning dew, produced two whacking big boxes of doorstep sandwiches, sat on the steps, and proceeded to pass liberal morsels through her rosebud lips. It was tortuous. The stylish amateurs looked on in anguish. Then one more empty than the rest confided her stress to the beauteous heroine—and Grace Darmond nobly shared her doorsteps with the famished "extra"—and believe me half a sandwich is eminently superior to no bread.

SUIT, EARLY.

At 4 p.m., Director Conaway suddenly remembered the presence of the Red Cross extras, modulated his voice to dulcet courtesy, and began giving palpitating orders. Each lady was given a handsome professional actor escort—and it was awfully lucky, as they all got the ones they had previously marked for their pet choice. They were to stroll about the grounds in animated conversation and register vivacious interest. Oh, but that was quite, quite easy under the circumstances. They all knew each other's first names in no time at all. But after one scene had been taken, several of those stylish extras remembered urgent engagements, and one by one they slipped off to their machines and departed. After all, just one person would never be missed. But when but four of them were left for the last scene at nigh 5 p.m., Director Conaway was saying hard, hard things about stylish amateurs. The precious four left, however, were fortunately, Mrs. Robert Holmes, Mrs. Fred Hickok, Miss Myra Miller and Mrs. L. B. Coates, who, as their club activities have long since proven, see any job they undertake through to a finish. They therefore figure prominently in the last scenes and as a special mark of favor Mr. Conaway gave them an extra $5 each for their very own—the first money any of them had ever earned.

The picture will be produced in about six weeks and the Biograph company has promised to give a pre-view in Los Angeles for the benefit of the Friday Morning Club's Red Cross auxiliary.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WAR WORK INCREASES.

DEMANDS upon the Chamber of Commerce to aid the government in its war work are increasing constantly. Since the declaration of war more than a year ago the scope of the chamber work has widened until at present the larger percentage of its activities are directed toward crushing Kaiserism forever, states the Chamber of Commerce bulletin.

These demands upon the chamber are not confined to the officials and various departments, but extend to standing committees, special committees and members. Never before has there been such co-operation on the part of the membership and never before has it been so necessary for every member in the organization to devote some portion of his time to organization work. No officer or member has attempted to beg off from any assigned duty when told that the matter involved was government work and necessary to win the war.

Some of the activities of the chamber indicate the general trend of its work during war time. These include: Co-operating with the government in establishing a balloon site and training station at Arcadia; performing similar offices in the aviation training school now in operation at Riverside; fathering submarine base project; initiating war garden idea for Los Angeles; relieving labor tension in the agricultural districts; initiating home products campaign to save car space; locating scores of new industries which are adding materially to Los Angeles' pay roll; protecting membership from unworthy fund solicitations; acting as intermediary in obtaining thousands of dollars' worth of government business for Los Angeles firms; providing free offices and equipment for a score of government departments and patriotic organizations; initiating the California French relief ship cargo; raising thousands of dollars for the Hemet-San Jacinto relief fund; directing patriotic mass meetings each Sunday afternoon at Exposition Park for public education in war matters and acting as a clearinghouse for governmental activities in the Southwest.

Much of the work done for the government is highly confidential and receives no publicity. Although accomplished without brass band attachment, it is none the less important and appreciated by the authorities at Washington. The chamber is making good its proffer to the government, made immediately after war was declared, to aid in every way possible in the successful prosecution of the war.

"PAT" O'BRIEN COMING.

Aviator, Who Escaped from Germany After 8000-Foot Fall, is to Tell Experiences.

Lieut. "Pat" O'Brien, of the British Flying Corps, the intrepid American aviator, who escaped from his German guards after an 8000-foot fall into the hands of the enemy, is coming to Los Angeles the 21st inst. to tell the story of his thrilling escape and harrowing experiences, a story that held King George spellbound in a fifty-five-minute interview, the longest interview granted by the English King since the beginning of the war. He will speak in Trinity Auditorium.

After falling into the enemies' hands, Lieut. O'Brien jumped from the window of a train going thirty-five miles an hour, on which he was being taken to the prison camp, and then spent seventy-two days crawling across the German empire, most of the time in full uniform of Royal Flyers. Lieut. O'Brien is only 27 years of age, an American of Irish descent, born at Momence, Ill. He is now on a three-months' leave and is seeking a transfer to the American army, so that when he re-enters the struggle he will fight under the flag of his own country. Lieut. O'Brien is well known here, being a member of Islam Temple, A.A.O.N.M.S.

Causes Arrest.

DICTOGRAPH IS USED TO TEST ARTIST'S LOYALTY.

A DICTOGRAPH operated by officers of the army intelligence bureau caused the arrest of L. N. Legendre, a Sierra Madre artist and cartoonist, who was bound over for trial in $1000 bonds on a charge of Espionage Act violation by United States Commissioner Long yesterday.

Complaints had reached Federal officers that Legendre had been discussing the world war in uncomplimentary terms to America. He was invited to a downtown office building to talk over a possible order for work. A dictograph was in place and this is what is stated to have been recorded by the instrument as having been said by Legendre:

"I had to laugh this morning when I read the papers and saw that inasmuch as the U-boats had not sunk any warships off the Jersey coast, it was a great American victory. It doesn't take much for these people to accumulate a victory. It is a defeat for America and a big defeat."

Testimony as to other alleged remarks against the government by Legendre became so strong that the commissioner requested women present to leave the courtroom. It was disclosed that a search by Federal officers of Legendre's Sierra Madre home uncovered further alleged incriminating evidence.

Legendre's wife is a worker for the Red Cross at Sierra Madre. His bondsmen are Frank K. Green and Charles G. Putnam. He was represented in court by Attorney Charles L. Evans.

STUDIO.

Here and There.

BRUNTON'S INNOVATION.

FILM MAN INAUGURATES NEW METHOD OF PRODUCTION.

The plans being carried out at the Brunton Studio (formerly Paralta Studios) together with the organization and purpose of the concern, of which Robert Brunton is the head, mark an epoch in the history of motion-picture organizations. This innovation in method and policy lies in the fact that the Brunton Studios will produce pictures for other concerns exclusively—not for their own company. And after the completion of productions made at the studio, Mr. Brunton's company will have no further interest in them other than the credit to be reflected on the organization by their good qualities.

Other companies have sub-leased their studios or have rented stage space to different producing units of other concerns, under various arrangements. But for the first time a large, perfectly-equipped motion-picture studio has been opened for the exclusive purpose of producing the pictures of other firms and independent stars. No stars nor picture-producing companies will be maintained by the Brunton Studio. A stock company, however, has been organized and held for the use of the companies which produce at the Brunton Studios, as have also other necessary departments, including a properties organization, an art department, a scenic department and others. A casting director with a full extra-talent system for obtaining atmosphere people, and a locations manager with a system of getting locations and transportation for scenes to be taken away from the studio, will likewise be maintained by the Brunton Studios. All of these departments will be on the pay roll of the studios.

Paralta Plays, Inc., of New York, formerly intimately connected with the present studio under the old organization of the Paralta Studios, is now a separate organization from the Brunton Studio, producing pictures there under the same arrangement which once existed with Pathe, and which still exists with the Haworth Corporation, now producing Hayakawa plays at the Brunton Studios.

The Brunton Studio announces that when the construction plans now being carried out are completed, the studio will be one of the largest and finest-equipped in California. At present there is ample accommodation for a large number of companies, and the construction work is progressing rapidly. There is now a plot of ground in the main studio, ten acres in extent, devoted entirely to permanent buildings and glass stages. Another plot adjoining contains fifty-six acres, and another, very recently acquired, contains fourteen. Upon these plots will be erected a large variety of permanent street sets, gardens, jungles, artificial streams and rivers, to be kept ready for the use of the companies producing there.

It is expected from negotiations now under way between the Brunton Studio and various companies, that by the end of the present month there will be eight producing companies at work on the lot. The Paralta companies now producing pictures at the studio are those of J. Warren Kerrigan, Bessie Barriscale and Louise Glaum. The other company actively producing there is that of Sessue Hayakawa, the Haworth Corporation star, mentioned above. Mr. Brunton is head of the new studio, and Jesse D. Hampton is business manager.

A feature just finished at the Brunton Studio, and one which promises to make a sensation, is Thomas Dixon's "The One Woman," produced by Mastercraft, of which F. Eugene Farnsworth is president. The subject of this picture is anti-socialistic and anti-I.W.W., and several months were taken in its production. Its cast was specially selected and included W. Lawson Butt, Clara Williams, Adda Gleason, Joseph J. Dowling, Herschal Mayall and others. Mr. Farnsworth yesterday departed for New York with the film in his possession.

A dinner party with Mr. Farnsworth as guest of honor was given at the Athletic Club by Mr. Brunton, last Tuesday night, the guests including: Mr. and Mrs. Jesse D. Hampton, Bessie Barriscale, Clara Williams, Adda Gleason, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lawson Butt, Herschal Mayall, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Dowling, Howard Hickman, J. Korn, J. C. Okey, Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth, R. J. Kern, Charles Kaufman, J. E. Woodbury, Thomas Little, Bert Crossland, Albert Cody, R. B. Kidd, J. C. Jesson and others.

Runs Along Like Brook.

With President Harry E. Aitken in New York, and with assistant to the president, O. L. Sellers, in charge of the big Triangle Culver City Studios, two pictures have been completed this week and two new photoplays are being read preparatory to casting for production. Three other stories are nearing completion and several exceptional stories, including well-known novels and magazine stories, are being put into continuity.

Director Thomas N. Heffron has completed "The Painted Lily," which is now in the film editing department. This story of London night life, which is a vehicle for Alma Rubens, was written by Catherine Carr. Jack Richardson, Gene Burr and Francis McDonald are important members of the supporting cast.

Director Heffron's next subject will be "Alias Mary Brown," a crook story which calls for a woman lead. This story is the work of E. Magnus Ingleton. The other Triangle feature now in the editing department is "Marked Cards," directed by Henri D'Elba, the most recent addition to the Triangle directing forces, and featuring Margery Wilson, Wallace MacDonald and Jack Curtis. "Marked Cards" was written by Adela Rogers St. John, whose brilliant stories have been features of the Green Book and other publications.

Director Gilbert P. Hamilton has been chosen by Mr. Sellers to direct "The Golden Fleece," a Saturday Evening Post story by Frederick Irving Anderson.

Encouragement Note.

With view to stimulating interest among the literary folk, Daniel Carson Goodman, the noted novelist and short-story writer, now of the Triangle scenario department, is asking that authors of three or more photoplays which have been produced submit to the scenario department their ideas in synopsis form.

Will Do His Bit.

"Marked Cards" is Wallace MacDonald's last appearance in Triangle features, the popular leading man leaving in a few days for Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he will enlist in the Canadian artillery.

Bright Idea Didn't Work.

Here's Joe King's way of getting a table in a crowded cafe—just slip the head waiter a case note and presto, it is done! The debonair Triangle leading man put his formula to test in a well known and crowded Venice cafe, the other night, and, strange to relate, it failed for the once. This is how it happened:

Enter King, smiling and confident, with a fair damsel on his arm.

"Hello, Charlie," Joe smilingly greeted the man at the door, his hand meanwhile seeking his pocket and drawing out a crumpled five-spot which he placed in the other's palm. "I want a good table, quick," murmured Joe.

"Sure, Mr. King," was the rejoinder, and the man disappeared. That was the last King saw of his man and his note for some time, though he finally secured a table.

Later a drink was sent over to King's table from Ruth Roland and her husband. Turning to bow his thanks, Joe's jaw dropped.

The "head waiter" King had slipped the V to was Miss Roland's husband. King is still out his five bucks, but Miss Roland declares she gave it to the Red Cross.

Foss Strong for Art.

Smiling Bill Desmond, the strong man of the Triangle studios, was laid up for repairs for a couple of days while at work on his latest subject, "Hell's End," which is being directed by J. W. McLaughlin.

In "Hell's End," Desmond is

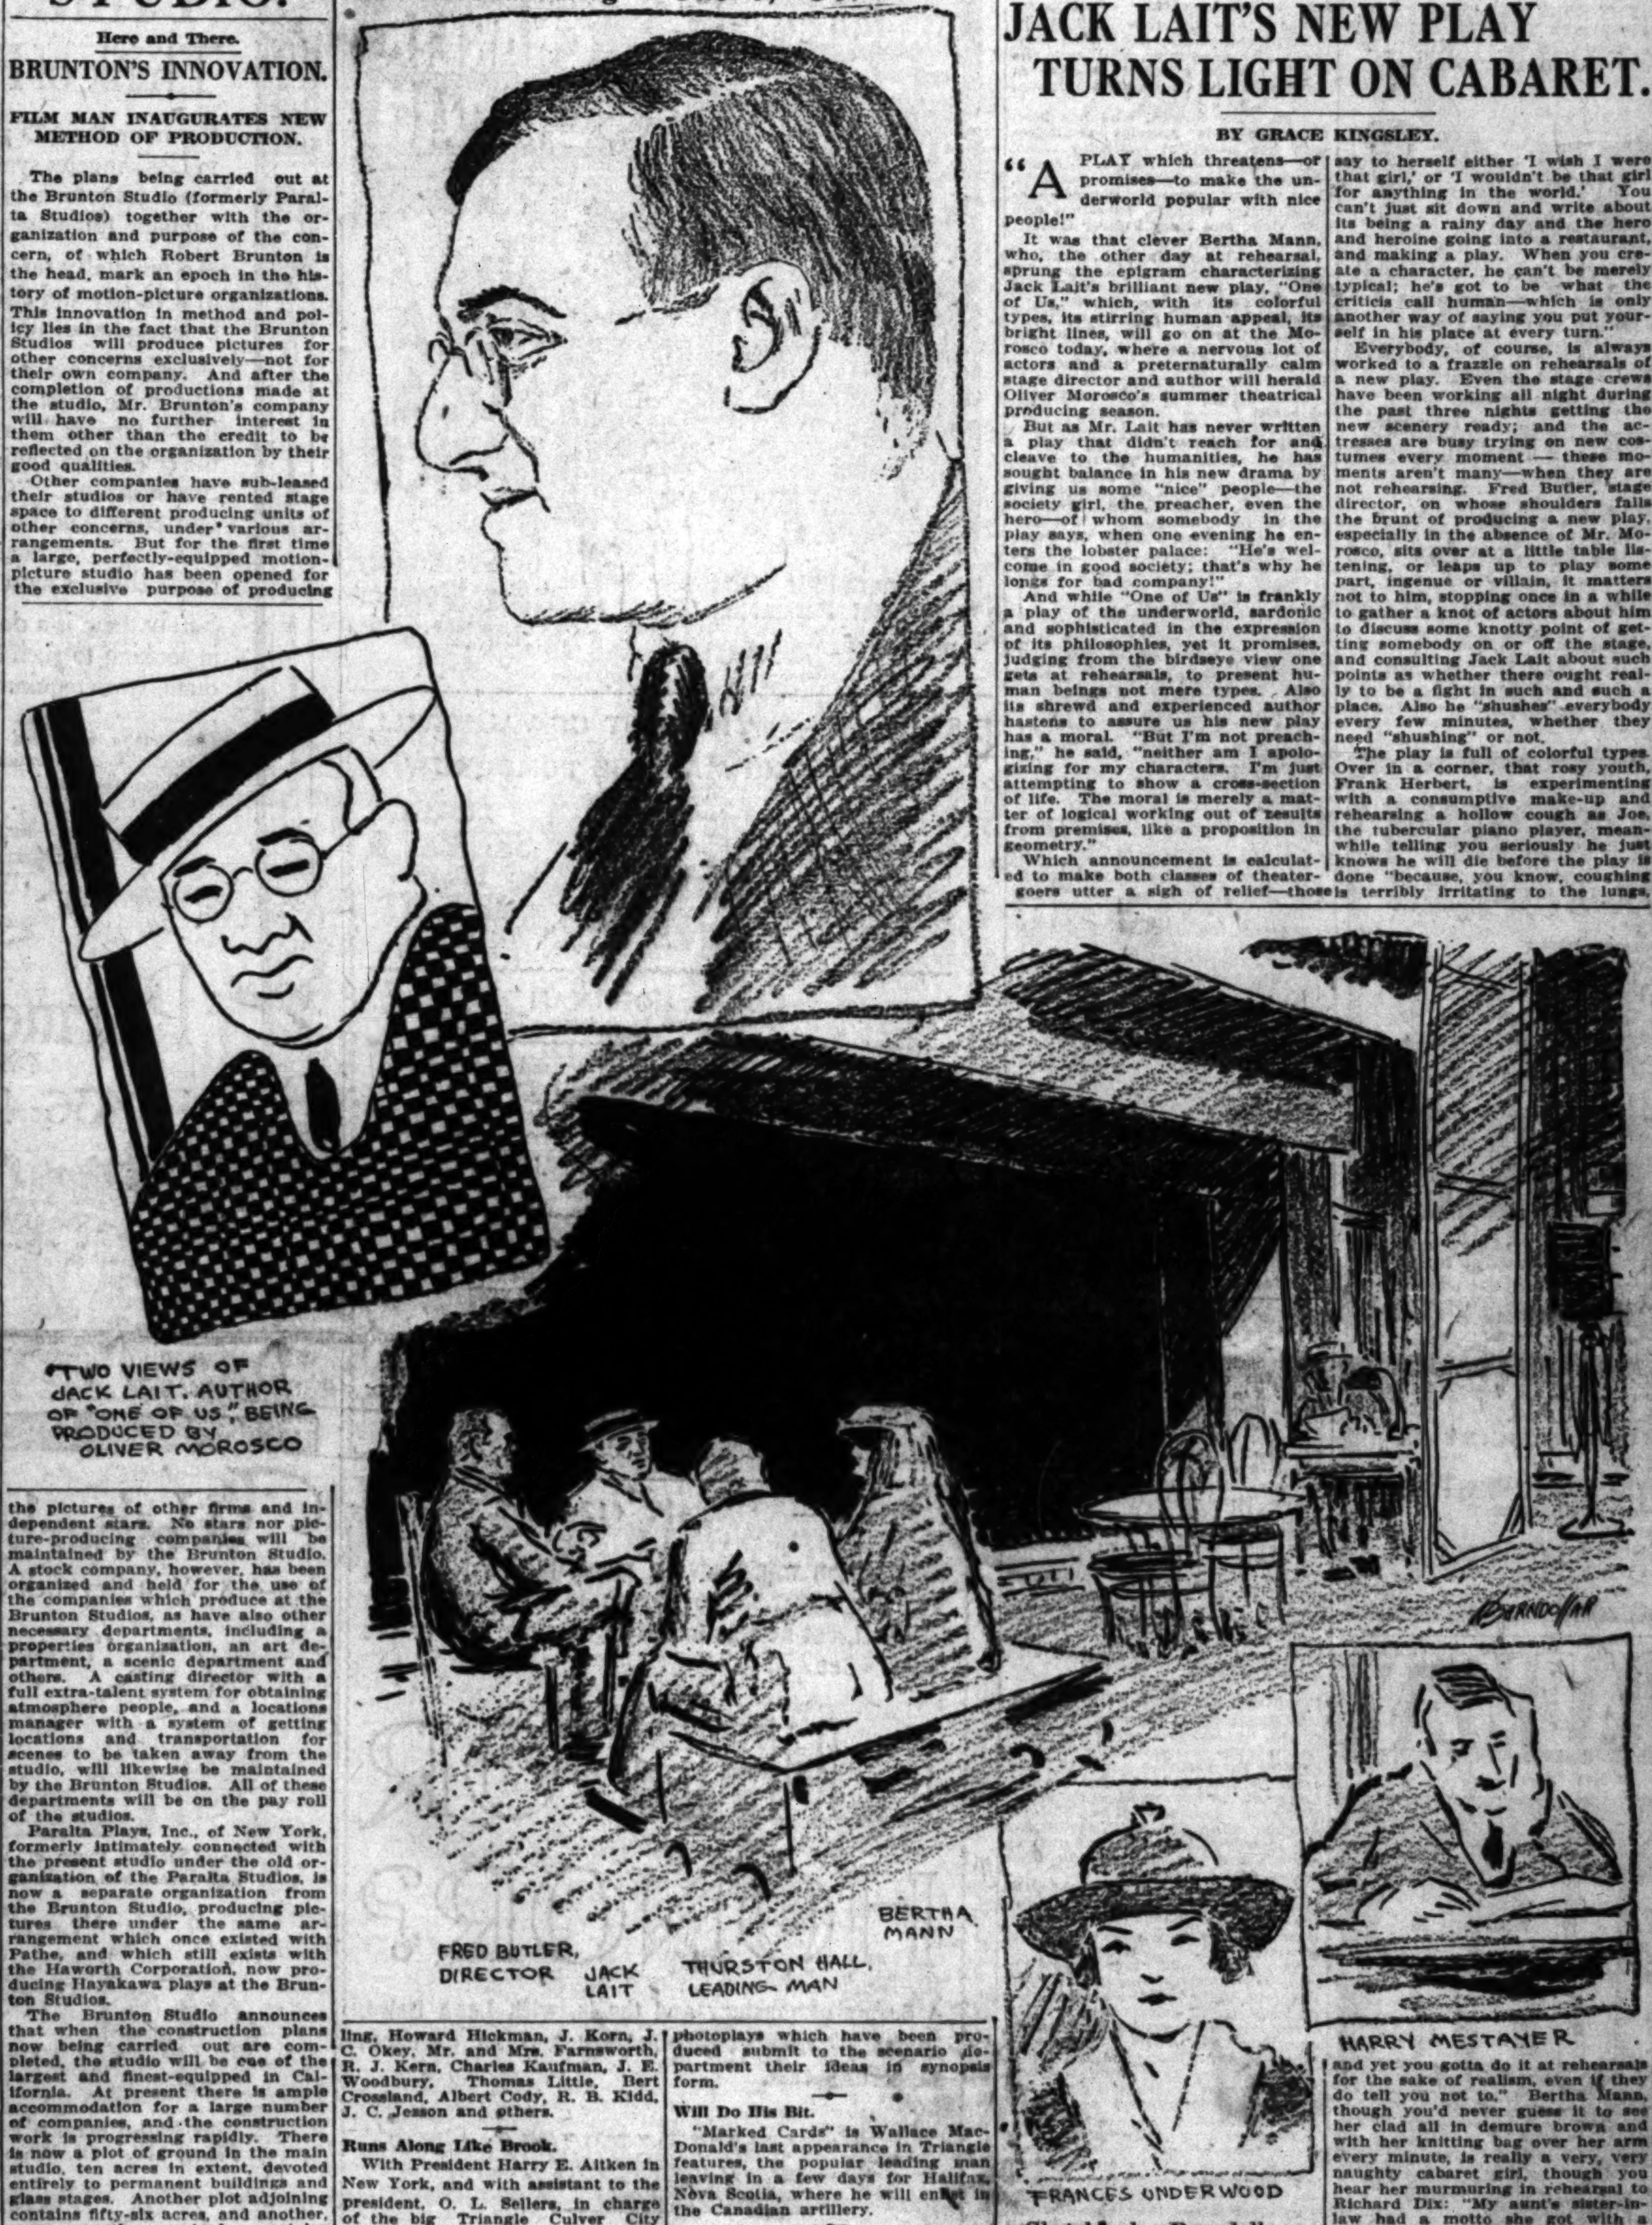
Rehearsing "One of Us."



"TWO VIEWS OF JACK LAIT, AUTHOR OF "ONE OF US," BEING PRODUCED BY OLIVER MOROSCO

Sketches by Barndollar.

Breezy.

JACK LAIT'S NEW PLAY TURNS LIGHT ON CABARET.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

"A PLAY which threatens—or promises—to make the underworld popular with nice people!"

It was that clever Bertha Mann, who, the other day at rehearsal, sprung the epigram characterizing Jack Lait's brilliant new play, "One of Us," which, with its colorful types, its stirring human appeal, its bright lines, will go on at the Morosco today, where a nervous lot of actors and a preternaturally calm stage director and author will herald Oliver Morosco's summer theatrical producing season.

But as Mr. Lait has never written a play that didn't reach for and cleave to the humanities, he has sought balance in his new drama by giving us some "nice" people—the society girl, the preacher, even the hero—of whom somebody in the play says, when one evening he enters the lobster palace: "He's welcome in good society; that's why he longs for bad company!"

And while "One of Us" is frankly a play of the underworld, sardonic and sophisticated in the expression of its philosophies, yet it promises, judging from the birdseye view one gets at rehearsals, to present human beings not mere types. Also its shrewd and experienced author hastens to assure us his new play has a moral. "But I'm not preaching," he said, "neither am I apologizing for my characters. I'm just attempting to show a cross-section of life. The moral is merely a matter of logical working out of results from premises, like a proposition in geometry."

Which announcement is calculated to make both classes of theatergoers utter a sigh of relief—those who hate being preached at in the theater and those who don't.

"I ought, I suppose," declared Mr. Lait the other day at rehearsal, "to be running around here clad in a dressing gown, with my hair all rumpled up, and crying out, 'My gawd, haven't actors any souls!'"

Instead of which, as a habit retained from the old reportorial days, and wearing the latest things in straw hats and natty business suits, Mr. Lait whittled a pencil while he sat down and talked.

Leaping right into a fresh and untouched field of drama is what Mr. Lait is doing in "One of Us." In other words, he is "planting" his story in a cabaret—a field into which so far no playwright has dug for material. Mr. Lait admits it's a difficult and delicate subject to handle, but he's got it all thought out.

"Why did I choose cabaret girls as my characters in this play? Because it's not a forbidden subject. Women of my audiences, many of them, brush sleeves with them in the restaurants. They wonder what the life of these girls is. I might have made my characters chorus girls, but the footlights intervene.

And then Mr. Lait delivered himself of an epigram. "As for the men of the audience, when it's a chorus he looks at, he can only gaze; when it's a cabaret, there's hope.

"That's where the principle of application comes in. Plot and theme are absolutely necessary to a play, of course. But these are not enough. You've got to have your audience play with you, or they don't care a whoop about your play. Every woman in your audience has got to say to herself either 'I wish I were that girl,' or 'I wouldn't be that girl for anything in the world.' You can't just sit down and write about its being a rainy day and the hero and heroine going into a restaurant, and making a play. When you create a character, he can't be merely typical; he's got to be what the criticis call human—which is only another way of saying you put yourself in his place at every turn."

Everybody, of course, is always worked to a frazzle on rehearsals of a new play. Even the stage crews have been working all night during the past three nights getting the new scenery ready; and the actresses are busy trying on new costumes every moment — these moments aren't many—when they are not rehearsing. Fred Butler, stage director, on whose shoulders falls the brunt of producing a new play, especially in the absence of Mr. Morosco, sits over at a little table listening, or leaps up to play some part, ingenue or villain, it matters not to him, stopping once in a while to gather a knot of actors about him to discuss some knotty point of getting somebody on or off the stage, and consulting Jack Lait about such points as whether there ought really to be a fight in such and such a place. Also he "shushes" everybody every few minutes, whether they need "shushing" or not.

The play is full of colorful types. Over in a corner, that rosy youth, Frank Herbert, is experimenting with a consumptive make-up and rehearsing a hollow cough as Joe, the tubercular piano player, meanwhile telling you seriously he just knows he will die before the play is done "because, you know, coughing is terribly irritating to the lungs, and yet you gotta do it at rehearsals for the sake of realism, even if they do tell you not to." Bertha Mann, though you'd never guess it to see her clad all in demure brown and with her knitting bag over her arm every minute, is really a very, very naughty cabaret girl, though you hear her murmuring in rehearsal to Richard Dix: "My aunt's sister-in-law had a motto she got with a pound of tea," etc.; while Mr. Dix, who is the very toughest East Side guy ever created, as soon as the scene is over takes his nice little mother out for an ice cream soda. Mommer Dix, you see, can hardly ever be lured downtown, much less to the theater, but she just had to come this once to see "Dicky" rehearse.

As she studies her long adventuress role, Frances Underwood lunches off a ham sandwich and a malted milk or voices epigrams to her knitting. She it is, you know, who loves the consumptive piano player, and who, attaining the proud respectability of wifehood, exclaims: "Now I can look the butcher in the eye and I can give the milkman the devil, because I'm a respectable married woman!" George Preston, the handsome young juvenile actor who makes his debut in this play, and Robert Lawlor, alternately listen to each other's lines and play handball with Jim Corrigan in the back alley in order to help him get into first-class condition for his fight; and Marion Van Tyne, as the society bud, slips ever and anon away to her dressing-room to be "tried on" by the dressmaker, who isn't being allowed to eat or sleep these days.

There are some smart epigrams in "One of Us." Here are some of them:

"It isn't where you come from that counts—it's where you're going!"

"Good getters should be good forgetters."

"I find a lot of men who want to be entertained—but not with song!"

"Honor among thieves? Nix. They're no better than square guys."

SCREEN.

Differences.

"A DOLL'S HOUSE."

FROM HENRIK IBSEN TO THE CHRISTIE COMEDIES.

Kinema.

Distinguished for her beauty and talents, Elsie Ferguson returns to the Kinema for the week commencing this Sunday in Ibsen's well-known play, "A Doll's House." The Fatty Arbuckle comedy on the same programme finds Fatty swinging not two guns, but three at least. Fatty cleans up the whole crowd. Pathe News, the first of the Katzenjammer cartoons, and Dr. Kingsley with his keen orchestra, complete a varied and fine programme of entertainment.

Grauman's.

With all the craftiness of his former self strongly and substantially reinforced after a short rest of a few weeks from his particular field of action, Douglas Fairbanks, the dashing, crashing, smiling, optimistic Doug, will be seen at Grauman's for one week, beginning tomorrow. Grauman's has many good things in store for the theater-goer this week in the added attractions, consisting of seven separate features including superb instrumental and vocal musical selections.

Quinn's Rialto.

The gladdest and saddest little star of the screen, Mae Marsh, comes back to Quinn's Rialto today in her latest production, "The Woman." In a role replete with great dramatic opportunities, in which the winsome charm of the star is afforded wide scope, Mae Marsh promises to give the screen a new sensation. This will be Mae Marsh's last picture at Quinn's Rialto, for the little whim girl of the screen is ill and it may be some time before she will be seen again. To follow Mae Marsh, Quinn's Rialto will project the season's biggest theatrical story, "My Own United States," written by Anthony Paul Kelly, and with the eminent actor, Arnold Daly, in the leading role.

Tally's Broadway.

Ambassador James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," which has been the attraction at Clune's Auditorium for the past three weeks, will next week be transferred to Tally's Broadway. The First National Exhibitors Circuit, who control the exhibiting rights to this feature, were unable to get a longer run at the Auditorium because of bookings for this theater which had been made in advance of their engagement. President Wilson, after seeing "My Four Years in Germany," said: "Every American should see it." Mayor Woodman and other high city officials have all declared that it is a most wonderful production, and that it will give an understanding to any mind that is after the truth—why America entered the war.

Superba.

The sacrifice of a beautiful young girl on the altar of gold in order to pay her mother's gambling losses is the theme of "A Soul for Sale," the sensational Jewel production starring Dorothy Phillips, which comes to the Superba today. The elaborate settings show the smart set of New York, (one of the sensations being an actual monkey dinner,) both in their city habitats on Fifth avenue and week-end at a fashionable seaside resort, where gambling and wine-bibbling are the principal pastimes.

Clune's Broadway.

Commencing Sunday afternoon, Clune's Broadway announces the presentation in screen form of Gilbert Parker's novel, "Wild Youth." Prominent among those appearing in this photo-production are dainty and talented Louise Huff, inimitable Theodore Roberts, Jack Mulhall, James Cruze, and the local favorite, Adele Farrington. The Pathe News will occupy its usual position on the bill and is programmed as possessing some highly interesting scenes of the present American military movements in the United States and "over there."

Alhambra.

Jewel Carmen, the beautiful Fox star, is coming to the Alhambra today for a week's stay in her new play, "Confession," which tells in a pleasing way the story of an interrupted honeymoon. New war pictures of the "Britain's Bulwarks" series, and another of Bud Fisher's inimitable "Mutt and Jeff" cartoons, complete the big show.

Miller's.

John Mason, famous on the American stage for many years, is starred in the sensational photoplay, "Moral Suicide," which is to open at Miller's for one week beginning today. Supporting this great actor is an all-star cast, including Anna Luther, Leah Baird, Claire Whitney, Alan Hale, Sidney Mason, Hazel Washburn and William Lampe. Besides this elaborate seven-reel feature, the programme will consist of a new issue of the Pathe News, with its interesting views from "other there," and an excellent musical programme by Organists Spiller, Forrest and Devereaux on the new organ.

Riviera.

"The Man Hunt," the World Film that comes to the Riviera today, is not a tale of sawed-off shotguns, thirsty bloodhounds, nor head-hunting Igorrotes. Sweet little Ethel Clayton is the huntress—of nothing more desperate or wicked than a husband. This is the "new" tendency, evidently; a melodramatization of G. B. Shaw. Rockliffe Fellows has the part of the unwilling choice of the pretty Amazon, and the part of a big mine husky is taken by Al Hart. Travers Vale directed the picture.

Symphony.

A man's life or a woman's honor. To save one, the other must be sacrificed. But which? That dilemma is placed upon the shoulders of one frail human for solution such a problem be fairly decided? In "Life or Honor?" which will show at the Symphony this week, starting this afternoon. How can

MUSICAL.

At Blanchard's.

WOMAN'S SYMPHONY.

THEIR CONCERT WILL BE GIVEN FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The Woman's Symphony Orchestra, an all-American organization under the direction of Henry Schoenefeld, an American-born composer and conductor, will give the third concert of their series at Blanchard Hall on Friday afternoon, June 14, at 3 o'clock.

Miss Mary Gowan, who has been charming Los Angeles audiences with her beautiful contralto voice, will appear as soloist. Bessie Fuhres Erb is concert mistress, Salla Fagge, second concert-mistress, Daisy Walters, president and first viola, and Lucy Fuhrer Genter, first 'cellist.

Madge Rogers Jackson, Victoria Percival-Jones-Kate Mintner and others are leading players in the wood, wind and brass sections.

Following is the programme to be given: Overture to "Phedre," Massenet; "Spring," Grieg. Two Arabesques, Debussy: Symphony in D, Haydn.

Miss Gowan will sing two groups of songs.

Miss Harriman in Programme.

Miss Blanche Avicestell Harriman, noted eastern concert singer, furnished part of the programme for the closing luncheon last Wednesday of the Hollywood Woman's Club. She was a pupil of Oscar Saenger, possibly the most famous living instructor in voice; also of Jean de Reszke; and of Giuseppe Campanari, one of the most famous baritones of the modern operatic stage; also of Arthur Foote of Boston. She has sung as star in both light and grand opera, having filled season engagements with the Damrosch Symphony Orchestra, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Worcester Music Festival.

Blanche Avicestell Harriman
Contralto of New York, who furnished part of the programme at Hollywood's Woman's Club last Wednesday.

Miss Harriman's voice is a rich contralto. She was accompanied by Miss Susanne Joyce at the piano. The numbers were all by American composers, "In a Brahman Garden," "The Rose," Genevieve," "Haunt of the Witches." The ladies insisted upon more, and Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond kindly volunteered to accompany Miss Harriman in "The Perfect Day," which was received with great applause.

Godowsky Classes a Week Later.

Owing to the many requests received by Manager Behymer from teachers to postpone the opening date of the Godowsky master class, announcement is made that the first class will be opened Monday morning, June 17, instead of the 10th, as originally announced. This will give the teachers in public and private schools and students closing their school year ample time.

The classes will be conducted from 9 to 1 o'clock on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, which will leave time for study of problems and repertoire.

The studies will cover any of the standard piano literature. From the bulk of the works submitted Mr. Godowsky will select as many different styles of writing as possible. Anything of Bach, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Liszt, Grieg, Tschaikowsky, Rubinstein, Scriabne, Rachmaninoff or other Russian and French composers may be brought to the classes.

Requests for information have come from all over Southern California, but in making application it will facilitate matters very considerably if the prospective students will state when they began studying, how long they have continued, who the teachers were, the object of the study—whether for teaching or concert—and also have they personally taught or concertized.

Music in Pasadena Red Cross.

Music in all its forms is playing a prominent part in the various Red Cros programmes being given nowadays. In Pasadena, next Saturday, June 15, from noon until midnight, at the Busch gardens a lawn fete will be held for the benefit of the Red Cross. Here the Marine Band, the Kilties Band, the Pasadena Elks Band, the Heinrich Tandler Quartette and the Prior Moore Orchestra will all participate, giving programmes of their own and providing accompaniments for Norma Gould and dancers, the Ernest Belcher Dancers and other novelties which are promised. A chorus of 5000 school children, with Miss Junia Wolff as director and Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink as soloist, will be one of the principle features. The one price of admission will cover all the amusements to be had within the grounds.

Matinee Musical Club.

Election at the Matinee Musical Club this year was very quiet, there being but one candidate for each office. Mrs. Marshall Stookey Anderson succeeded herself as the president. Others chosen were: Edith Lillian Clark, first vice-president; Eduardo Libegott, second vice-president; Mrs. Henry Clay King, recording secretary; James Washington Pierce, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jess H. Gardner, treasurer; Mrs. Clayton J. Hinman,

Think of Dinnerware
Think of Parmelee-Dohrmann Co.

For more than 25 years the name Parmelee-Dohrmann has stood in Los Angeles synonymous with fine china. There are comparatively few stores in all America today that enjoy the buying advantages this store enjoys.

An unusually large patronage justifies the carrying in open stock of a variety and character of patterns which could not consistently be expected of the ordinary store.

Practically every dinnerware requirement from the least expensive to the finest produced can be met here. The best productions in the famous "Haviland," and "Limoges" French china, and in the celebrated "Minton," "Coalport," "Royal Doulton," "Crown Staffordshire," "Cauldon," "Wedgewood," "Johnson Bros." and other English dinnerware are here. And the display of "Lenox," "Syracuse," "Homer Laughlin" and other American made china is most exceptional.

Surely there is a decided advantage to you in looking to such a store as this for your dinnerware requirements.

The pattern illustrated is the "Sheridan"—very unusual and not shown elsewhere.

"A :: KISS :: FOR :: CINDERELLA."

Barrie Play Comes to Mason Next Week.

Latest portrait of Maude Adams,
Who plays the leading role in "A Kiss for Cinderella," and for whom J. M. Barrie has written many plays.

Reciprocity.

MAUDE ADAMS AND THE HANDY ARMY BOYS.

MAUDE ADAMS'S transcontinental trip, which is to bring her to this city next week, while pleasant, has been one of the most eventful ones the little actress has ever known. And what is more, it has shown that she possesses certain characteristics that her associates never dreamed were part and parcel of her make-up.

Some of the happenings on the journey were amusing—as, for instance, the experience in Kingston, Ontario. When the manager of the theater at which Miss Adams was to appear saw the vast amount of scenery that was delivered at the theater he was aghast. Never in the world could he get help to handle the production. There was not an unemployed man to be had in the city. Being an Irishman, he was resourceful, and telephoning out to the army camp he made his wants known to the commandant. In a short time motor lorries brought in squads of men under the command of a sergeant to handle the production, and so all was well.

The soldiers were all turned over to the stage carpenter of the company, who assigned them to the various departments.

"Now," said he in the most approved union manner and according to union ethics, to one group, "you are to work for the electrician. You," to another group, "are to work for the property man. You men here are to work for the carpenter, and no one in one department is to help or assist any other man in another department."

All went well until one kilted soldier, tugging away at a piece of scenery, couldn't budge it.

"Here," he called to another soldier, "take hold of this."

"I will not," came the answer, "I am a property man, and it would be against union rules."

The sergeant overheard the dialogue.

"Fogarty," he commanded of the recalcitrant one, "take hould o' that." And Fogarty did. Every union stage rule was broken that night. In Toronto Miss Adams gave a performance for convalescent soldiers. Seventeen hundred men from the battlefields of France, and every one of them a cripple, attended the performance. It was an enthusiastic audience, but it presented one of the saddest sights that mortal could look upon, for the vast majority of the poor fellows were mere boys.

Upon her visit to Seattle, Miss Adams was requested to appear at the Liberty Theater at Camp Lewis outside Tacoma. It has been the custom for traveling attractions to appear at the camp and charge an admission. Some companies—in fact, many of them—have done very well playing for the soldiers. Miss Adams agreed. In order to give the performance, Miss Adams had to break her lifelong rule against appearing on the Sabbath, but she felt the cause was worth it. When the crowd of men surged to the box office they found it closed. There were to be no tickets sold; the men were to be Miss Adams's guests. The actress paid the cost of shipping her scenery in and out of the camp, and the performance, which cost the soldiers nothing, cost her over $600. People who know Miss Adams feel that this is just what might have been expected from her.

It is not often that there are empty seats at any of the performances given by the actress, but when there are it is the duty of the manager to go out and corral all of the uniformed men he can lay hands on and bring them to the performance. And Miss Adams pays the war tax for them herself.

James M. Barrie, the author of nearly all of Miss Adams's big successes, is supporting an orphanage in France, and it is said that he has spent every pound he has in the world in caring for the helpless. It is said that Miss Adams is running him a close second in giving away her earnings, and, like Mr. Barrie, she is doing it without any fuss or bluster.

Pay of English Women in France.

Hundreds of women of the British Army Auxiliary Corps are working in France, some in the bases and others in country quarters near base towns. For ordinary clerical work 23 to 27 shillings a week is paid; for superiors and shorthand typists, 28 to 32 shillings, with overtime paid 7 to 9 pence an hour. A bonus of £5 is paid for twelve months' service. Uniforms, khaki coat frock with stockings and shoes, are provided free. The maximum for board and lodging is 14 shillings a week.—[News Notes.

THE LETTERS OF LEMUEL BEAN.

Picking It Off the Trees.

BY ROY K. MOULTON.

SOMEWHERE IN NEW YORK.

DEAR FOLKS: This is the place where they pick it off the trees in Central Park. Maybe you have heard that before. It sounds familiar, doesn't it? It may be true, but if it is, a person has got to be a fast picker—I might say a lightning picker—if he gets any of it. Several million of the best pickers in the world live here, and it is really no place for an amateur picker.

I have taken many strolls through the park early in the morning to pick some of it off the trees, but have always found that I was a few minutes too late. They start picking very early here.

They tell us that people in the country are early risers, but they are not in it with city people, particularly those who pick it off the trees in Central Park. If there is ever anything as large as a nickel hanging on any of the trees after 5 o'clock in the morning I have not yet discovered the fact.

I do not mean to say there is not plenty of money in New York, for there is. There is more money in New York than in any other city in the world, but the one slight difficulty is that somebody has got all of it. It hasn't rained gold certificates once since I have been here, and when anyone loses a dime they tear up the Broadway pavement looking for it. They are very generous here. They will let you work just as hard as you want to.

EASY TO INVEST.

The opportunities for investment in New York are wonderful. Really, they are unlimited. A man can invest a week's salary here so quickly that it is only child's play and requires no training at all.

The only thing you don't have to tip in this town is your hat, and that is because you don't know anybody and nobody knows you.

And if you slip a waiter or a bellhop anything less than a quarter for services unrendered, he looks at you as though you were a combination of Kaiser and Von Hindenburg and an apostle of super-frightfulness. Some of those boys have weak hearts, and a dime has more than once been fatal. The war seems to mean nothing to them. They don't care how much your expenses have risen in the past two or three years. The bellhop in one club here is worth $32,000, and he hasn't carried a pitcher of ice water to any man in nine years who is worth as much as he is.

A friend of ours, who is a confirmed Gothamite of two years' standing, says you can live as cheaply in New York as anywhere else. And you can—if you live with your wife's folks.

If you can get along without eating, sleeping or wearing clothes, I would say that you can live here as cheaply as you can in Oskaloosa, Iowa, or Chipmunk, Mo.; but it is no place for a poor man who is fond of doing any of those things.

MONEY LEAST OF PROBLEMS.

Getting rid of my money has been one of the least of my problems since I have been here—a matter of several years—and I don't believe I will ever encounter any serious difficulty in that regard. If there is anybody who has a natural distaste for money and hates to have it around him I would say the place for him is in New York. A one dollar bill doesn't make any more noise than one of the oysters at Oyster Bay, there is so much other noise going on in the neighborhood.

A five chirps faintly and a ten is slightly audible at certain times in certain places, but it takes a twenty to speak right out in meeting and command the respect of the audience, and even a twenty won't hold the stage more than a minute or two.

The only cheap thing in New York to buy is Brooklyn Bridge. A man from Indiana bought it last week for $35 and it has often been purchased at a cheaper figure.

Last week it was my misfortune to be obliged to stay at a hotel for three days while Luella, my wife, was away visiting friends who have a country place. The first time it cost me 85 cents to get to my room. I crossed with silver every color of palm from white to tan, chocolate and ebony. The following day I saved $3 in tips by staying in bed all day and sneaking down the fire escape in the evening to find a one-arm restaurant.

WISE ONES KNOW NOW.

But that sort of thing applies only to the hicks like myself. The wiseheimers around this town know how to hang on to theirs. Only the amateur New Yorkers feel that it is a disgrace to eat in a one-armed cafe or dodge the palms. Neither do the seasoned New Yorkers think it a disgrace to sit in the balcony. If there were no volunteer New Yorkers here the theaters would be all balconies and no orchestra floors at all.

It is the boy who is here for the first time who loosens. If he pays less than $2.50 for a show he thinks it isn't any good. If he can't pay ten bones a throw for opera tickets he is ashamed to go and accept the music. A lot of regular New Yorkers take the whole family on that.

It isn't like buying cigars. When you buy two opera tickets for five you get the same music that you get if you pay ten straight. They don't throw in a few discords and sour notes for the benefit of the cheap seats.

When a persons comes to this town as I did with a Michigan bank roll, which consists of a live wrapper and a dead filler, he has to find out those things for himself. Nobody can slip him any advice. Advice is a drug on the market and nobody pays any attention to it because it is free.

Nobody here cares whether you are a piker or not. The man with the sinkers and Java who sits next to you in Childs has never seen you before and hopes he will never see you again. He doesn't care whether you are the first mate of a canal boat or the Calif of Bagdad incog. If he sees you in the gallery grabbing off a Broadway show for four bits he isn't going to blab.

NO BALCONY THE RULE.

Back home when we have a show in the opry house everybody has to sit in the best seats. If they don't they are talked about and it hurts business. If Mr. and Mrs. Jones go in the balcony for John Drew or Maude Adams or the McGibney Bell Ringers people begin to wonder what's the matter. They think Mr. Jones's business must be dropping off and they go somewhere else to buy their calico and baby ribbon. Back home it is almost a disgrace to be caught in the $2 seats when it is a $2.50 show.

When some voiceless tenor gives a concert in Kalamazoo there is such a rush for the best seats that half of the polite society of the town walks lame from barked shins for the next fortnight. When a society dame can't connect with one of the best seats she calls in the family doctor and has the evening paper announce that she is suffering an attack of her old malady, whatever that may be, so she is laid up on the night of the concert.

In New York you can be just as cheap as you wish, and probably you will have to be pretty cheap to be as cheap as the man in the seat right next to you. When you finally make up your mind that you are not going to be anybody here, anyhow, no matter how much you spend, and that you might as well get by on the minimum, the problem is solved.

The man who makes the grievous mistake here is the one who cultivates the pate de foie gras taste on a hot-dog income, for no matter if you spend 50,000 iron men here every year there will be a lot of folks who are spending $100,000. A spender is never happy when there is anybody in the world who can spend more than he can. On the other hand, there is a certain satisfaction in being cheap, and it isn't at all embarrassing; for, no matter how cheap you are there is always someone who is a little bit cheaper than you are.

BEWARE OF SIRENS.

When young men come here the folks back home always tell them to beware of sirens. A siren is a young woman, hand-painted, who lets a young man buy her automobiles and United States Steel preferred and than gives him the gate as soon as his bank roll begins to look like a cigarette. There may be plenty of sirens here, but they won't bite the stranger if the stranger goes along and minds his own business. It is the fellow who is looking for trouble who always gets it. If he wears a celluloid collar and a ready-tied four-in-hand tie that fastens with a rubber the sirens will let him alone. When a fellow washes his own collars it is taken as a sign that he is of a saving disposition and is saving his nickels to buy a Ford or a set of red plush parlor furniture. A fellow like that never has to shoot any of the sirens to keep them away from him.

The first time a party comes here he stops at the Waldorf so folks back home won't think he is a piker. But after he is here a while he gets a good $1 room at a hotel in a side street and goes and uses the Waldorf notepaper when writing home.

The system here is to get your money's worth, pay your debts, keep your face clean, go to bed nights, eat sensible food, believe nothing you hear and only half what you see, and you'll be just as happy here as elsewhere, but probably no happier.

Hoping you are the same, I remain yours, LEM.

AT THE Y.W.C.A. QUARTERS IN PARIS.

"Typical midinettes with a splendid spirit"—this is the way a war worker in France describes the girls who are crowding into the new Y.W.C.A. Foyer des Alliees in Paris.

Not a bit less pleased than children, though their heels were two inches high and their faces rouged and painted, these girls started off for a trip to the Valley of the Chevreuse one holiday as gaily as any club girls in this country for a "hike" and a "weenie roast." They ran relay races, played games and when, on the return, the last mile of the nine-mile tramp began to tell on some members of the party, one girl sang march after march, carrying her companions along in step and making them forget that they were at the end of a long day. Before morning there was the warning of an air raid, but not a suggestion of the "day after" was to be seen when the girls appeared at the Foyer the next noon.

From fifty to 100 of these girls come to the Y.W.C.A. clubrooms daily. Many of them bring fancy work or sewing, sometimes a stocking to darn, a skirt that is to have hand-run tucks or some other practical stitchery. Working in offices has not taken from the French woman her deftness with the needle. Other girls read the daily papers or the weekly and monthly reviews, someone plays the piano and often a group gathers about the piano for a sing. Poilu marching songs to the old folk airs are very popular. Visits from two physical directors resulted in the learning of some folk dances with which the girls are delighted. A noon English class is divided into two sections.

The new Y.W.C.A. Club in Paris is in the Wall street of the city, between the Banque de France and the Bourse. The big room has four windows hung with blue figured cretonne, which is also used for slip covers on some of the furniture. Most of the chairs are rattan, and, with the reading tables scattered with books and papers and magazines, it is no wonder that a usual exclamation as the girls come for the first time is, "How bright and cheerful!" In addition to the main rooms there are a kitchenette and classroom.—[Publicity Department, National Board, War Work Council, Y.W.C.A.

Poisoned by Exhaust Gas.

During the exceptionally cold months of last winter many deaths by poisoning from the exhaust of gasoline engines were reported from all parts of the country, according to the Popular Science Monthly. In most cases the victims had been, for some time, in a poorly ventilated or unventilated garage or other room where one or more gasoline engines were running. A careful investigation has established beyond doubt that death in these cases was not caused by the exhaustion of the supply of oxygen in the air, but by the carbon monoxide, an extremely poisonous gas, which is generated by the incomplete combustion of organic substances. It is one molecule each of carbon and oxygen combined. Only thorough ventilation will remove the danger.

The Bright Side of Sunshine Land—People and Their Doings—A Hundred or More Happy Affairs

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, June 7.

Ma, dear: It was quite despicable of you to perpetrate "a quiet little wedding" and deny us the pleasure of making a fuss of you. But it was evidently such a real romance that you begrudged the intrusion of mere outsiders. However, we heard rumors of you both speeding out to Covina the day before the wedding in the new Franklin car, and culling orange blossoms en route, both radiantly wrapped up in each other. We shall await your return from the honeymoon and thrust our affections upon you whether or no. There are rumors that sister Melitta is likewise trembling on the brink of matrimonial shackles—at all events a forlorn admirer with ardent aspirations is hinting that his chances are gone forever. There may be a shortage of men, but it doesn't seem to be affecting your family yet.

You remember the Holdens of Glendale, who were married a little over a year ago? Well, Virgie has just become the proud mamma of Miss Margaret Holden, age 3 weeks, who is confidently declared by her mamma to be the best looking girl baby that ever made its bow to a wondering world.

Did you hear about the exciting episode at the week-end party given for the Troubetskoys by Mrs. Margaret Ham at her fascinating pleasure ranch at Arrowhead? You know Mrs. Ham's dog, Chatto, an English Bull, has ever been his mistress's pride in the matter of docile and irreproachable manners. He has been used to the very best society and always behaved accordingly. But last Saturday the Prince and Princess Troubetskoy were amongst the guests. They left the Alexandria at 3 p.m., expecting to arrive for dinner about 6:30 p.m. and took Pico, the Princess's Russian wolfhound, along, since her highness cannot live even for a day without him. They encountered every kind of motor trouble there is on the way and did not arrive until 11 p.m., so you can imagine that temperamental nerves were a little on edge and aristocratic innards craving urgent sustenance. Chatto greeted them with dignified hospitality—until he spied the wolfhound. The moment Pico leapt from the machine, Chatto stiffened with white fury, opened an immediate offensive without a declaration of war or even a five-hour ultimatum, and plunged his British teeth into the hind-quarters of the guest with alarming efficiency. It was a glorious fight. The still night air of that romantic scenery rang with wild fury! Chatto, like the traditional Bull, reeked of "What I have I hold." The Prince grabbed Pico and Capt. Rigby grabbed Chatto. Mrs. Ham, shocked at Chatto's unexpected reversion to species, issued commands, pleas, reproaches in bewildering succession, the human voices added their forceful opinions, but nothing could separate the mad combatants. Chatto's teeth being too preoccupied with Pico's hindquarters, declined to scatter his forces under pressure, but Pico's teeth, being at large, buried themselves in the hand and arm of the Prince, and Russian blood flowed freely. As a last resort the dogs were hurled into the lovely swimming pool, and Chatto, against all the traditions of the British navy, sank ignominiously, while the wolfhound scrambled out to safety and an ignoble peace. Then, Mrs. Ham's breath was submerged in anguish for Chatto's life, and the gallant British captain was implored to plunge in to save him. 'Twas midnight and the captain had all his clothes on. Does chivalry demand such a sacrifice? The captain hesitated, but Chatto was not lost. Up he came after a breathless interval, still white mad, and ready for another offensive on what he obviously regarded as a Bolshevik pup. But human interference despoiled him of his prey. The only unmoved person during all this excitement was the Princess, who swung nonchalantly in the swing with a scornful smile. She, you see, is Swedish. And therefore neutral. Chatto was inconsolable, he frankly regarded the denouement as a Prussian peace. But, with a new day breaking, nerves and tummies still untended, the Prince's arm cried out for instant attention. So a hurried journey to San Bernardino was imperative. At 2 a.m. a sorry house party returned to the ranch to take up that "pleasant week-end rest in the country" where they left it. The Prince is in no danger, 'tis said, and beyond the unhappy results of a premature peace and the mutual disgrace of the combatants, the blasting of the charms of a stylish house party, no more serious troubles are anticipated.

Talking of the Troubetskoys reminds me that Mme. Simone Puget is gradually recovering at Santa Barbara from her untimely accident, and is nearly well enough to accept an invitation to the Vernon Country Club in which the Prince and Princess are to participate. Gossip hath it that she makes a charming invalid and holds daily salons in her boudoir. She is anxious to visit an American country club (!) and is looking forward to her party very much. The English peeresses, Lady Colbrooke and Lady Fitzclarence, are amongst that salon company, which, you will see, has the earmarks of the real thing.

I hear the Custers have been down at Del Mar, still a regular honeymoon couple. They have taken a lovely house down there and mean to give a series of fascinating weekend parties to their friends.

In the meantime the land army girls are having a much more strenuous and continuous party at Elsinore as first-class agricultural laborers. "Bobbie" Boke, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Boke, writes the jolliest letters home telling of their doings — she and her two sisters went up with the second unit, you know. She planted a ten-acre field of tomatoes all by herself in three days and proved such an adept that the rancher has purchased a brand new planting machine and horse for her. How's that for efficiency? And these girls had never done any work in their lives before, had spent their youth at boarding schools and in traveling. They declare the cook is a trump and the meals get better all the time, and last Sunday she gave them a jolly surprise tea party. The girls had a wonderful time when the One Hundred and Forty-third Regiment passed through. The ranch manager gave them one and half hours off, and they all rushed back to the house and pressed their uniforms. When the regiment arrived they all stood at attention, having been previously well drilled. The entire regiment cheered them to the echo and Col. Faneuf himself talked with and congratulated them. And there ensued one of the most unique parties and mutual admiration was delightfully rampant.

Prof. Boke is going East in the near future, so Mrs. Boke has taken a house at Hermosa, the Perkins's place, where the girls will run down for brief vacations when the exigencies of farming permit. They declare they want to wear their smart uniforms all the time, so Hermosa is in for some palpitating excitement.

Saw Carlotta and Marguerita Winston and Marjory Hines at a jolly party recently, duly escorted by a young regiment of soldier heroes. It was, of course, while the One Hundred and Forty-third was still with us, in which they have so many friends. Mamma Winston was chaperoning the party—I can't imagine a nicer-looking mamma to exhibit as evidence of future reliable charms. They were all wearing absolutely ravishing hats, the wide, shady summery kind which are so very becoming.

Oh, yes, and talking of hats—Frances Marion, the clever scenario dramatist, revels in a wild orgy of lovely hats, buys 'em by the dozen, all large, all seductively floppy—an ethereal turquoise blue one aroused my special envy, and a shady leghorn with black velvet streamers, a white sailorish affair with a big bridal veil for motoring, and a naughty black picture hat with a pompon over one eye.

Mary Miles Minter is strolling about in lovely tout en semble just now, a pale pink and apple green creation, with parasol and bag to match. She purchased a like rig-out for mamma and grandma as well, and they are most effective. And Marjory Dorr is creating havoc in a big green sport hat with a white lining—utterly demoralizing. Both the Mrs. E. R. Brackett, senior and junior, are flaunting lovely hats just now—saw them at a picture show recently, where they sat right at the back and did not have to take them off. Mrs. Kenneth Preuss is another connoisseur in hats, each more piquant than the last and nicely considered in regard to her placid forehead and auburn hair. Myra Miller has a wondrous leghorn hat, radiant with svelte paradise plumes, and Mrs. L. B. Coates, the one who has that lovely home near the Brentwood Country Club with so many flowers that she begs her friends to come down and keep them cut for her, has a chic black picture hat that makes for eternal youth.

Carroll Jones graduated with high honors from the college of dentistry on Thursday—such a good dancer and so very effective in his evening dress clothes, and possessed of a very pretty sister with large brown eyes, whom he loves to escort around.

Mrs. Sherman Hoyt is going to have a brilliant Red Cross carnival and military ball at Pasadena in the Busch Gardens on Mme. Schumann-Heinck's birthday, June 15, when that prima donna is going to sing for them, and Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn are to dance, and there is to be a grand military ball in the evening at the Maryland. Gen. and Mrs. Strong will be the guests of the occasion, and they have promised to bring all our Los Angeles and Pasadena boys up on a special leave—which, of course, is the seductive charm of the whole event.

Well, so long, cherie, don't forget to drop us a hint when Melitta's mind has been made up, will you?

Yours irrepressibly,

BETTY

Present Buying of Nemo Corsets Is Advised for Future Health and Style Protection and for True Corset Economy!

Further price advances on a number of popular Nemo models have been announced for Monday, July 1. These advances are compelled by the ever-increasing cost and scarcity of all corset-materials. In fact, it is now becoming so difficult to obtain them, at any price, that the manufacturers fear a shortage of standard corsets in the very near future.

We have bought a large new stock of Nemo Corsets, and urge you to do likewise. You'll find it a wise and safe investment.

In corsets, no substitute can be found for the Nemo. They're almost as essential as air and food to millions of women. Don't run the risk of going without the Nemo that insures your health and style protection.

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Engagement Announced.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Doris Collins, president of the Patriotic League, and Ensign Corbin, son of Mrs. M. C. Balguy of Santa Monica, was told yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Burton Vincent Collins, parents of the young girl, following the departure on Wednesday, last, of Ensign Corbin for Annapolis.

Miss Jean Shaffer and Lieut. Percy William Beggs of the Twenty-first Infantry were married yesterday at sunset in the patio sunken gardens of Mrs. Marcus McL. Marshall's Pasadena home at No. 895 South Grand avenue.

With this she wore a full circular veil of tulle, caught to her hair with French orange blossoms fashioned into a wreath with ear loops. Her shower bouquet was designed from white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony there was a supper party of seventy-five guests at the Marshall home, which was decorated throughout in roses and lilies.

The bride is a sister of Mrs. Marcus McL. Marshall. Announcement of the engagement of the couple was made at a dinner party in San Diego in the winter, at which Mrs. Marshall entertained.

As a compliment to Lieut. Beggs and the then Miss Shaffer, Mrs. Edwin Jessup Marshall entertained a company at dinner, Thursday evening, and on the following day gave a luncheon for them. A couple of weeks ago she entertained for the bride at a house party, which she gave at the Marshall country home, near Chino. Following a wedding trip of two weeks, Lieut. Not a picnic, but a real dinner outdoors

No one would choose the things that usually go in the picnic basket, if it were possible to have a real meal out in the woods. And no one likes to spend so much time fixing sandwiches and such bothersome things.

Don't you know that you can have a real, hot dinner at your picnics this summer—and prepare it with infinitely less trouble than any picnic lunch you have ever had before?

Think how delicious such a meal as this would taste, when eaten in some cool woodland spot! Hot Veal Loaf, Hot Baked Beans, Boston Brown Bread, Strawberry Ice Cream, Devil's Food Cake.

And everything can be cooked or chilled in a Domestic Science or Ideal Fireless Cookstove and kept at the right temperature until you are ready to eat. One of the smaller cookers, with one or two compartments, is just the right size to put into your car. It will keep all the hot things piping hot, or the cold foods thoroughly chilled, for hours. Try it the next time you have a picnic.

Use Fireless Cooking for ALL your hot weather meals

Don't spend hours over a hot kitchen range this summer. Cook your meals in a Domestic Science or Ideal Fireless Cookstove. A few minutes' use of your range to heat the radiators—and all the rest of the cooking done in the fireless. Consider how much cooler your kitchen will be; what immeasurable comfort it will give you in stifling midsummer weather. And think, too, how much fuel it will save, when you do all the cooking with only a few minutes heat. You can bake and roast in this wonderfully economical way, and get perfect results.

Ask your dealer about Domestic Science or Ideal Fireless Cookstoves. He can show you why these cookstoves do baking and browning as no other fireless can. Ask him about the patented water seal, the patented steam valve, extra thick aluminum lining and special insulation.

Colton.

THAT June has been selected for the culmination of the pretty romance that has existed since last summer between Miss Lola Dugan, a charming Cincinnati girl, and Walter Harmon Chase, formerly secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Association of Colton, and now secretary-manager for the Northern California Counties Association, comes as most interesting news to friends of the young people. Miss Dugan visited here last summer with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hunsacker, now residents of Fresno, and it will be in that city that the wedding will take place about the middle of the month. Mr. Chase, who is a son of Mrs. Jacob Bohlander, new president of the Colton Woman's Club, will take his bride to Redding to reside.

Announcements of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Tetwiler, formerly of Colton, to Dr. Charles Robert Geith of Corona, which took place at Poplar Bluff, Miss., May 28, have been received by relatives and friends. The newlyweds will be at home in Corona after July 1. Miss Tetwiler is an exceptionally talented musician. She was a pupil of Herr Thilo Becker of Los Angeles and later continued her studies at the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music.

Miss Bessie Monks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Monks, and Otto Henry Scheland, a fireman for the Southern Pacific, were the principals in a quiet wedding taking place Friday afternoon at the Church of St. Bernardine de Siena, the Reverend Father John Brady officiating. The event was largely a surprise, relatives being taken into the secret only at the last moment. Mr. and Mrs. Scheland are temporarily making their home in Los Angeles.

A gay company of the younger set danced merrily Wednesday night at the Chocolate Palace in San Bernardino on the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Van Arsdale Smith, the occasion honoring Maurice Huddleston, cousin of Mrs. Smith, who is here from Farmer City, Ill., to spend the summer. Sharing the fun were the Misses Marguerite Champion, Ruth Snider, Marie Bonnell, Luvera Ward, Elizabeth and Gretchen Ebert, Julia Hert, Josephine Barnett, Eleanor Wood and Ethel Maxwell, Norman Palmer, Barney Walker, Roy Summers, Leo Steck, Curtis Tuller, Earl Livingston, Theron Willis, Aeneas and Edmund Casey and Dr. Ray Swartz of Coachella, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Perris of San Bernardino, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith, Mrs. J. R. Boynton and Mr. and Mrs. Van Arsdale Smith chaperoned.

Garden Grove.

DR. AND MRS. LUEDKE have as their guest Mrs. Luedke's sister, Mrs. Stokes of Guadalupe. Their many friends are interested in hearing of the four Stokes sons, who are all in the national service. Mr. Carl Stokes is well known in this vicinity, as he attended business college in Santa Ana a year or so ago. He is now at Camp Crane, Pennsylvania, but is expected to leave for Italy shortly. His three brothers are in France, two of them having been there nearly a year. They went over on the St. Louis, with the Sixth Naval Division of Santa Barbara, which was among the first of our troops to land "over there."

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Adams journeyed to San Pedro last week for the purpose of visiting their daughter Pearl. Miss Lena Adams, who accompanied them to the harbor city, will spend a month there with her sister, who is in training at the sanatorium.

One of the most successful of the numerous Red Cross affairs was the chicken dinner with which the new packing-house at Cordinez was dedicated recently. The Alamitos chapter, which is auxiliary to that of Garden Grove, had the matter in charge. A most enthusiastic and appreciative crowd was in attendance and a goodly sum was realized for the cause. The super-excellent supper was followed by a stirring address given by Judge Thomas. All recognized the fact that this building, situated as it is in the midst of a highly-cultivated farming district, will play an important part in the war work of the community. One feature of the occasion which was sincerely appreciated by the committee was the neighborly act of the people of Stanton, who postponed a function of their own which was set for the same date and patronized instead the Cordinez dinner.

The graduating class at Westminster was addressed by Rev. George Francis of this city. His talk was a particularly timely one, as the theme was preparedness to do the world's work well, and he urged the young people to realize the importance of beginning early.

In anticipation of his early departure for France, Mrs. C. C. Violett recently made a trip north to visit her son, Malcolm Wharton. He is at Mare Island, in the Hospital Corps.

Garden Grove lost one of its most popular girls when Miss Annie Parks married F. W. Mutz and left for Salt Lake City. The wedding occurred at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Parks, and was a very pretty one. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mutz are well known here, though Mr. Mutz has been living at Salt Lake for several years.

Orange.

MRS. L. AINSWORTH was hostess recently at her home on East Chapman avenue to the loyal women of the Christian Church. Her charming home was gay with flowers in their honor. It was a very busy meeting, election of officers being on the programme. In connection with their Red Cross work, the club listened to a letter written to Mrs. H. S. Warner by a friend, who is in a hospital at Newport News, Va. It inspired a generous contribution from the organization for the work down there. Next followed the social session, during the course of which both Mrs. Ainsworth and Mrs. Charles Dufford read for the company. The serving of dainty refreshments completed the pleasant afternoon.

The many friends of George Leichtfuss will be glad to know that word has been received from the young man which indicates that he was not so seriously injured as was thought when the news was first received from the front. A card has been received written by the young man himself. He was then in a French hospital, but was anticipating a transfer to an American hospital soon. He was a telegraph operator in the Signal Corps and had been assigned for duty at a listening post in the front-line trenches, and it was while on that assignment that he was wounded.

Mrs. Noah J. Tilghman, who, with her small son, has been here for several weeks visiting her mother, Mrs. M. E. McPherson of South Center street, left a few days ago for Escondido. She will spend some time there before returning to her home in Globe, Ariz. Miss Amelia McPherson has gone to Escondido also.

En route to an eastern cantonment, Arthur Shipkey and Dick Lusk went through this city a few days ago. They have been at Camp Kearny for some time, but are ready now for their "final." Both young men are connected with the ordnance department.

Orange citizens may well be proud of their young townsman, Maurice Perry, son of W. W. Perry of this city. He was one of fourteen who were selected from 135 applicants from Pomona College for admission to the officers' training camp at San Francisco. At the end of the session he will return from the Presidio to the college and assist in the training of the students.

It is quite the usual thing nowadays to greet our boys as they go through here on their way to the other coast. Several of the fellows who have been with the Coast Artillery at Fort Rosecrans were here last week, among them being Raymond Potter, Walter Jacobsen and Park Walker.

An interesting wedding occurred Thursday at high noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Dickey in Garden street, when their daughter, Laura, became the wife of Arthur E. Fox. The house was beautifully decorated with roses, sweet peas and ferns, and after a wedding dinner the young couple left for a brief honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. August W. Leege and Miss Maude Murray have returned to Lompoc after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rowan.

La Crescenta.

THE cabaret dance given as a Red Cross benefit by the members of the Woman's Club was distinctly a social and financial success, netting $168.72 for the cause, while it furnished pleasure to the several hundred guests, many of whom were from Los Angeles, Pasadena and surrounding towns. Famous For Diamonds

Through 40 years of extensive buying and selling of perfect diamonds the name "Feagans" has come to be accepted as defining a known standard.

And today—with the market falling off in diamond production, and the consequent tendency to lower the standard of quality—it is reassuring to know that Feagans & Co. maintain the same high standard which has always governed in all their diamond selections and sales.

Our extensive diamond offerings have recently been supplemented by perfect diamonds in complete series from the very small size for cluster work to the large gem diamonds that weigh approximately 4 karats each.

The offering of complete series has the advantage of establishing the same invariable quality in stones of all sizes for the reason that all are cut by the same expert cutters, from the same rough diamond stock.

Tustin.

REV. AND MRS. W. S. M'DOUGALL were hosts recently at the manse to the city teachers, the trustees and their wives. A very jolly evening was spent, as all participated in very lively games, throwing horseshoes, indoor baseball and the like. A novel feature was the reading of the last will and testament of each member of the party. Ice cream and cake "topped" the occasion. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Marchant, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Risk, Mrs. Effie Slusser, Miss Clara Enderle, Miss Minnie Johnson, Miss Grace Casner, Miss Grace Tight, Miss Eva Osborne, Miss Edith Adams, Miss Carry Elder, Miss Florence Henderson and Miss Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Beswick.

The home of Mrs. F. T. Preble was the scene of the last meeting of the Tustin household economics section. Cecil Brunner roses decorated the house and pink was the prevailing note when refreshments were served. The business of the day, however, was Red Cross work.

Miss Nancy Elder was one of this year's graduates from Occidental College. A party made up of Rev. and Mrs. W. S. McDougall, Mrs. Julia Elder and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elder motored to Eagle Rock for the commencement festivities.

The Tustin White Ribboners have made a remarkable showing in the matter of comfort bags for the soldiers. More than 200 have already been completed by them and those which are given to the boys from this section have been filled by the society. On the occasion of the recent surprise storm the workers were rescued by Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Miller and safely delivered at their respective homes.

In response to the plea for flowers for the army men, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Johnston and Miss Grace Casner took down a large quantity of sweet peas and carnations on a recent trip to Camp Kearny. The men, of course, received them gratefully and reciprocated by showing the visitors the interesting points of the cantonment.

His numerous friends will be glad to hear that Louis Rhell has been commissioned as a second lieutenant. He is assigned to the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry.

The local society took its turn in the kindly custom of the Christian Endeavor societies and had charge of the monthly entertainment given at the County Hospital last week. A really enjoyable programme was given, consisting of violin music by Misses Anita Preble and Dorothy Utt, a piano solo by Miss Gertrude Utt, who also gave a couple of readings, and chorus songs by those young ladies and the Misses Wilhelmina Bennett, Grace Hight, Florence Henderson and Hazel Bailey, who were also in the party.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Mitchell have received a highly interesting letter from Willis Mitchell, their son, who writes of his exciting experience aboard a cruiser convoying ships to France. Among the winning contestants, who were ordered to the naval base at Norfolk, Va., were twelve other California men. He wrote, also, of the strenuous work of coaling up.

Patriotic songs, sung by groups and choruses, as well as solos, were given by the children; and the proceeds of the morning go to swell a fund for kindergarten work in France.

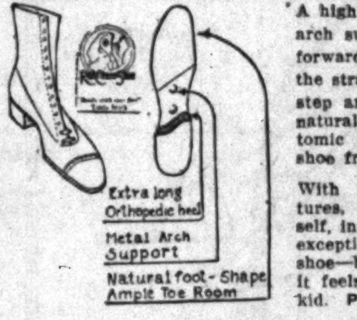
Relieves that throbbing pain.

This shoe is designed to relieve the foot of discomfort, resultant from broken arches that will not properly carry the weight of the body.



A high cut rigid shank, and an arch support counter extending forward to the balls, relieves the strain and supports your instep and holds your foot in a natural position. The Anatomic heel pictured keeps the shoe from twisting.

With the special inside features, invisible even to yourself, in appearance it is just an exceptionally trim, conservative shoe—but, oh, how comfortable it feels! It is made in glazed kid. Price $8.50. Second Floor.

ADVANCED PRICES for certain Nemo models are a certainty on July 1. Higher prices for other models are inevitable in the near future—much to our sincere regret.

Furthermore: It may soon become not only a matter of price, but a question of making corsets of standard quality at any price.

To millions of women, Nemo Corsets are almost as essential as food. This suggests the wisdom of securing enough of your favorite Nemo model to last until the market for corset materials is again normal.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE Public Affairs Committee of the Friday Morning Club will hold its last meeting of the year on Tuesday, when a civic review in charge of the chairman of standing committees will form the programme. The Public Affairs Committee is really a club within a club, and much of its work is highly topical and interesting. It has certainly done well in keeping the members informed on public affairs generally.

There is but one serious criticism that can be made of these meetings, i.e., that they are invaribly very lengthy, and occupy over two hours in conveying matters that could be more effectually portrayed in one. This has made them perilously near being a bore, although the subjects discussed are interesting enough in themselves.

Mrs. E. K. Foster has been chairman of this department for four years, and has announced her intention of retiring at the end of this session in favor of a new appointee to be made by Mrs. Andrew S. Lobingier, the club president. There are numerous suggestions for the position—Mrs. Emma L. Reed, for instance, or Mrs. M. E. Johnson. The latter could be trusted to enliven the proceedings. But the attribute most needed is that of ruthless unconcern for the sensibilities of ladies with a great deal to say and a verbose way of saying it. The incumbent chairman has been so kind-hearted she could not bear to leave any one out or shut any one up—which, of course, is jolly for the speaker, but often anguish for the audience. It is so very difficult for some speakers to appreciate that anyone could really enjoy hearing them discourse on a variety of bromidic opinions. Hence the ideal new chairman should have a passion for conciseness, a responsive twinkle in her eye, a nice discrimination in subjects of general interest and a respectful devotion to a proper division of time—in short, the very attributes which make Mrs. Lobingier herself such a successful president.

One of the reasons why Mrs. Lobingier exercises autocracy with such easy nonchalance, without revolt, is because she invariably reflects the unspoken but ardent wishes and convictions of the majority. One well remembers her courage in arbitrarily drawing the remarks of a past president to a close on one particular occasion on the score that the time belonged to the members who had paid a selected speaker to fill it. The past president retired with some indignation, but for all her personal popularity, the club was with Mrs. Lobingier in her decision to a woman. So here is hoping that she will find her own counterpart in filling the vacant chairmanship of the Public Affairs Committee.

Wednesday Morning Club.

The Wednesday Morning Club's Shakespeare section held its annual luncheon on Wednesday, at which the retiring and incoming presidents and board of directors were special guests of honor.

Mrs. H. E. Brett, toastmistress, in the political language of Shakespeare, welcomed the guests and introduced the speakers. Mrs. M. E. Johnson spoke on "The Ethics of Shakespeare" and "The Wednesday Morning Club." Mrs. James F. Armstrong responded for "Our Guests." Mrs. H. W. Hitchcock, director of the section, took for her subject, "As the Director Sees the Class." Mrs. F. S. Forbes spoke on "Values in the Study of Shakespeare," and took occasion to present the graduating class of 1919.

A toast in poetical vein by Dr. Lottie Davidson proved to be a clever story of the dramatic efforts of the class, which lately gave the "Merchant of Venice" with success.

The closing toast by Mrs. C. A. Holland, the incoming president, "Looking Forward with the Shakespeare Section," brought the speaking to a fitting end.

Five members, Mmes. Hitchcock, Forbes, Roe, Gladheart and Boyd, who were perfect in attendance and quotations for the year, were given a gift as a reward of merit, by Mrs. Brett, the instructor, who was in turn the recipient of flowers and letters from the members.

The picnic planned for the 19th inst., when scenes from "As You Like It," are to be read, will be held in Millard'sCanyon instead of at Universal City as previously planned.

The Y.W.C.A.

The annual meeting of the board of managers of the Young Women's Christian Association was held Thursday. The officers re-elected were: Miss Rose Smith, president; Mrs. D. K. Edwards, second vice-president; Mrs. J. M. Newell, third vice-president; Miss Alice Gastren, fourth vice-president. The office of first vice-president was left vacant.

Mrs. A. K. Smale was re-elected as recording secretary and Mrs. A. B. Cooke, who has been chairman of the educational committee, was elected corresponding secretary.

An impressive installation service was conducted by Mrs. G. H. Wadleigh and Miss Helen Babson. New members of the board who were elected were Mrs. William Arneal, Mrs. George Bovard, Mrs. W. H. Smith, Mrs. J. G. Warren, Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, Mrs A. S. Heineman and Miss Helen Kennedy, the representative of business women.

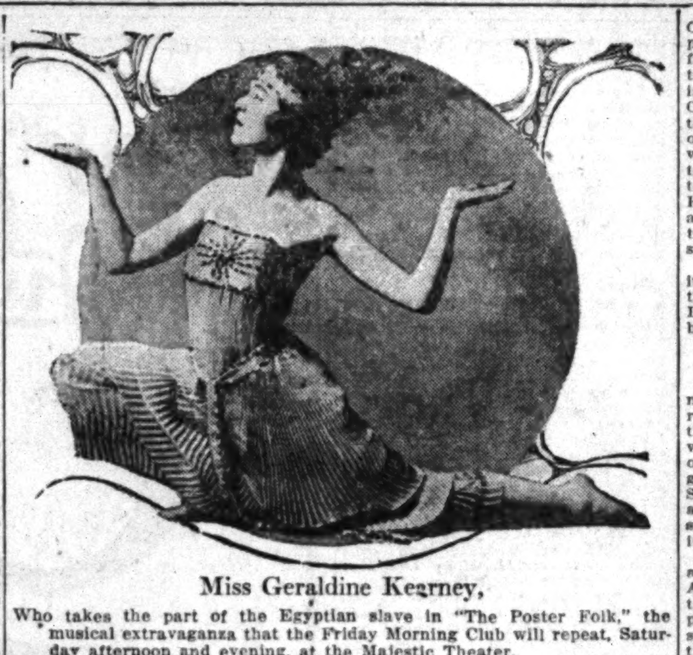
The annual reports of the secretaries showed a prosperous year both in finances and in results of work with the girls. Patriotic service has permeated all departments. Some $3329 has been raised for the Red Cross, $2750 worth of Liberty Bonds were sold at the lobby desk; 720 knitted garments have been turned in by the clubs at the main building; Clark Home and the Studio Club and International Institute. Two rooms in the main building are devoted entirely to the Red Cross work; more than 1000 girls are organized in clubs, where they are receiving definite physical, social, mental and spiritual help; registrations in the commercial, sewing and millinery schools were 629; 518 have registered in Bible classes; 1625 have been in attendance in the gymnasium classes this year; 11,413 have attended the plunge.

In the dormitory of our main building, 3178 girls have registered this last year. The Travelers' Aid workers have met over 6000 trains, and 8063 people have been helped. The attendance at meetings of organizations not connected with the Young Women's Christian Association who have held their meetings at the building have increased this year from 9000 to 19,000.

Educational classes are being continued throughout the summer in commercial, sewing and millinery.

A new department has been opened this year, directed by the girls' war service committee. Patriotic leagues have been organized in different parts of the city, and among the club girls, and members have been directed in their war service. Successful patriotic service among foreign groups was reported.

In the work at the International Institute there are eighteen clubs among girls of eleven different nationalities, with 200 enrolled; 2470 visits were made by our foreign workers. English classes have been conducted, with 400 in attendance. Draft registrations and food regulations have been explained, and in other ways loyalty to the United States government has been effected. The work among the Japanese and Mexicans has been done this year for the first time, and a second Mexican worker will be added to the staff within a few weeks.



Miss Geraldine Kearney,

Who takes the part of the Egyptian slave in "The Poster Folk," the musical extravaganza that the Friday Morning Club will repeat, Saturday afternoon and evening, at the Majestic Theater.

The Young Women's Christian Association is making a special effort now to provide the right kind of recreation for girls. Swimming classes have been arranged for, tennis parties at Huntington Park clubhouse, week-end parties at Hermosa Beach rest cottage, and hikes and picnics for Saturday afternoons. California affords wonderful opportunity for outdoor recreation, which the association is exploiting, and these week-end trips are being conducted by intelligent leaders and proper chaperons.

Councils of Defense.

The women's committees of the State and national councils of defense have passed a series of resolutions to be presented at the conference of State chairmen to be held at Washington. These resolutions are to the effect that competent women be appointed on the government boards and commissions dealing with the work of women, which are specified as including an assistant Food Administrator, a director of housing, a deputy commissioner of Red Cross, etc. The greater exploitation of women physicians is urged and the removal of restrictions regarding them.

When Mrs. Herbert Cable has been able to make her report on the women's committee in Washington, a meeting of the central committee will be called.

Woman's City Club.

Mrs. O. P. Clark managed to say graceful things about all the new officers at the Woman's City Club at their installation last Monday, and the platform was banked with flower secured from the home of Mrs. L. B. Coates at Westgate.

Tomorrow's meeting at Hamburger's auditorium will feature Dr. Silas Evans in his "Three Kinds of Women" discourse, the programme opening at 1 p.m. Luncheon will be served in the cafe at noon.

Hollywood Club.

The closing luncheon of the Woman's Club of Hollywood was held last Wednesday, and about 250 were present. Mrs. Rolin B. Lane, retiring president, gave her farewell speech, and surrendered her gavel to Miss Jessica Lawrence, the new president, who gave greetings to the club members. Miss Blanche A. Harriman, singer, gave several vocal numbers. Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond, who is a member of this club, sang some of her own compositions.

The officers elected for the coming year are as follows: President, Miss Jessica Lawrence; first vice-president, Mrs. Cecil Frankel; second vice-president, Mrs. Maude Davis Baker; recording secretary, Mrs. O. L. Routt; corresponding secretary, C. H. Connard; treasurer, Mrs. Charles R. Van Tillburgh; directors for two terms, Mrs. A. R. Gates and Mrs. F. B. Lewis; for one term, Mrs W. E. Belnap, Mrs. R. R. Musser and Mrs. Frederick Morgan Steele.

Travel Club.

At the special meeting of the Los Angeles Travel Club War Savings Society, called for tomorrow afternoon at the home of its president, Mrs. Grace Nicholson, No. 1302 Santa Barbara avenue, a patriotic programme will be given. Plans will be discussed for the precinct work on Tuesday in preparation for the pledge day drive on the 28th inst. This society and the club's Red Cross Auxiliary will hold regular meetings all summer. The auxiliary will meet every Friday at the home of members for all-day sessions.

"Our Country and Our Boys," as holding first thoughts in the hearts of all Americans today, was the timely theme of the programme presented at the annual breakfast of the club, on Monday, at the Alexandria, when Mrs. W. C. Finch was the toastmaster. The guests of honor, seated at the officers' table, were: Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, president of the Los Angeles District C.F.W.C., and Miss Anne Mumford, corresponding secretary of the State C.F.W.C., representing Mrs. Birney Donnell, president of the University Club. Newly-elected officers were formally installed by Mrs. I. W. Gleason, parliamentarian of the club, who used a new and original form for the ceremony. Later she was presented with a federation pin by Mrs. C. P. Blakemore. Toasts were given by Mrs. H. H. Pickering to "The Greatest Mother in the World;" Mrs. Joel Smith, "A Singing Nation;" Mrs. George Merritt, "Whistling Mothers," and Mrs. Harriett Snider-Laughlin, "Our Glorified Flag." Miss Maud Butler gave a prophecy in rhyme concerning "The Last Board." In response to "The Land We Live In," Mrs. Jones spoke earnestly of service, loyalty and democracy in love of country and duty to one's club.

"Woman's Work Today," said Mrs. Harold A. Gilman, president, in her patriotic message, "is to obey orders, use her head and live rightly, realizing individual responsibility in winning the war." Miss Flossie Ehrgott and Miss Helene Lois Heller proved delightful entertainers with songs and dances. In military costumes they led in singing "Somewhere in France," "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner." They gave an original skit, "Keep Your Eyes on Mary Brown," and, as a final number, interpreted the "Message of the Bluebird," Miss Heller in song and Miss Ehrgott in dance. Miss Olive Haserot, pianist, was the accompanist of the afternoon.

The Monrovia Club.

With a jolly picnic at the home of Mrs. J. A. Crandell, No. 225 Greystone avenue, Wednesday afternoon, the Monrovia Woman's Club officially closed a successful season. Following the al fresco luncheon in the beautiful gardens the club members listened to the annual reports of officers and the address of the retiring president, Mrs. S. E. Salisbury. The new officers who took their offices at this meeting were: Mrs. H. E. Kirschner, president; Mrs. H. Waterman, first vice-president; Mrs. S. H. Reynolds, second vice-president; Miss Virginia Perry, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, financial secretary; Mrs. S. E. Salisbury, federation secretary; Mrs. J. K. McLennan, treasurer; Mrs. E. D. Northup, parliamentarian; Mrs. Harriet Snow, historian; Mrs. A. J. Barnes, curator of sections. Mrs. A. H. Johnson and Mrs. L. N. Wheeler are directors.

During the past year $701.85 has been given the Red Cross through the club, and other war activities have been enthusiastically supported. The coming year will see the club on a more complete war footing than ever, according to the new president, Mrs. Kirschner.

Los Angeles Million Club.

Rogers, second vice-president; Mrs. Leslie H. Bevans, secretary; Mrs. Chase Terry, assistant secretary, and Mrs. George Lockhart, treasurer. The installation will not take place until after the entertainment at Gamut Club, on next Friday evening, which promises to be a very successful affair, and is given for the benefit of the Million Club Red Cross Auxiliary. Miss Cordelia Jannaris, the Chicago grand opera singer, will sing the opening number, "America," and other selections. Miss Lillian Gish will unfurl the flag. C. S. Friel, baritone, one of "The Big Four Quartette," will sing. Little Miss Ruby Ham will give a dance in costume, and the De Lano Hawaiian Orchestra will furnish a programme of string music.

There will be many other clever items on a generous programme and the Million Club expects to put its Red Cross finances on a substantial basis with the proceeds.

Ebell Club.

The Ebell Club will hold a momentous committee meeting tomorrow, when plans will be made for the mammoth Red Cross fete which will be held in the Hooker gardens on the 24th inst. Among other organizations co-operating will be the Stage Women's War Relief Society and a seductive al fresco moonlight supper in the grounds will be a ite mon the programme.

Ebell's programme tomorrow afternoon will be a lecture by Dr. Allison Gaw on "The Playhouse and the Play," when sixty specially prepared stereopticon views will be shown. Dr. Gaw is a specialist in the higher drama, but all the same he has an honest admiration for Charlie Chaplin and doesn't care who knows it.

Richard Gridley chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, at which installation of officers was held with due ceremony, was given on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Mary Gridley-Braly, regent of the chapter since its installation. Covers were laid for thirty-one at two tables, massed with white blooms, John Hyde Braly presiding over the long table where were seated the officers, all re-elected to succeed themselves, and Mrs. Braly at the head of the smaller table. Mrs. T. W. Preston was toastmistress, and each member of the chapter responded with a toast.

Medical Society.

A charming garden party given by Dr. Louise M. Richter and Dr. Gertrude Seabolt at the former's home in Garvanza on the 1st inst. formally closed the year for Alpha Epsilon Iota Medical Fraternity.

The long tables were spread beneath oak trees, which twinkled with electric lights, and the toasting of wieners and marshmallows detracted somewhat from the discussion of weightier themes.

Election of officers resulted in the following cabinet for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Olga M. McNeile; vice-president, Dr. Lula T. Ellis; recording secretary, Dr. Cynthia Skinner; corresponding secretary, Dr. Mona E. Bettin; treasurer, Dr. Nannie C. Dunsmoor.

"Please," asks Mademoiselle of the Millinery, "tell them about Summer Hats for Summer Wear." To a mere man, although in business, why even the most spoiled daughter of Fashion should wear a winter hat on July Fourth and a summer one on New Year's, is quite incomprehensible.

Yet this has been the custom, and Mlle. le Modiste has been largely responsible. But patriotism now supersedes all else and we have the interesting example of the Milliners themselves unselfishly asking the ladies of the land to help win the war by wearing summer hats while summer lasts.

"Please," asks Mademoiselle of the Millinery, "tell them about Summer Hats for Summer Wear." To a mere man, although in business, why even the most spoiled daughter of Fashion should wear a winter hat on July Fourth and a summer one on New Year's, is quite incomprehensible.

Yet this has been the custom, and Mlle. le Modiste has been largely responsible. But patriotism now supersedes all else and we have the interesting example of the Milliners themselves unselfishly asking the ladies of the land to help win the war by wearing summer hats while summer lasts.

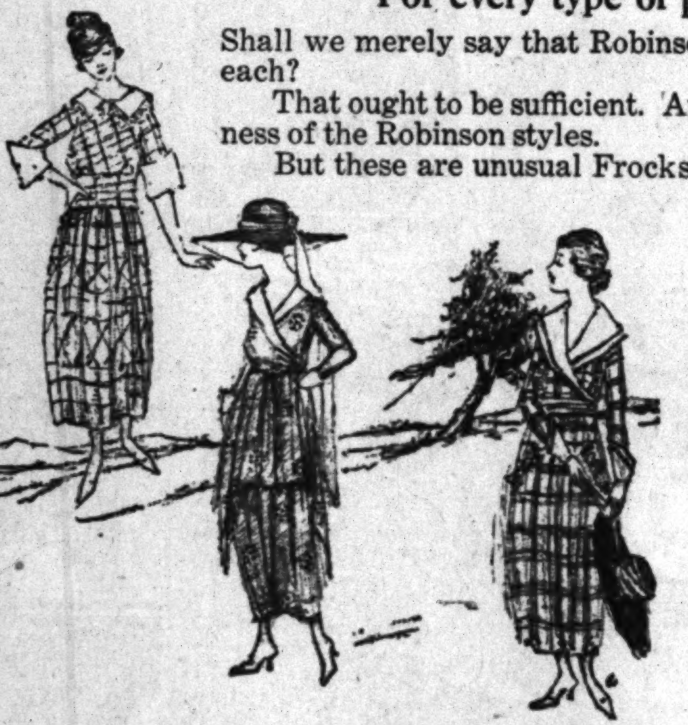
Frocks of Taffeta, Foulard, Crepe de Chine, Georgette, Wool Jersey, Serge. For every type of personality. For every occasion.



Shall we merely say that Robinson's offer hundreds of Frocks for Monday at $25 each?

That ought to be sufficient. And would be for those who know the distinctiveness of the Robinson styles.

But these are unusual Frocks and the price is most unusual.

Economy could be served in no better way.

Thrift could not be more surely promoted.

Conservation could not be made more constructive than by bringing really fashionable frocks down to the moderate price of $25.00. Costly models from some of the world's best designers have furnished the style ideas—and these frocks are produced at practical saving prices through ingenious economies effected in manufacture.

Bara's Director.

EDWARDS, THE MAN BEHIND THE VAMPIRE.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

J. Gordon Edwards,
Director-general of the Fox Film Corporation.

J. GORDON EDWARDS and I met in a pink-upholstered drawing-room of the period known to all of us as Louis Cans. The drawing-room was one of the "sets" of the Fox studios, in Hollywood, and you may see it some day soon in a motion picture. I shall not be in the picture, however. Why this room was chosen I cannot say. But it was empty at the time, the chairs were fairly comfortable, and we had the blue sky of California above us. On the whole, a most charming spot for a first meeting, and one conducive to easy friendliness.

For, in spite of the elegance of our surroundings, we made no particular attempt at elegant conversation, though I think it was polite even when we disagreed, which we did more than once. We talked about motion pictures, concerning which I have my ideas and Mr. Edwards has more. When we began to disagree too strongly, instead of resorting to blows we switched over to the subject of Theda Bara and her vamps, and were at once in accord. We both admire Miss Bara immensely.

However, though Mr. Edwards, in his three years with William Fox, has directed the great and original "vampire of the screens" in more than eighteen highly dramatic photoplays, beginning with "A Fool There Was" and ending with the latest and perhaps the greatest of them all, "Salome," just completed for our delectation, he had other stars under tutelage before Miss Bara's time, among them being Betty Nansen, the famous Norwegian actress, who is the wife of the explorer, Frithiof Nansen. He did two fine pictures with Mrs. Nansen.

Mr. Edwards simply "drifted" into motion pictures. For years he had been a successful director in the spoken drama, having under his direction such stars as Henrietta Crossman, Wilton Lackaye, Cecelia Loftus, James K. Hackett, Amelia Bingham, Marguerite Clark, Virginia Harned and a host of other men and women of the stage almost equally well known. He has also been an actor himself—so we see that he is more than duly qualified to hold the position of director-general of the William Fox organization and director of Miss Bara.

Mr. Edwards certainly drifted into the right neighborhood. He watched the directors in an idle sort of way, while at work with other matters connected with the great Fox organization, and when directorship on his own account was suggested, he smiled at the idea. However, he tried it one day—and succeeded beyond anybody's expectations, certainly far beyond his own. Therefore he "stuck." For which favor from the inscrutable gods of chance everybody is to be congratulated, especially the millions of fans who go crazy over vamps.

Theda Bara was another lucky find for the Fox organization. She was doing nothing in particular, nothing of great moment in pictures, "just waiting round" the studios with a dozen other pretty potential stars, when Mr. Edwards, who was casting for "A Fool There Was," noted Miss Bara's pose—and especially her eyes. "Just the girl we want!" he announced jubilantly. "Let's try her."

She was—and they did. The rest is ancient history by now, though the discovery is as recent as three years ago. Miss Bara became famous through one picture, and her reputation was steadily added to in all the seventeen that followed in rapid succession. She has known no other director than C. Gordon Edwards since that wonderful day.

"I believe," said Mr. Edwards, "that the less directing a director does, the better the picture will be —other things being equal. Let the actress do a scene in her own way, let her have a chance with her 'temperament'—that has always been my idea. Then you obtain grace, naturalness, the living thing, the thing that makes pictures as well as drama.

"When a director directs too much," he continued, "when every step and every gesture is mapped out for your star, she is apt to become stiff and self-conscious, acting for the camera instead of 'letting herself go,' so to speak, for the millions of men and women that she cannot see but that she has always in mind. Under too much direction she ceases to be herself, her personality is submerged—and you know that personality is everything in motion pictures."

I asked him about scenarios, touching upon the so-called continuity. I had heard that out in California the continuity was a fetish with directors, while in New York the continuity was established after the picture-play was finished. Mr. Edwards has the New York idea—which happens to be mine as well.

"I read the scenario once," said the famous director, "then I throw it aside and never look at it again. A slavish following of its dicta would hamper me at every turn, making that which should be fluent and living into something static and dead. One scene suggests another, and I go on with the second quite regardless of what the scenario tells me to do. Thus, and thus only, can a true continuity be established in a motion-picture play that is to have artistic beauty and vitality."

In spite of his freedom, when Mr. Edwards starts a scene he knows what he is going to do, and the work is all mapped out for that scene. When he works, he works hard, and there is no let-up until that particular scene is finished. In this fine directness, this keen search for the goal, he is ably assisted by Miss Bara, who is also a tireless worker, and wonderfully alert on motion-picture mechanics.

But Mr. Edwards is much more than a director. He is a man with a big heart, as many of the "extras" can testify. Always uppermost in his mind is the comfort and well-being of the many hundreds, and at times thousands, of men and women who are in his big scenes. During the filming of "Salome" and "Cleopatra" he personally saw to it that they were given every possible comfort, and he insisted that the food served them should be just as wholesome as that given to the principals in the production.

Let me add one more side light on the character of Mr. Edwards. He is not ashamed to acknowledge that he finds his charming little wife a great source of inspiration and a real helpmate. Before her marriage Mrs. Edwards was Angela McCaull, a well-known ingenue, daughter of Col. John A. McCaull, who was a noted theatrical manager. She has studied the intricacies of motion-picture production in conjunction with her famous husband, and during the filming of "Salome" and "Cleopatra" she offered scores of brilliant suggestions that helped tremendously to increase the beauty of the pictures.

Such is J. Gordon Edwards, man and director, as I found him, and as you will find him if you are lucky enough to happen into the Louis Cans drawing-room—or any other place where he may happen to be, for that matter.

Return of an Old Friend.

"SILENT BILL" DOES HIS RED CROSS BIT.

ARIZONA DEPUTY TURNS THOUSAND DOLLAR REWARD TO MERCY FUND.

How the deputy sheriff of Ray, Ariz., where they call him "Silent Bill" (Lewis being his last name,) won $1000 reward for capturing a man who had shot another deputy sheriff, and then turned the $1000 in to the Red Cross—silently, in keeping with his soubriquet—is told in the Arizona Republican.

The man, whom "Silent Bill" captured is Joseph Gomez, who shot to death Deputy Sheriff Joseph Donaldson at Sonoratown on May 16, last. When posses were organized shortly after the shooting, "Silent Bill" Lewis said nothing, but remained at his post, with eyes and ears open. Gomez, who was said to have been drunk when he shot and killed Donaldson during a dance, had friends and he went into hiding right in Sonoratown.

"Silent Bill" heard reports from the posses, but was following his own theory. His bloodhound scent or instinct was his only adviser. When he got near enough to "smell" Gomez, it was in front of a small house, not very far from the scene of the killing. He sent word into the house, thus:

"Gomez, I want him."

Gomez did not appear. Again "Silent Bill" spoke:

"Come out, Gomez, or I will kill you. It's orders."

The Sheriff of Pinal had offered a reward of $500 for Gomez, dead or alive, the mine company a like amount, $1000 in all.

In a few minutes an occupant of the house appeared with a revolver and said:

"It's Gomez's gun, he will come."

Without further delay Gomez appeared and "Silent Bill" placed him in jail and notified the Sheriff. He said he wanted his reward and the Sheriff immediately complied with the request. Bill then turned the sum over to the local Red Cross.

"My subscription," was all he said.

SHE SEARCHES BATTLE FIELDS FOR HUSBAND.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 2.—Three years ago Lady Robert Sheffield Stuart qualified as a hospital nurse and went to France, firm in the belief that her husband missing since the battle of Neuve Chappelle, was alive, and hopeful that she might learn some news of him. He was a captain of the Royal Scots Fusiliers and with four brother officers was severely wounded. Capt. Stuart insisted that his comrades should be removed before he was taken off the field, and when the stretcher-bearers returned for him he had disappeared.

Lady Stuart made eager inquiries wherever her duties led, but her patient quest thus far has been unrewarded, and the missing officer is now presumed to be dead. He was the heir of the Earl of Castlestewart, his elder brother, Viscount Stuart, having fallen at Loos.

STAGE.

Jack Lait's.

"ONE OF US" AT MOROSCO

"OH, BOY!" AT MASON; GOOD VAUDEVILLE ELSEWHERE.

Morosco.

Oliver Morosco will inaugurate his season of new productions at the Morosco beginning with today's matinee, when he will present for the first time on any stage a metropolitan romantic comedy from the pen of Jack Lait, entitled "One of Us." The play will be produced under the personal direction of Fred J. Butler, while Jack Lait, the author, has been attending rehearsals for more than two weeks past, and a perfect first performance is promised. Seats have been reserved by the most famous stars in Southern California, both of the stage and the screen, for the premiere of this play, while every writer of note in California will be present. Heading the list in the cast is Bertha Mann as Joan Gray, the girl of the cabarets, while opposite her will play Thurston Hall, in the role of the rich man's athletic son. Frances Underwood is here from New York to play a big role as the cabaret entertainer, and Harry Mestayer, another old-time favorite, is here from the East to appear as a broken-down minister who has taken up waiting in a "joint" to earn a livelihood.

Mason.

Maude Adams is sure to be welcomed, both for herself and the play she is to present, at the Mason Operahouse a week from Monday. The play in question is "A Kiss for Cinderella," which is J. M. Barrie's first long dramatic excursion since "The Legend of Leonora." There is considerable curiosity regarding the play, and it is being awaited with a good deal of pleasure, for a new play from the pen of the gifted Scotch dramatist, as well as a new role for Miss Adams, are not every-day happenings in the theater. Barrie describes "A Kiss for Cinderella" as a "fancy." It is said that he wrote it to divert his mind from the horrors of the war. The role of Cinderella is, of course, in the keeping of Miss Adams. Surrounding the actress is a company of much strength and artistic balance. "Oh, Boy" will run through another triumphant week at the Mason.

Burbank.

Starting Sunday matinee, the Liberty Musical Comedy Company, which has created a furore at the Burbank, with its elaborate revival of "The Campus," with Ferris Hartman in his original role, will present Richard Carle's rollicking hit, "Mary's Lamb." The new production will give the famous beauty chorus new songs, dances and costumes, while Ferris Hartman, the star, has a most ideal role for his individual style of fun-making. All of the supporting cast, including Floe Collins, Phoebe Hall, Julie Carroll, Josie Hart, Royden Keith, John Sheehan, F. E. Rome and Oscar Walch, have congenial roles, that will add to the ensemble of music, melody and mirth.

Orpheum.

Three headline acts top the Orpheum bill opening Monday matinee, June 10, and an added feature act makes the bill one almost wholly of headliners—showing that the Orpheum at least has no intention of slackening its worth in the supposedly "silly season" of summer, but will repeat its wonderful record of a year ago this time. One of the new topliners is a musical comedy with a big company of merrymakers, called "The Naughty Princess." A second topliner act is proffered by Lester Sheehan and Pearl Regay, who call their stunt "Five-Foot Fancies." And the third is Tina Lerner, the great Russian pianiste, whose concert tours have heretofore brought her before a limited portion of the populace who could afford the price, but who now will appeal to the great general public through the Orpheum, as so many stars are doing. Then there are Jim Toney and Ann Norma, long and short, who use their catch line "You Know What I Mean," as a title for a bright patter and song act. Nate Cole, Miss Russell and Frank Davis offer another clever act, under the odd title of "Yeggs," and Ben Beyer and Augusta, with their novel and trusty wheels and the like. Ruth St. Denis, with Margaret Loomis, in dances, and Llora Hoffman, the noted soprano, will be the only hold-over acts.

Pantages.

"An Heir for a Night," a musical comedy dealing with the troubles of a young man who acquired unexpected wealth, and featuring a number of pretty girls, will be the coming week's headliner at Pantages. The production affords two male comedians numerous opportunities to spring laughable chatter upon the audience, while the beauty chorus is given as many chances to display some nifty singing and dancing numbers. Special scenery and gorgeous costumes give the act a spick and span appearance and make it highly pretentious. Oren and Drew have a novelty surprise act called "A Barnyard Episode;" Jue Quan Tai, the Chinese songster, will furnish a rare treat to music lovers with her cultured soprano voice; La France and Kennedy will hand out a new line of laughs in their sketch, called "After the Battle." The Meyakos will offer "A Surprise from the Mikado Land." William S. Hart will be the photoplay star in a thrilling western melodrama.

Hippodrome.

"Good-by Broadway," which is the attraction scheduled to appear at the Hippodrome beginning with tomorrow's matinee, is one of the fastest and cleverest musical comedies of the season. The management has changed its policy for the week to allow this aggregation of artists and its beautiful chorus to present the unbeatable comedy hit of the year. The programme is a musical comedy, but consists of a series of entertainments, cabaret features and stunts, that, all bound together, make up the most entertaining hour and a half that can be arranged for a vaudeville performance. To make a good full measure of entertainment the management has also arranged for two other features.

Good-by!

THE PASSING OF THE STAGE-DOOR JOHNNY

"OH, JOHNNY, oh, Johnny, How You Could Love!" hummed the nifty young creature reminiscently. She came through the door of the stage and went with brisk steps to the corner to await her car.

The Man Who Wants to Know looked after her, then down the deserted passageway from Main street to the Burbank stage door, then he whistled softly. No stage Johnnies, nor any one remotely resembling the species, was within his field of vision. And he thought he knew the habits and customs of the Johnny.

"Have to look into this," he said inwardly. So, when another of the fresh and lovely girls of the chorus tripped out, he raised his hat and smiled. She tripped right by and out. The Man Who Wants to Know forgot to take his face out of smile, so paralyzing was the surprise. "Aha! That stuff is passe in these parts," he said—and exit.

Just why, with the chic, lovely and altogether alluring choruses appearing in the musical comedies put on by the Liberty Musical Comedy Company at the Burbank this summer, there are not double rows of Johnnies with pomaded hair and pretty yellow gloves waiting after the show, is very simple, once explained.

The reason divides itself into three divisions headed by three persons. Named in order of appearance, they are:

(1.) William Hohenzollern.
(2.) Dr. Gandier.
(3.) Maj.-Gen. Crowder.

All able-bodied Johnnies, who are capable of learning the army manual of arms, in place of the obvious or natural use of arms when pretty girls are present, are engaged in doing so. They have transplanted their wrist watches to the trenches, now carrying an Enfield instead of a cane, and throw bombs instead of bouquets. All this for the benefit of William.

In the second place, Doc Gandier's 14 per cent. ordinance jerks the cork from all incentive to take the maids of the merry-merry out for a good time, if such Johnnies as have not gone to war so desire. For he asks for wine, and they hand him a Bevo. Woman and song are not responsive under such circumstances. No one ever looked upon near-beer and saw that it was good. (While, in the army, they serve [illegible] tions.)

Thirdly and lastly, Gen. [illegible] has published the dictum of [illegible] jail. Every male must [illegible] alls or uniform. If Johnny [illegible] live beyond sight and sound of [illegible] sweetie on the end, front row, [illegible] up to him to receive a card, [illegible] ly attested, from Stage [illegible] Union No. 67, and learn the [illegible] ence between a flat and a [illegible]

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.

Up-to-datest:

Frills, narrow and very full upon every possible article of feminine attire.

Heavy cording—or as it was at one time called "piping"—as sole adornment of the summer frock of organdy or voile.

Quilting, for use upon hats, to trim the gown and for embellishment of hand-bags. Fancy designs are often employed in this quaint work, diamonds, scrolls and even intricate patterns being popular.

To tip the parasol with tassels either in a similar or contrasting shade to the body of the 'sol.

The all enveloping coat of white pique for summer wear, which should be strictly tailored and plain in cut.

Now is the time to buy:

Bread boards in new designs—notably those bearing the sign of Hooverization along the side in the form of ears of corn.

The silk for that tailored summer suit of taffeta. A sale at that out-Seventh high-class store insures quality at special prices.

Take-apart hats for kiddies to wear at the beach and in the country.

Everything for the out-of-doorsing of the coming season. Stocks for motoring, camping and motor camping are complete and unusually inviting. Many a vacation will be taken awheel this Hooverizing season and the appliances for comfort are a necessity.

Those odd motifs for decoration of all sorts of things. Fascinating are they in color and in design.

Window Galeties.

"Aren't they just adorable!" exclaimed Agatha as we paused before a window of that big furniture store on lower Broadway, where were displayed a whirlwind of those delicious colored motifs. "I always stop and dote on those imaginative things. I fancy just how I would apply them. Now, that delightful waddling goose—wouldn't she be fun on a big, downy porch pillow! And those kiddies, wild-waving, with their expressful backs toward us—I'd put them on a beach parasol." "Yes, and I'd carry out an entire floral scheme for the porch with those queer blossoms and would perch some of those colortive birds against the panels, below odd hanging vases!"

Thus we amused ourselves for several minutes applying those fascinating motifs which never fail of arousing the imagining of those appreciative of the so-different.

An Age Preventive.

"Out snopping?" I asked, upon meeting a friend recently—this being my term for touring downtown to prove to yourself how many things you can go without. "Snopping! I should say not!" she replied, recognizing my term of contempt. "I'm BUYING. Look here"—enticing me into her car and opening her capacious bag. "This is not a knitting bag, as it looks, but a 'gitting bag,'" and she disclosed a riot of pink crepe de chine camisoles, envelopes, negligees and all sorts of feminine frills. "Bridery?" I asked. "Not exactly," she replied. "Haven't you heard? I'm a step-great-grandmother!" "And so?" I asked, not exactly seeing the connection. "And so it, of course, behooves me to deck myself in all the latest and most fetching attire, to prove that I'm younger than ever—don't you see?" And a saucy twinkle played in her merry eyes, while a group of laughs gathered at the corners of her mouth. "Oh, I see. In place of the chimney-corner stuff." "Sure, oh, boy!" she replied. "A very flowery kimono, a new tulle evening frock and a picture hat will reach home before I do, and I intend ordering colors in place of black tailored suits, as has been my custom. I am about decided, too, to have a new runabout and run-it-about myself." "Heavens!" I commented, "what would you have done if you had been a REAL great-grandmother instead of a step one?"

Multiplied by Four.

Multiplied by at least four, I found the grocery department in that big store on lower Broadway. Not only multiplied in size, but in departments, in capacity for business and in the range of goods that it carries. "There must be a reason for such growth," I thought, and began to examine. I found there the best of whatever exists. In other words, quality was the bulls-eye aimed at, and the lowest of cost obtainable without discounting quality. I remembered orders given there and how well they had been filled, and recounted to myself the fact that it had always been the intention of the place, evidently, to do just right. "And that's what wins, every time," was my mental comment. Then the man began showing me the newly added features. Everything in the way of fittings done in ivory white. The very best of meats and poultry, and a section devoted to imported luxuries, the best the world affords. Truffles, pate de foie gras, fat Italian olives stuffed with—guess what—with almonds! And, oh, dear, so many things fine-eatable, that I came near deciding to partake of seven meals per day, henceforth, war savings or no; but compromised by trying a new brand of French sardines for night suppers and buying a stock of that so-fine make-quick jelly, which is soon to be off the market, because gelatine must all be used for explosives.

IN STORES AND HOMES.

[illegible] IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.

Up-to-datest:

Frills, narrow and very full upon every possible article of feminine attire.

Heavy cording—or as it was at one time called "piping"—as sole adornment of the summer frock of organdy or voile.

Quilting, for use upon hats, to trim the gown and for embellishment of hand-bags. Many designs are often employed in this quaint work, [illegible] scrolls and even intricate patterns being popular.

To tip the parasol with [illegible] either in a similar or contrasting shade to the body of the 'sol.

The all enveloping coat of white pique for summer wear, which should be strictly tailored and plain in cut.

Now is the time to buy:

Hand beads in new designs—notably those bearing the sign of Hooverization along the side in the form of ears of corn.

The silk for that tailored summer suit of taffeta. A sale at that outfitting high-class store insures quality at special prices.

Pique-smart hats for kiddies to wear at the beach and in the country.

Everything for the out-of-doorsing of the coming season. Stocks for [illegible] camping and motor camping are complete and unusually inviting. Many a vacation will be taken [illegible] this Hooverizing season and the appliances for comfort are a necessity.

Those odd motifs for decoration of all sorts of things. Fascinating as they [illegible] color and in design.

Silk Prices at Bullock's

Are particularly inviting in many other instances than those that follow—

—The character of Bullock Silks always supplements and lends value to their marking. In addition, at the present time, there is "the trend" which has been, and is upward—and which in many cases indicates that scarcity may become a positive lack.

HISTORY OF THIS GREAT SALE

In taking over the management of the Bon Ton, I found a very large stock of ladies' apparel. It was my understanding with the proprietor that I should sell out the entire stock and begin with merchandise bought under my supervision. I was of the opinion that it would take six weeks to close out such a mammoth stock. But this sale was so successful, the response so large and the buyers in New York bought new merchandise so much quicker than anticipated that I have decided to make the final week disregarding profit, or rather losses.

HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB
SYMPOSIUM.

TWENTY of the women members of the Happy Thought Club have donned khaki blouses and knickerbockers and volunteered their services in the orchard battalion in picking the Valencia orange crop.

The camera man at the studio made a beautiful picture when they were all lined up in their new togs. It looked like the beauty chorus at the flower show. It was a full score anyhow. The party is under the command of Gladys Canby, who was brought up on a ranch and can prune alfalfa with her manicure scissors without opening her eyes. They called Gladys a captain, but she thought she ought to be a general, because it was a general ranch on which she first saw the light of day. Esmeralda Hooligan declared she couldn't be a general because her army wasn't large enough. It was ridiculous to waste a general on twenty souls, even if they were eager and active ones. She may be a colonel by the time the army gets around to handling the corn crop, but that is about as high as she can expect to go.

The Amazonian Harvesters all wanted to begin their service in the Whittier district. They had heard of a beloved poet by that name, and Maude Lynn thought the oranges would bring a fancy price if they were individually wrapped in sheets of tissue paper bearing fragments of original verses.

Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, who is a cold-blooded statistician, declared that if it were proposed to treat the entire Valencia crop in this way it would require the auxiliary services of a flock of 920 poets for four months to do justice to the subject. So the bulk of the orange crop will go forth without any literary trimming.

This special service of the Amazons will not interfere with the activities in the Happy Thought war garden. Each of the volunteers has a substitute willing to work in the club patch and the garden is not difficult to care for at this time. With the aid of a bath sponge and towel, Ima Gonne Kuhn, who is very sentimental, harvested the bulk of her onion crop last Friday. Of other early vegetation there is no lack.

Although not yet fully uniformed, the Happy Thought Band turned out to welcome the artillery boys from the big camp. The Old Resident in his massive hardware suit, after the the manner of Sir Launcelot, was the specific subject of much interest. To accommodate the visitors he permitted one of the batteries to shell him for half an hour just to prove that his outfit was both fire and burglar proof. A six-inch shell rebounded from his bean with such force as to kill one of the mules belonging to the attacking party. The pioneer figures that when he is thoroughly accustomed to his armor he will be able to walk right through the German army and take the Kaiser alive with his bare hands. A meeting between the Old Resident and one of the German tanks would be as the grappling of lions. Arthur Moore Cumming said he would wish to commemorate it with a deathless epic. Wade A. Cross, who is an eminent artist, remarked that it would be a fit subject for a great historical painting, the Battle of the Tanks.

"Ay tank so," exclaimed Ole Olson, the Norwegian nightingale.

"Tanks, awfully," murmured the Old Resident, with a blush of modesty.

Prof. Am Hartz, the leader of the Happy Thought Band, appeared in the armor of Charlemagne and was also quite an imposing figure. The Quaker Iron Works reported that the armored uniforms of Bayard Sir Gawein, Roland Orlando and Tancred would be ready for delivery before the next symposium, and could be assigned to the members to represent these eminent scrappers. There was also a chain mail bathing suit for Queen Guinevere, which is understood to be designed for Lady Lou Mont Royal, the Verdugo Valley vestal.

When the Happy Thought Band is all accoutered it will look like a scene at the armory, all right.

The addition of the love letters of Adam and Eve to the Happy Thought museum continues to be the one great sensation in literary and scientific circles. Marjorie Evelyn Heartsease, the sunny secretary, reported that she had been advised that both the British museum and Oxford University had deputized delegations of several professors to visit the studio and inspect the treasures—also to secure photographs of the same if possible. The delegates might not be able to come right away, because of the war, but would make the trip as soon thereafter as possible. Quarters for one party had already been reserved at the Alexangelus and the whole world awaited Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes's translation and restoration of the letters with tense interest. The fact that Eve seems to have used a typewriter in making an insert to one of her notes is very baffling to the professor, and he is still trying to figure it out.

Speaking of Adam, there was a report from Sunburst Sophronia, the soft-spoken ballad monger of the Peruna colony, who put it up in this careless manner:

Roast Spare Rib.

Old Adam had a rib to spare,
He looked about most everywhere,
And spied a "peach" beneath a tree,
He made that rib pretext, you see,
To make himself be known to Eve.
Thenceforth (the tale our heart doth grieve,
The burden of the family cares
Fell on the women unawares,
For—
No matter what a mere man boasts,
'Tis woman who excels in roasts.
It was in the garden of Eden,
Where Adam was always a weedin',
That Eve by mistake met up with a snake,
That on ripe pippins was feedin'.
Then a longing seemed to possess her
For raiment sufficient to dress her,
And ever since then it's been up to the men
To buy clothes for the woman—
God bless her!

After the Old Resident had been separated from his baseburner suit, the club symposium yesterday took up some of the matters before the organization. Among other matters was a bunch of entries in the contest for limericks of persons and places.

Bonnie Brierly, the soulful soloist of Summerland, came up with this fragment which she had garnered while sojourning by the seas:

"A woman whose name was Louise
Was terribly troubled with fleas;
She found the right caper
Was sticky fly paper,
And now she can catch them with ease."

Evangeline Spriggs, the young Sapho of Santa Ana, drifted in with a message which she had found traced on a slab with a cheese knife, and which, when put through a clothes wringer, wheezed something like this:

"A scintillant star-ling called Mary
Found the garden of love quite contrary.
In just a short time
She picked up a lime
By the fair banks and braes of Glengary."

Just to show that she was still in her old form—a perfect 37—the sunny secretary chortled this brief refrain:

"There once was a fellow named Louie,
Who dined with his girl on chop suey
Made of gnats' eyes and snails,
And little toads' tails,
Which made his tummy go flooey.

Gladys Vinaigrette Slosson, the mystic maid of Moneta, came blithely up to the rack with a mess of chopped feed, which came from the grinder something like this:

"There was an old spinster named Lil,
Who had taken a very bad spill,
She would often complain
Of a very bad sprain,
Till the doctor one day sent his bill."

Verbena Baker, the cute chucklehead of the old South, was numbered among those present, and she came not empty handed. She brought with her a three-sheet circus poster on the back of which she had penned these delicious lines with trembling hands:

A patriarch whose name was Noah
Got caught in an awful down-po'ah;
But he built him an ark
Before it got dark,
And never got wet any mo'ah.

Carew Doyle, the oleaginous singer of the petroleum belt, was able to stand up on his pins long enough to be relieved of this morsel:

"There was a fair maiden of Perth
Who was much given over to mirth;
When asked what she'd have,
She exclaimed with a laugh,
'I am only wanting the earth.'"

Sum Noyes, who goes out in his shed and writes poetry every time his wife beats him up with a hoe handle, bashfully announced that he had just prepared a little thing which glided after this manner:

"There was a smart aleck named Peter,
Who at cards was a terrible cheater;
When he brings up in hades
He won't find where the shade is—
They'll stake him out next to the heater."

Etta Lott, the guardian angel of Balboa, sent word that she was busy training for a nurse and that part of her work was to write verses like this for the benefit of stricken soldiers:

"We once knew a fairy named Pearl
Who was known as the girl with a curl.
She's one of the fixtures
In these moving pictures,
And sets the boys' head in a whirl."

Ida Noe Howe, the little teaser of Tulsa, likewise asked for a hearing, and when it was accorded her it took this flippant form:

"A breezy old party named Paul
Would talk about nothing at all;
He wasted hot air
Till his friends, in despair,
Suggested he hire a hall."

Wanda Seymour, the skittish siren of Montecito, also had a mysterious message which she had found contained in a loaf of nut bread. When disclosed to the light it was about like this:

"A plump little fairy named Rose
Went swimming without many clothes;
A shark—pesky varmint!—
Tore off her one garment,
So she had to stay in till she froze."

Hattie Harrison Shiner, the brilliant performer on the snickerphone, sat in the anteroom absently rolling her fins while she softly crooned this double-barreled entry:

"There was an explorer named Pike,
Who was fond of taking a hike;
He climbed very high—
'Most up to the sky—
A name's all that's left of poor Pike.

"There was a young man called John Quincy,
Whose steps were not small or mincy;
He President became,
There's no greater fame,
For the Adams that followed John Quincy."

Red Raven, the rollicking roisterer of Riverside, picks up his new style Enfield and also fires a double charge, which caroms off the target in this manner:

"I'd like to play Shakespeare's Othello,
Or to play on the drums or the 'cello,
Or ought, can't you see,
To draw attention to me,
And make me a noticeable fellow.

"Do you know the famous Old Resident?
He aspires I think to be President;
But I'll put for a joke
In his wheel quite a spoke,
For, you know, in his head there's a dent.

"That isn't a dent, it's a gash," remarked the Cheerful Idiot.

Col. Benoni Toot, compiler of the familiar "Solemn Thought" anthology, was furnished a couple of additional fragments for his collection. Bonnie Briefly carelessly sprinkled this gem:

"One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er,
That while my purse looks pretty flat,
Down in my sock there's more."

Zeb Terrier, the rough diamond of the packing-house belt, put it in this way:

"One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er.
Nine innings have been fought
Without a measly score."

Gen. Goliath Gander, compiler of the Gander Jingles, has offered a special premium for the best parody on "There Was a Man in Our Town." The Gander Jingle Book is going strong, but the general wishes to feature this especial selection. When the announcement was made the Cheerful Idiot went through his usual stunt of ambling to the club blackboard and recording his impressions with a bit of chalk. In this case he perpetrated the following:

"There was a man in our town
Who thought him wondrous wise;
He grew his whiskers upside down
To screen his beady eyes.

"But when the sums shut off his lamps,
How did this guy behave?
He went him to a barber shop
And bellow for a shave."

Gen. Gander said that anyone could tell that that was the work of the Idiot. He said he didn't think it would do. Anyhow he wanted to wait for Kipling and the rest.

Sunshine Sallie of the Soothsayers' Sisterhood had also been teasing her typewriter, and the proceeds were some random remarks on the war and conservation, which jingled in this careless way:

Who's Who?

Who took us from a sumptuous fare
And made men hungry everywhere?
Who made this world a waste of care?
The Kaiser.

Who keeps his own mean self so fat?
Who used to get what he aimed at
What makes our "tummies" all so flat?
The Kaiser.

Who is our conservation boss?
Who keeps strict tab on gain or loss?
Who makes the profiteers so cross?
Herb Hoover.

We'll stick by you through thick and thin,
Each little Thrift Stamp saving in,
Thus in the end we'll save our skin.
Herb Hoover.

Apparently the mystery concerning the disappearance of Aggie Fish has been solved—at least, partially so. It will be remembered that Jot Woof, the amorous blacksmith of Anaheim, made such a lamentable fuss over the loss of his flame that the club offered a reward of fifty bones for her discovery, dead or alive.

The odd thing is that this reward is now claimed by this vampire mermaid person herself. It also appears that the feverish blacksmith is with her, and it looks as if they had worked up the reward business between them in order to get enough money for their honeymoon.

Aggie speaks of it in the most matter-of-fact way — as if it were cute, in fact. In the course of her statement she writes from her retreat at Alka Half:

"Dear Everybody: To a lady humorist fifty bones looks like a pile. I have my own future to look after and vamping isn't going so strong since my State went dry and Thursday is eggless day, and so I have taken to the merry-merry myself. I expect to take the fifty I get for discovering myself and buy the paper I'm the funny editor of [illegible] make the rest of it clever; or possibly I might buy a ticket and join as understudy for the Old Resident. I am well qualified for the position since I can sing, dance, smoke, recite, cook, swear, play pinochle and the trombone, and drive a hearse. The old man would never have a dull moment except when [illegible] was around.

"Or maybe I'd take the fifty you so generously offer and spend it all on pretty things for my trousseau. Jot says, he likes 'em all pink. By the way, what happened to Tillie Woof—she of the wart on her nose? As a sister-in-law she is going to be lovely to murder slowly, so that she'll suffer more. It's nice to know that I've been missed so from the club. I remember once getting quite a sentimental letter from the Old Resident. It seems that he slipped up behind an attractive blonde thinking it was me and coyly caressed her Psyche knot, and when he found it was only Bonnie Brierly burst into tears. It must be frightful to be so old that one's eyesight is impaired to that extent—but he's a good old guy at that. Yet how can I forgive him for mistaking a plump partridge like Bonnie Brierly for my own svelte, lissome self?

"I am glad you got Jumping Jehosaphat back safely in spite of the increase in the family. Wasn't it funny that 'Hossie was a she! I should like to have seen your face and found her with the six little dears. Are they weaned yet? They were so cute before they had their eyes opened. I hardly thought Pearlie Pinkle would still be so fond of the Bear tribe after her experience once as an involuntary incubator but she cried when we sent Hossie back and she asks if you won't please name the brown one with the white spot on its tummy after her. Seeing as how she belongs to the brood she should be godmother to one. The one I name is to be Jot, of course. It is the one that jumped every time I snapped my fingers. That makes the name appropriate for the Woof does, too. Jot laughs at that idea of baiting his trap for me with a curling iron. Mine are naturally curly curls and Jot, with a smug fondness, claims he didn't need any trap except to hide it from me. Many thanks for all the engagement presents wished on me by members of the club. The pink celluloid hair receiver was just what I wanted, and the picture of the departed fish that Marjorie urged onto me is so lifelike that all the cats in the neighborhood hang around the woodshed, where it is so tastefully hung. Give my love to all whose dues are paid up and who chipped in on my remembrance, and please send the fifty by return mail, as Jot says we need the money.

"As ever, AGGIE."

Arthur Moore Cumming wanted to have a committee on resolutions in order to express the feeling of the club over the restoration of Aggie. The Old Resident offered no objections, but was sore over the hint of graft in connection with the reward. It was then recalled that the announcement called for a reward of fifty bones.

That made it easy.

The Old Resident made up a package at the packing-house. It contained forty-eight spare ribs, a wishbone and a funny bone, and this was ordered expressed to the amorous pair with the compliments of the club.

In the meantime all applications for membership, all limericks of persons and places in the "B" and "S" classes; all parodies, happy thoughts or other club correspondence, may be addressed to Eugene Brown, editorial rooms, The Times.

FATTY ARBUCKLE GETS ATMOSPHERE

Getting atmosphere for his latest comedy, "The Cook," which is now under production for Paramount release, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle spent last Sunday with his dog Luke on the Pike at Long Beach. Here Fatty and his dogship frolicked between the Pike amusements and the surf.

Of course, beach pike [illegible] afford a wealth of comedy suggestions for the rotund comedian. Spectators who watched Fatty and his bull terrier companion at play probably little realized that their favorite comedian was busily gathering material for his next laugh-maker.

Fatty and Luke rode the jack rabbit racer and they circled through the air in the Flying Dutchman which is much the same as looping the loop in an airplane. They stumbled their way through the "House That Jack Built" and tumbled to and fro in the soap box. They gazed admiringly at the side-show wonders and they hurtled down the bamboo slide. Even the merry-go-round lured them.

For a half-hour Fatty watched the hot dog man busily passing out sandwiches to hungry bathers. The half-hour means a few more big gags in "The Cook."

Last but not least came the flea circus. Luke evinced much more interest in the fleas than did his master, since he has been in close touch with these intelligent insects more or less throughout his career. Fatty says that Luke has not been the same since.

TURKS CAUSE RECALL OF GEN. FALKENHAYN

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE]

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—According to the Munich Neueste Nachrichten, the Turks are responsible for the recall of Gen. Von Falkenhayn from Palestine. He has been succeeded as head of the German forces in charge of operations there by Gen. Liman Von Sanders, the former head of the German military mission at Constantinople.

Fat and Lean.

An Ohio farmer told his son that he should have charge of the pigs from that time forth, that he should feed them twice a day—morning and evening. A few weeks later, the pigs set up a terrible squealing throughout the night. After this had occurred several nights and the farmer's sleep was disturbed thereby, he questioned his son as to the cause of so much squealing at night.

In mute finger language, the son explained that he had purposely refrained from feeding the pigs at night. Naturally, his father was indignant on hearing this and, stamping his foot, demanded the cause of such willful neglect. The son, not in the least affected by his father's anger, replied:

"Well, you gave the management of the pigs over to me, didn't you? And I'm going to see that they get what I think is good side meat for the winter—a streak of fat and a streak of lean!"—[illegible] News.

How far will be the stroke Blind Justice deals?

Garrick.

William S. Hart as a vampire! That will be the unusual treat given out to Garrick patrons during the coming week, for the famous western star opens a seven-day engagement today in "The Devil's Double," a stirring western melodrama in which he "vamps" the wife of a famous artist. Enid Markey is the feminine star of the production, and with such a talented actess as his co-star, Hart claims "The Devil's Double" as one of his very best western productions.

Palace.

Marguerite Clark, the demure little Paramount star, and Charlie Chaplin, the world's foremost comedian, will share headline honors on the coming week's bill at the Palace. The dramatic artist will be seen in her latest Paramount production entitled, "Rich Man, Poor Man," while the funmaker will be featured in "The Hula Hula Dance," a riot of fun dealing with Charlie's adventures with the Hawaiian maidens. A Christie comedy will be the added attraction.

De Luxe.

J. G. Hawks, who has furnished William S. Hart with as many vehicles as any author, is enthusiastic over his latest scenario, which is a story of the Canadian Northwest and is the fourth Hart photoplay produced by Thomas H. Ince for Artcraft. It is entitled "Blue Blazes' Rawden," and will be shown at the Theater De Luxe today and tomorrow. Billie Burke, in "The Land of Promise," will be shown at the De Luxe Tuesday and Wednesday. Henry B. Walthall returns to the De Luxe for two days, commencing Thursday, when he will be seen in his interpretation of Terence Kelly's romantic story of the cattle lands of Western Texas, "With Hoops of Steel." Bessie Love, the charming little girl first discovered by D. W. Griffith, will be seen Saturday only, in "How Could You Caroline."

AN INNOVATION IN THE STUDIO.

shown as the ruler of a district which is the hiding place of political intriguers and crooks. In a scuffle with Darrell Foss, the latter, who is quite a husky boy himself, became a bit too enthusiastic in the cause of art, with the result that Mr. Desmond was hurled backward on a table and dislocated his shoulder.

Johnson Returns to Photoplay.

After a year spent in the producing end of the film industry, Julian Johnson has harkened to the call of printer's ink and has severed his connection with the Triangle studios in order to return to his old desk as editor of Photoplay Magazine.

Mr. Johnson is well known throughout the literary world, having written a number of one-act plays and magazine stories. It was his genius both as organizer and writer which built up the Photoplay Magazine until it has become one of the most popular magazines devoted to films and film folks.

Greater Love Hath None—

Olive Thomas, Triangle beauty, is planning a warm welcome for her sailor husband, Jack Pickford, who is expected to arrive in Los Angeles from New York any day now, on furlough. Olive has ordered a new sixteen-valve Stutz and has it all waiting for Jack as a surprise.

Temperate Zone Item.

Darrell Foss, Triangle leading man, is wailing and gnashing his teeth because of the tone of his most recent mash notes. "Too friendly and impersonal," says Foss. "And all because some one has been spreading it around that I'm a married man." Foss declares that he isn't, and has no immediate prospects of being led to the halter.

[illegible] Tame Stuff.

The thing about motion-picture directors always fighting one another [illegible] when they have a scenario [illegible] to fight, isn't strictly true. Occasionally they are able to cooperate peacefully. This was proved the other day out at the Brunton Studio on Melrose avenue, when Reginald Barker walked briskly into the studio casting manager's office to state his needs for the next day, and was followed as briskly by Ernest C. Warde.

"I want a lot of extras tomorrow for 'The One Woman' picture," Mr. Barker remarked. "Get me about 350. I'm going to have some big scenes."

"Say, old man," cried Mr. Warde. "I want 250 or 275 for Jack Kerrigan's picture tomorrow. Can you get 'em?"

"Don't know," the casting director replied, "the two of you that way—you're draining the extra market!"

So Mr. Barker, who was directing "The One Woman," and Mr. Warde, who was telling Jack Kerrigan what to do, turned to each other with their cigars at the proper aggressive angle, and looked one another in the eye.

"I've got to have them!" growled Mr. Barker, "over 300 raving anarchists, Socialists and nihilists!"

"Oh, well, it's all right then," said Mr. Warde with a sigh of relief. "What I want is negroes and Southerners!"

And the two walked out arm in arm.

Some Stars of the Movies.

Leah Baird and Edward Mackay in "Life Or Honor," Symphony.

Elsie Ferguson, in "A Doll's House," Kinema.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Say! Young Fellow," Grauman's.

Constance Talmadge, in "The Lesson," Tally's Broadway.

Anna Luther in "Moral Suicide," Miller's.

William S. Hart in "The Devil's Double," Garrick.

Macista—Hero of "Cabiria," in "With Italian Army in Alps," Clune's Auditorium.

Dorothy Phillips in "A Soul For Sale," Superba.

Ethel Clayton, in "The Man Hunt," Rivera.

Jewel Carmen in "Confession," Alhambra.

Mae Marsh, in "The Woman," Quinn's Rialto.

Marguerite Clark in "Rich Man, Poor Man," Palace.

Theodore Roberts and Jack Mulhall in "Wild Youth," Clune's Broadway.

Picture plays of the hour,

New thrillers for the fans, who will have opportunities to experience every emotion known to the human heart.

Now He Ping-Pongs.

When Charlie Chaplin's new studios were built a portion of a lemon grove was removed to make room for the structures, and one of the essential things in Charlie's everyday life, a tennis court, was made over a once perfectly good vegetable garden.

When the third Liberty Loan called Charlie to the East, the tennis court was neglected, as there were no other devotees of the pastime left at the studios except Syd, and as no way has yet been devised to play "solitaire" tennis, that worthy passed it up.

When Charlie returned to California, the first thing he did was to gather a number of tennis sharks from the Athletic Club and carry them off to the Hollywood studios. Once there, handsome tennis flannels were donned, and the group sallied to attack the tennis courts.

But alas! What had once been a carefully-groomed, well-kept and nicely-manicured tennis court, was now naught but a prolific bed of asparagus and onions.

Charlie has taken up ping-pong.

Washburn With Lasky.

Bryant Washburn, whose picture, "Skinner's Dress Suit," at once raised him to the pinnacle of screen popularity, has been engaged to star in Lasky features. He will appear in Cecil de Mille's next picture.

Society Item.

William Russell, Mutual star, will be host to James Sheldon, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, who arrives from the East this week. Mr. Russell expects to entertain the Mutual high official at his new home in Santa Barbara.

Now He's Domestic Cuss.

Norman Kerry has taken over Matzene's big Hollywood residence at the entrance to Laurel Canyon. Mr. Kerry's domestic menage includes his mother and sister, and a distinguished guest, Capt. Leslie Stewart of the English army.

Francis Ford Busy.

The Francis Ford Producing Company, which has leased stage space at the Christie film plant, is busy producing a six-reel State Rights feature and six one-reel pictures to be released on the General programme as "miniaturettes."

"The Isle of Intrigue," is the name of the State Rights feature, in which Mr. Ford is himself playing the leading role. Edna Emerson, recently of New York, plays opposite.

Sweet Memories Item.

Word comes from the Al Jennings Production Company that Al Jennings and his brother Frank are staging in front of the camera the hold-up scenes which they staged in reality all of twenty years ago, and both relate they are having a great time re-living the roles of bold, bad bandits.

Stone Leases Dodge Home.

Fred Stone has leased the beautiful Hollywood home of Frank Dodge, the architect, as a residence for himself and family during the ten weeks he will be making Paramount pictures in the West.

Come Sisters and Work.

Gladys Brockwell, Fox star, by way of doing her bit has opened rooms on Hollywood boulevard for the Stage Women's War Relief work. The rooms are completely equipped and will be ready for occupancy tomorrow. All actresses interested in war work are invited to come and help.

More Strenuous Than Ever.

Tom Mix, under the direction of Lynn Reynolds, has finished an other Western picture for Fox, entitled "Fame and Fortune." Though it is hard to believe, it is said that never before in his film career has Mr. Mix performed the stunts that he has in this virile drama of the West.

After finishing, and by way of "rest," Mix went out to his ranch to break in some new horses he has just bought, while director Reynolds, in company with Sol Wurtzel, manager of the Fox studios, and J. D. Jennings, the photographer, went to the Kern River country to catch trout.

In the cast of "Fame and Fortune," are Kathleen Connors, Annette De Foe, George Nichols, Robert Bolden, Charles McHugh, Val Paul, E. N. Wallack and Clarence Burton.

Planning New One.

Both William Farnum and his director Frank Lloyd are busily engaged in the preparation of "Rainbow Trail," which is to be the next Farnum release. This story is a sequel to "Riders of the Purple Sage," and was also written by Zane Grey. The scenes will necessitate the company traveling again to the wilds of Arizona.

She Raised the Temperature.

Theda Bara, Fox star, who receives many queer letters in her mail, announces that last week she received the quaintest of all from a sailor boy stationed at the Naval Training Station at Key West.

In his letter to Miss Bara he states that while on rifle practice he has done exceedingly well for various reasons. First he shot at the target and had his mother and dad in mind; the second shot he fired while having the Lord in mind; and then he continued that "it was getting hotter and hotter, and the fire of the sun burned and burned, and just as it got very hot he thought of Miss Bara and fired a shot for her and for the women of the United States."

Hits High Spot.

What is undoubtedly the highest price ever offered for state rights to any film production was paid this week by Sol. L. Lesser, president of the All Star Features Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, when he advanced $200,000 for the rights to David Griffith's "Hearts of the Wold" for the Pacific Coast and mountain States, including California. This beyond question establishes the record price for any tertory of the film business.

Little Ben is Scoring.

Ben Alexander, the precocious over night for his impersonation of the Little Brother in "Hearts of the World," has been engaged by Metro for a prominent part in the production of "Boston Blackie's Little Pal," starring Bert Lytell. Work on this picture, a screen adaptation by Albert Shelby Le Vino of Jack Boyle's "Boston Blackie" stories, has been commenced at Metro studios. E. Mason Hopper is directing.

Mail is Going up.

Sessue Hayakawa has made the first purchase of aerial postage in the West. As soon as the Japanese star learned of the inauguration of the airplane mail service between Washington and New York, he communicated with the postoffice authorities at Los Angeles and made known his desire to be the first person in the Southern California city to send a letter to New York by the new aerial route.

It will cost 24 cents to send a letter from this city to New York by the national capital aerial service, and Hayakawa is planning to forward a number of letters to friends in the metropolis. The letters have already been written and are only awaiting the arrival of the new postage from Washington.

Noteworthy Cast With Hayakawa.

Two young women well known in the film world, Jane Novak and Sylvia Bremer, are in the cast of the second picture in which Sessue Hayakawa is being starred with his own company.

The first of the scenes of this production, which is entitled "The Temple of Dusk," and which is from the pen of Frances Marion, were filmed early last week under the direction of James Young, who is to alternate with William Worthington in making the Hayakawa productions.

No Job for an Invalid.

Margarita Fisher, the American star, has returned to Santa Barbara after a three weeks' illness from pneumonia. Miss Fisher, accompanied by her mother, motored to Los Angeles to buy the thirty gowns for her new production, "Beauty to Let," and was taken ill the night of her arrival. While convalescing, Miss Fisher had a regular line of tradespeople waiting outside her door to show her the wonderful materials and frills that go to make up the exquisite creations that this talented little star designs herself.

"Never again will I shop in bed," says Margarita.

Near-to-Nature Note.

With the completion of his first epic of the western plains, Dustin Farnum has heard the clarion call of the sea, and, with his speedy cruiser, the Ding, has taken himself a-stream, far from the haunts of the clicking camera. All the swordfish in the vicinity of Catalina Island have given notice of their intention to seek comparative safety in voluntary internment for the next two weeks in the deepest caverns on the ocean bottom.

Miss Kingston Entertains.

Winifred Kingston, the well-liked leading lady of the Sherman Productions, Inc., has for the last week been entertaining Mrs. Beckworth Kibbey, the owner of the 100,000-acre ranch near Tucson, Ariz., upon which the scenes for "The Light of Western Stars," Dustin Farnum's first superpicture, were filmed.

He was Some Animal.

Baby Marie Osborne recently visited the navy boys in San Diego and met the admiral in charge of the United States fleet of the Pacific. He took her to a circus. To a crowd of young folks visiting her an evening since then she told of sitting on the admiral's knee while seeing the circus, and as a clincher finished with:

"My admiral owns the Pacific Ocean!"

Bebe's Fertile Fancy.

Bebe Daniels, Rolin star, is forever figuring out freak ideas for parties, especially since she has an opportunity to donate the proceeds of her affairs to the Red Cross. Last night she gave a kid dress-up party at the Chestmere apartments, where she had gathered about seventy-five couples, the girls bringing basket lunches, which were raffled off to the highest bidder among the men present.

She was assisted by Harold Lloyd and Harry Pollard, her coworkers in the Rolin-Pathe comedies.

Low-cut Prices.

The windows of that high-class store out Seventh street are a study in low-cut and plainly-marked prices; and that these interest and invite is attested by those who stand before them, study and decide upon their purchases. "Only (so much) for those night gowns! And you know the quality is there, for this store has nothing but good quality. Come! Let's go in!" I heard this said more than once during a few minutes' scrutiny of the display. Quality is exacted nowadays, since Hooverization has set in.

Fashion's Victories.

Evening dresses are made of tulle in two entirely different tones.

Sport skirts of a quiet kind are very much liked by business women.

There is a good deal of flowered voile used for dainty underwear.

White jersey makes some of the most charming dresses of the year.

Wall-flower red is a new shade that vies with geranium for popularity.

White wash satins are a great success on account of their laundering qualities.

For semi-tailored street frocks choose linen, natural pongee or colored shantung.

Pretty blouses are made of white pongee, with plaid silk gingham collar and cuffs.

Close-fitting toques with crowns of burnt ostrich are favorites for every age.

Elbow sleeves with frills, kimono sleeves and long, close sleeves are all fashionable.

Dresses of jersey in silk, cotton and wool are fashionable and mostly embroidered.

High waist lines are as much liked as the dresses that hang straight from the shoulder.

The throat that is none too pretty can be swathed in tulle when evening dress is worn.

Sable and marten are favorite furs now and promise to be so still in the autumn.

The pile fabrics are so scarce and so high that very few coats can be made of them.

They are wearing velvet waistcoats of brilliant colors, with white or black skirts.

Tricotine is often used instead of a pile fabric, the latter having become appallingly expensive.

Blouses sometimes match the lining of the suit coat.

Glazed rough straws are combined with taffeta for hats.

Spiral cuffs of white handkerchief linen are being worn.

Long, straight stoles are great favorites among furs.

Men of the One Hundred and Fifty-first Field Artillery (First Minnesota Artillery) in France have adopted as their official mascot a little French girl and are supplying 500 francs a year for her support. The adoption was learned of from a letter written by Corp. P. E. Fader of Battery A to his father, E. A. Fader of St. Paul.

According to Mrs. Harriet Reid of the Home Folks Association of Battery A, the child was virtually a waif. She attached herself to the One Hundred and Fifty-first and vowed she never would leave them. When the regiment was ordered into the danger zone provision was made for her at a town well behind the lines, where the men see she has everything she wants. The child is 9 years old.

For years W. F. Hartley has been running a popcorn stand in front of the Novelty and Majestic theaters, Topeka, Kan.

Roy Crawford was passing his stand recently.

"Looka-here, Mr. Crawford," Hartley said. "Are you collecting money for the Red Cross?"

"I'm not an official collector, but I'll take anything and turn it over," Crawford replied.

Harley opened the glass door of his machine. Taking out a package of sacks he counted them. All the time he was mumbling figures, costs, profits and receipts to himself.

Then, opening a little tin box, he extracted in nickels and dimes $2.

"This contribution is for my faithful old machine," he said, as he handed the money to Crawford. "It represents what the machine did for me yesterday."

Then he reached in his pocket and extracted a $2 coupon from a Liberty Loan Bond.

The services of a physician were required Thursday at the breakfast and reception for the Blue Devils of France, at the Hotel Severin. When the fighters arrived one of them was carrying a finger wrapped in a handkerchief, the result of an accident on the sleeper during the night.

The finger was badly mashed and the soldier was in great pain. Dr. F. E. Manker came in response to a call from the hotel. After the wound was dressed, A. Bennett Gates, president of the Severin, who speaks French with some difficulty, assured the soldier he would take care of the physician's bill. The young man smiled his thanks and sat down to his breakfast. The doctor was requested to step to the cashier's window and receive his fee.

"What's that—charge a French soldier?" he replied with warmth. "There is no charge. Say, I've got a nephew over there, and for all I know he's fighting today at the side of a Frenchman. No French soldier can pay me for anything."—[Indianapolis News.

GERMAN KAISERIN LEADS ONE OF MOST UNHAPPY LIVES IN WORLD.

Emperor's Brutality and "Affairs" with Other Woman Cause Her Many Heartburnings—Escapade of Dissolute Son Brings Grief in Its Train—Kaiser Paid Undue Attention to Sweetheart of Young Officer.

BY COUNTESS EMILIE ALSENBORG.

[SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR TO THE TIMES.]

[Countess Emilie Alsenborg was for fifteen years a Lady-in-Waiting to the German Empress. The Private Court List for 1914 avoids any reference to her nationality, probably for the reason that the Kaiser disliked mention of the foreign origin of any person connected with the Imperial Household. But the List states that the Countess is the daughter of a deceased Swedish nobleman, that she is the author of a book of travels, and has composed several songs. It also tells that in 1908 she received the diamond star of the Household Order "for wise and zealous service." Since the outbreak of war the Kaiser has chosen to dismiss her, and she has retired to her native country, where she has written her reminiscences.]

FROM the depths of my heart I pity my late royal mistress, the most disappointed woman I have ever known—worried and insulted by her selfish, moody and unfaithful husband; neglected and deceived by her own family; at enmity with her daughters-in-law.

That the Kaiserin is sometimes shrewish and spiteful, even vindictive, I frankly admit; but, knowing all that I do, I can find excuse for her faults—she has been soured and embittered by the constant trials and indignities she has had to bear.

I well remember a long conversation I had with the Kaiserin just before the outbreak of war. We were seated, I recollect, in a boudoir of the Kaiserin's suite in the Sans Souci Palace, usually the imperial family's summer residence, overlooking the beautiful park at Potsdam, quite near to Berlin.

The Kaiserin was looking upset and worried. She had just been interviewing old Von Trautmann, a chamberlain of the household, supervisor of the staff and of domestic affairs generally in the Berlin and Potsdam palaces, and was still trembling with shame and vexation.

THE KAISER MISERLY.

"It's scandalous, Emilie," she exclaimed, "that I should have to endure the annoyance and humiliation of listening to these constant complaints—and be helpless to remove their cause. Trautmann reports that the servants are terribly discontented and practically in revolt—asserting they are badly underpaid and disgracefully fed. Trautmann actually agrees with them—declares they have scarcely one decent meal a day. Apparently they don't take into consideration the honor they have of serving the imperial household.

"You know, it is not my fault, Emilie—that I would improve matters if I could. But Wilhelm makes such a miserly, grudging allowance for the household expenses. One would imagine he was on the verge of bankruptcy—and we know that is not true!"

I did. I knew well that the Kaiser was, and is, as enormously wealthy as he is consumed with greed. It was quite commonly reported in court circles that he had a huge private fortune securely invested all over the world—millions in America and Canada, besides large investments in France, Russia and the German colonies.

"I have appealed to Wilhelm repeatedly, but it's useless—I've had little reward for my pains!"

A spot burned in the Kaiserin's pale cheeks as she doubtless recalled various unpleasant scenes. She had brought little dowry to her husband, a fact which the Kaiser has never forgiven and has lost no opportunity of taunting her with.

DOWDILY DRESSED.

"He will not spare—he never has spared—half enough to keep matters going smoothly. Wilhelm appears to think things will last forever. There's not one of our palaces decently supplied—even with napery. I'm ashamed and disgusted with it."

Again I could have heartily agreed with my mistress, for I was aware how scanty, threadbare and even darned the household linen was, and, what sordid makeshifts were constantly required to make the shabby, wornout stock suffice. And this is the imperial residence of what was then one of the richest countries in the world!

"There are a score of other things required, but can't be got. Oh, it's intolerable"—the Kaiserin broke off with bitter indignation—"that I should be subjected to these petty, undignified worries—like any common hausfraulin in a temporary suburban villa! I can't even afford to dress properly. There's not a woman about the court but is better dressed than I am. But Wilhelm seems utterly indifferent to my being shabby and dowdy, though he's not slow to observe when other women are beautifully gowned!"

A gleam stole into her eyes as she mentioned this notorious failing of her husband, and I hastily tried to divert the conversation, but the Kaiserin soon came back to her husband's insufferable stinginess.

THE WAR SCHEME.

"Matters are not likely to improve either," she said, "but may soon grow worse!" The Kaiserin lowered her voice confidentially. "Emilie, you are neither blind nor deaf—you must be aware of the plans and preparations being secretly hurried on, and that Wilhelm is on the brink of declaring war with France and Russia. Well, no doubt he will make that an excuse for still greater niggardliness towards myself and the household."

"If war comes, bigger trials than that may have to be faced," I ventured.

"Oh, don't imagine I haven't realized that!" exclaimed my mistress. "I loathe and fear this war scheme—but have no power to avert it. Heaven knows how it may end! And with all my boys in the army or navy."

The Kaiserin sighed deeply and anxiously, for, whatever her failings, she has always been a devoted mother.

"It seems a never ceasing round of troubles," she said again. "There's this latest affair of the Crown Prince—this scandal about him and that Austrian creature at Baden. Cecilie is threatening to leave him over it—she appears determined to bring public disgrace upon my son!"

MATERNAL WORRIES.

The Kaiserin's voice grew spitefully sharp and her look vixenish, as they always did when she spoke of the Crown Princess.

"I don't believe Willie is really so much to blame—he is always being misjudged and condemned without cause!"

I remained prudently silent, for had I ventured to express my own opinion of the caddish nonentity who is Crown Prince of Germany I would never have been forgiven.

"But I shall certainly speak to Willie about it—I've asked him to come and see me," resumed the Kaiserin. And just then, strangely enough, the Crown Prince himself appeared.

In his usual unmannerly fashion, the Crown Prince burst into the boudoir without knocking, and with his hat on, tilted over one eye. He gruffly and boorishly greeted his mother, and threw a surly nod in my direction before he flung himself into a chair and stretched out his thin legs.

I rose to leave, and the Kaiserin said, "Please, don't go far away, Emile. I shall want you."

I withdrew to the adjoining room, but had scarcely shut the door upon mother and son when there came the sound of a chair falling.

BATTLE OF WORDS.

Immediately after I heard the Crown Prince's voice raised in anger. It was, of course, impossible for me to catch any of his words, nor was I anxious to do so. In my position it was dangerous enough to be given painful confidences which had to be safely concealed, but it was doubly dangerous to gather what was not intended for me. And so, while aware of the unseemly battle of words going on in the boudoir, I gave my attention to what was happening in the grounds where the gardeners were at work.

In a little while I heard the Crown Prince leave his mother's presence, the rude slamming of the door proclaiming his angry frame of mind.

Then the Kaiserin opened the door and looked for me. She had wept a little, but had recovered her composure.

"It is not easy being a mother," she said sadly. "Emile, do you think that a son could mean to wound his mother? Willie hurts me here," and she pressed her bosom. "He speaks of his father with contempt. He even hints dreadful things—things which stab a wife to hear of her husband."

I spoke to her gently, indicating that the Crown Prince had been merely thoughtless. She dismissed the subject, but I could see that something which the Crown Prince had said of his father rankled in her thoughts.

A DELICATE SUBJECT.

After a little she led our talk around to Conrad von Lichtenfels, a young officer, captain in a Wurtemburg regiment, and now attached to the household. He was a reserved, manly young fellow, whom I liked.

"Didn't we hear something of his becoming engaged?" the Kaiserin asked.

I had feared that she would refer to this subject, but I replied carelessly:

"Yes. His fiancee is Paula Werther, only daughter of Otto Werther, the wealthy coal magnate."

"Ah, yes. I know her well; a very pretty girl," said the Kaiserin fidgeting nervously with her tear-stained handkerchief. "Why have they not married yet?"

I hesitated, knowing I was on delicate ground now; then I answered:

"I understand His Majesty has not yet given his assent——"

"Why?" interrupted the Kaiserin sharply.

"I don't know exactly," I hurried on, "but possibly owing to the probability of war."

The Kaiserin said no more, but looked suspicious and worried, and I observed that she was gloomily thoughtful for the rest of that morning.

VISITS PAULA WERTHER.

It had been arranged that in the afternoon we should motor into Berlin and through the spacious Thiergarten. The Kaiserin was still silent and preoccupied as the imperial car sped towards the city by the long, straight Kronprimzessin Weg, and then slowly circled the avenues of the great park.

"Emilie," she said suddenly, "we might drive back by the Friedrichs Vorstadt, and—and pay an informal call upon Fraulein Werther."

I was a little startled at the suggestion, as this revealed what had been occupying the Kaiserin's mind. We turned down the Hofjager-Allee to the Friedrichs Vorstadt, one of the finest quarters of Berlin, and the residence of its wealthiest citizens. The car swept into the handsome Regenten Strasse, ran along between its rows of trees and pulled up before the gates of Otto Werther's imposing villa.

We found Fraulein Paula at home, and alone. Her elderly aunt and chaperon had gone shopping in the city, and we learned that her father was away in Westphalia on a special business mission, undertaken at the Kaiser's request—a fact which did not strike us as significant until later.

A SLIM, FAIR GIRL.

I observed that Paula Werther, a slim, fair girl with lustrous, appealing eyes, seemed uneasy, almost alarmed at the Kaiserin's visit, and could scarcely conceal her nervousness. But the Empress—while I could see she was critically summing up Paula's appearance in every detail—was kindness itself in her manner to the girl.

Presently, in the most natural way, she began to talk of Conrad von Lichtenfels, with gracious words of praise for the young officer, and congratulations upon Paula's choice.

"And your marriage, fraulein?" the Kaiserin pursued. "May we hope very soon to hear of that happy event?"

"Oh, Your Majesty," she choked out convulsively, "I am in great trouble and perplexity! Oh, how am I to tell you?"

I felt I had better retire, but the Kaiserin, her look set and stern, stopped me with a gesture.

"No, Countess," she said, "I prefer you to stay and hear all."

A PAINFUL SCENE.

To describe the painful scene briefly, Paula Werther, with many tears and sobs and much distressed confusion, revealed that the Kaiser, whose admiration she had unfortunately attracted, had recently been paying her attentions which had led to scandalous gossip.

She spoke of the great ball held a few weeks previously in the Berlin Imperial Schloss, at which she had been a guest, telling how the Kaiser had singled her out for special notice.

"Of course, His Majesty danced with others," Paula sobbed. "But it was the way he looked, and—and what he said to me! And since, while my father has been away, he has sent me a necklet of lovely pearls and other things!

"Oh, I've been so worried and afraid," she went on. "I told Conrad everything; but he was so terribly angry that I almost wished I hadn't. I'm in constant dread of what mad, foolish thing he may say or do!"

The Kaiserin had listened, flushing and paling by turns in her deep shame and distress—and my own heart ached for my mistress. But she, nevertheless, showed herself in her best light, only speaking kind and reassuring words to the weeping girl.

KAISER'S EMISSARY.

"My dear," she said, "you did right to tell me. Yet I think you really must be mistaken—you have innocently exaggerated the Emperor's interest in you." But her tones lacked conviction. "However, don't upset yourself about it any more—and trust me to see that all obstacles to your marriage with Capt. von Lichtenfels will speedily be removed!"

As we re-entered the car another drew up at the Werthers's gate. I instantly recognized the elderly, elegantly-clad man with the lean yellow face who alighted as Prince Philip von Eulenberg, one of the Kaiser's most intimate friends—and one who, with good reason, bore a sinister reputation, having been concerned in the most notorious scandals in court history.

Von Eulenberg was evidently taken aback at sight of the Kaiserin leaving Paula Werther's home. But the Empress, who specially detested him, only returned his bow coldly, and we immediately drove off.

"That man!" the Kaiserin exclaimed as we went. "What takes him there—why should he call upon Fraulein Werther?"

She subsided into silence; but it was plain to me that the Empress was acutely disturbed, and suspicious that Von Eulenberg might be at the Werther villa as an envoy of the Kaiser.

VON LICHTENFELS.

Next day I chanced to encounter Conrad von Lichtenfels in a corridor of the Sanssouci Palace. His grave face lightened at sight of me, and he stopped.

"Countess," he said. "I want to thank you, and through you, Her Majesty, for your visit to my fiancee."

"You've seen Paula since, then, Herr Captain?" I asked.

"Yes, and she is much relieved." He pulled at his mustache in gloomy silence for a moment. "Countess, you are aware of the cause of Paula's anxiety. And so am I——!"

"Herr Captain," I interrupted, "perhaps the less said about that the better. And as a friend for your own sake, I beg you to be discreet!

"By the way," I went on, "as we left yesterday we met Prince Eulenberg arriving——"

"Ah, yes!" Von Lichtenfels frowned again. "Paula has told me. He came with a personal and pressing invitation for her and her aunt to an informal affair—a sort of reception and dance—tonight at the Villa Eulenberg, and Paula has accepted."

"But you, Herr Captain, are doubtless invited also?"

"No," he returned shortly. "In any case, I am on duty here until midnight."

I was genuinely relieved at this apparently innocent explanation of Eulenberg's call upon Paula Werther, and hastened to acquaint my mistress of it.

KAISERIN'S FEARS.

But the Kaiserin was instantly much agitated, and openly declared her suspicions.

"I don't trust that abominable man!" she cried, wringing her hands. "And I feel sure there's something—some evil—afoot!"

I tried to smile away her fears, but the conviction only grew upon her; and later she spoke more frankly still.

"The Kaiser has gone to Berlin, and may not return here tonight; he is engrossed in imperial affairs with Von Hollweg at the Wilhemstrasse. But I don't—Emile, you must do me a favor. You must go yourself to Klein-Glienicke tonight, and—and discover if my husband is not really there!"

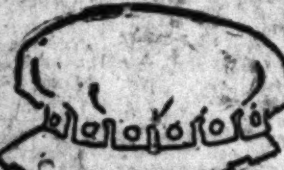
FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

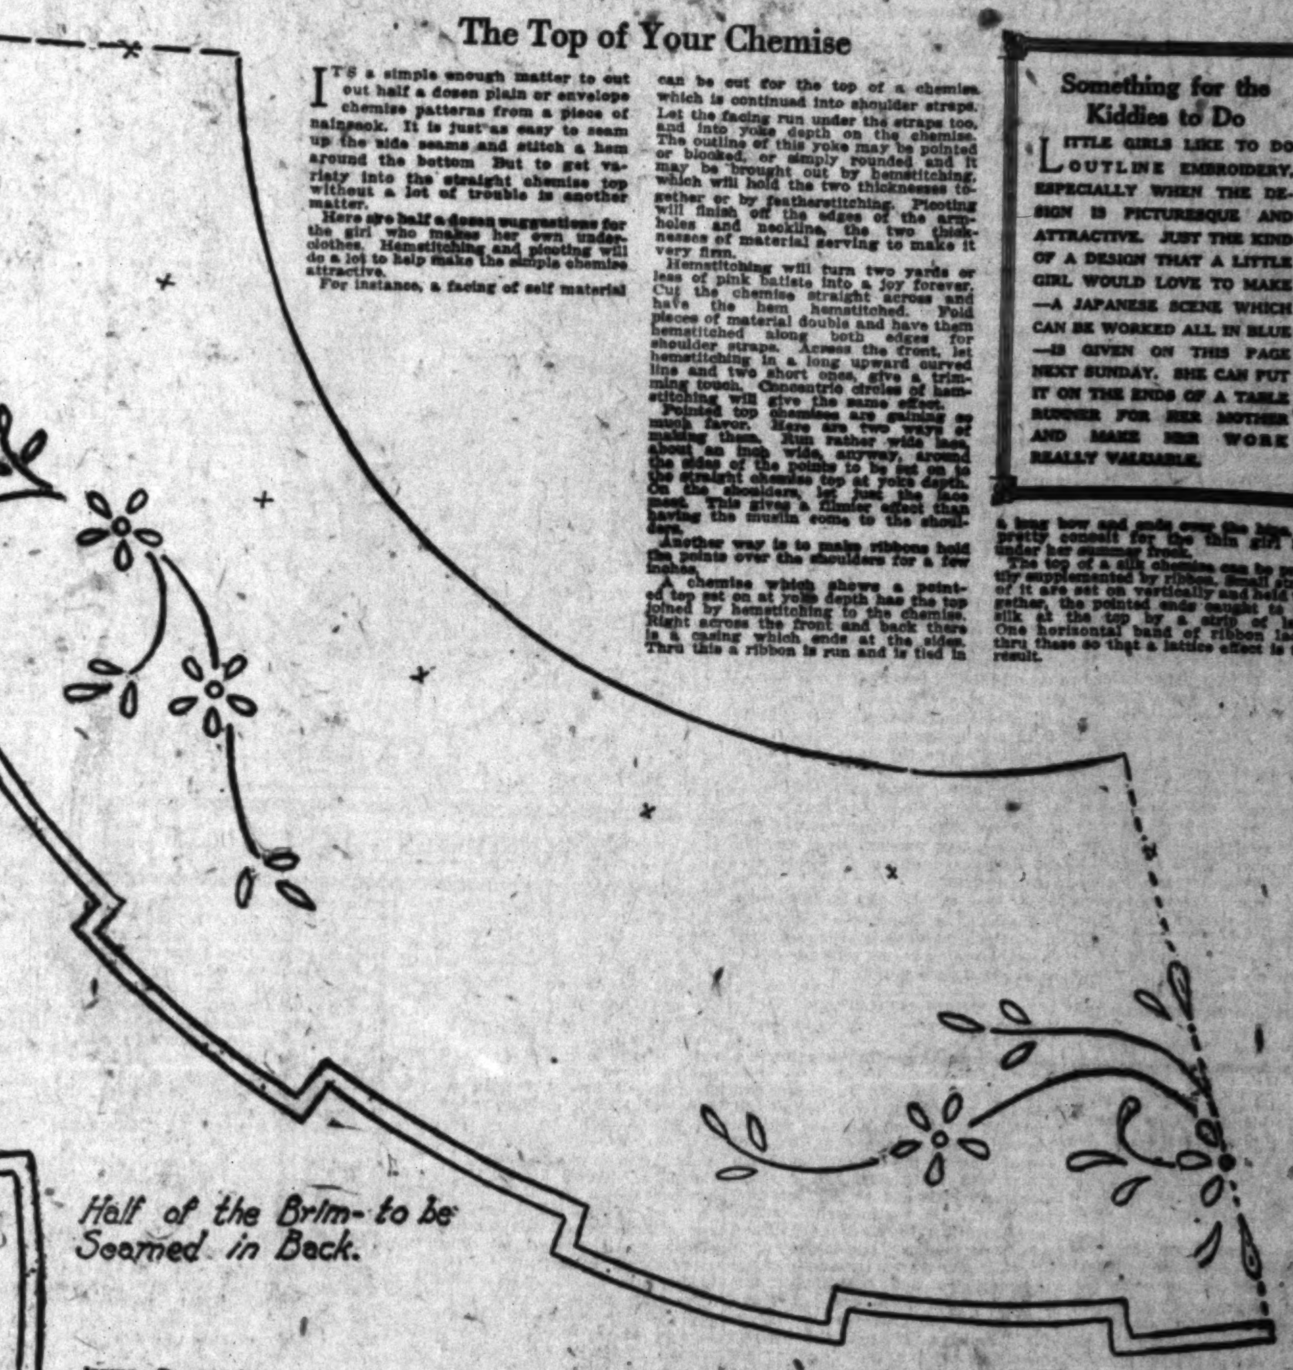
BY ADELAIDE BYRD

AN EMBROIDERED TUB HAT FOR THE KIDDIE

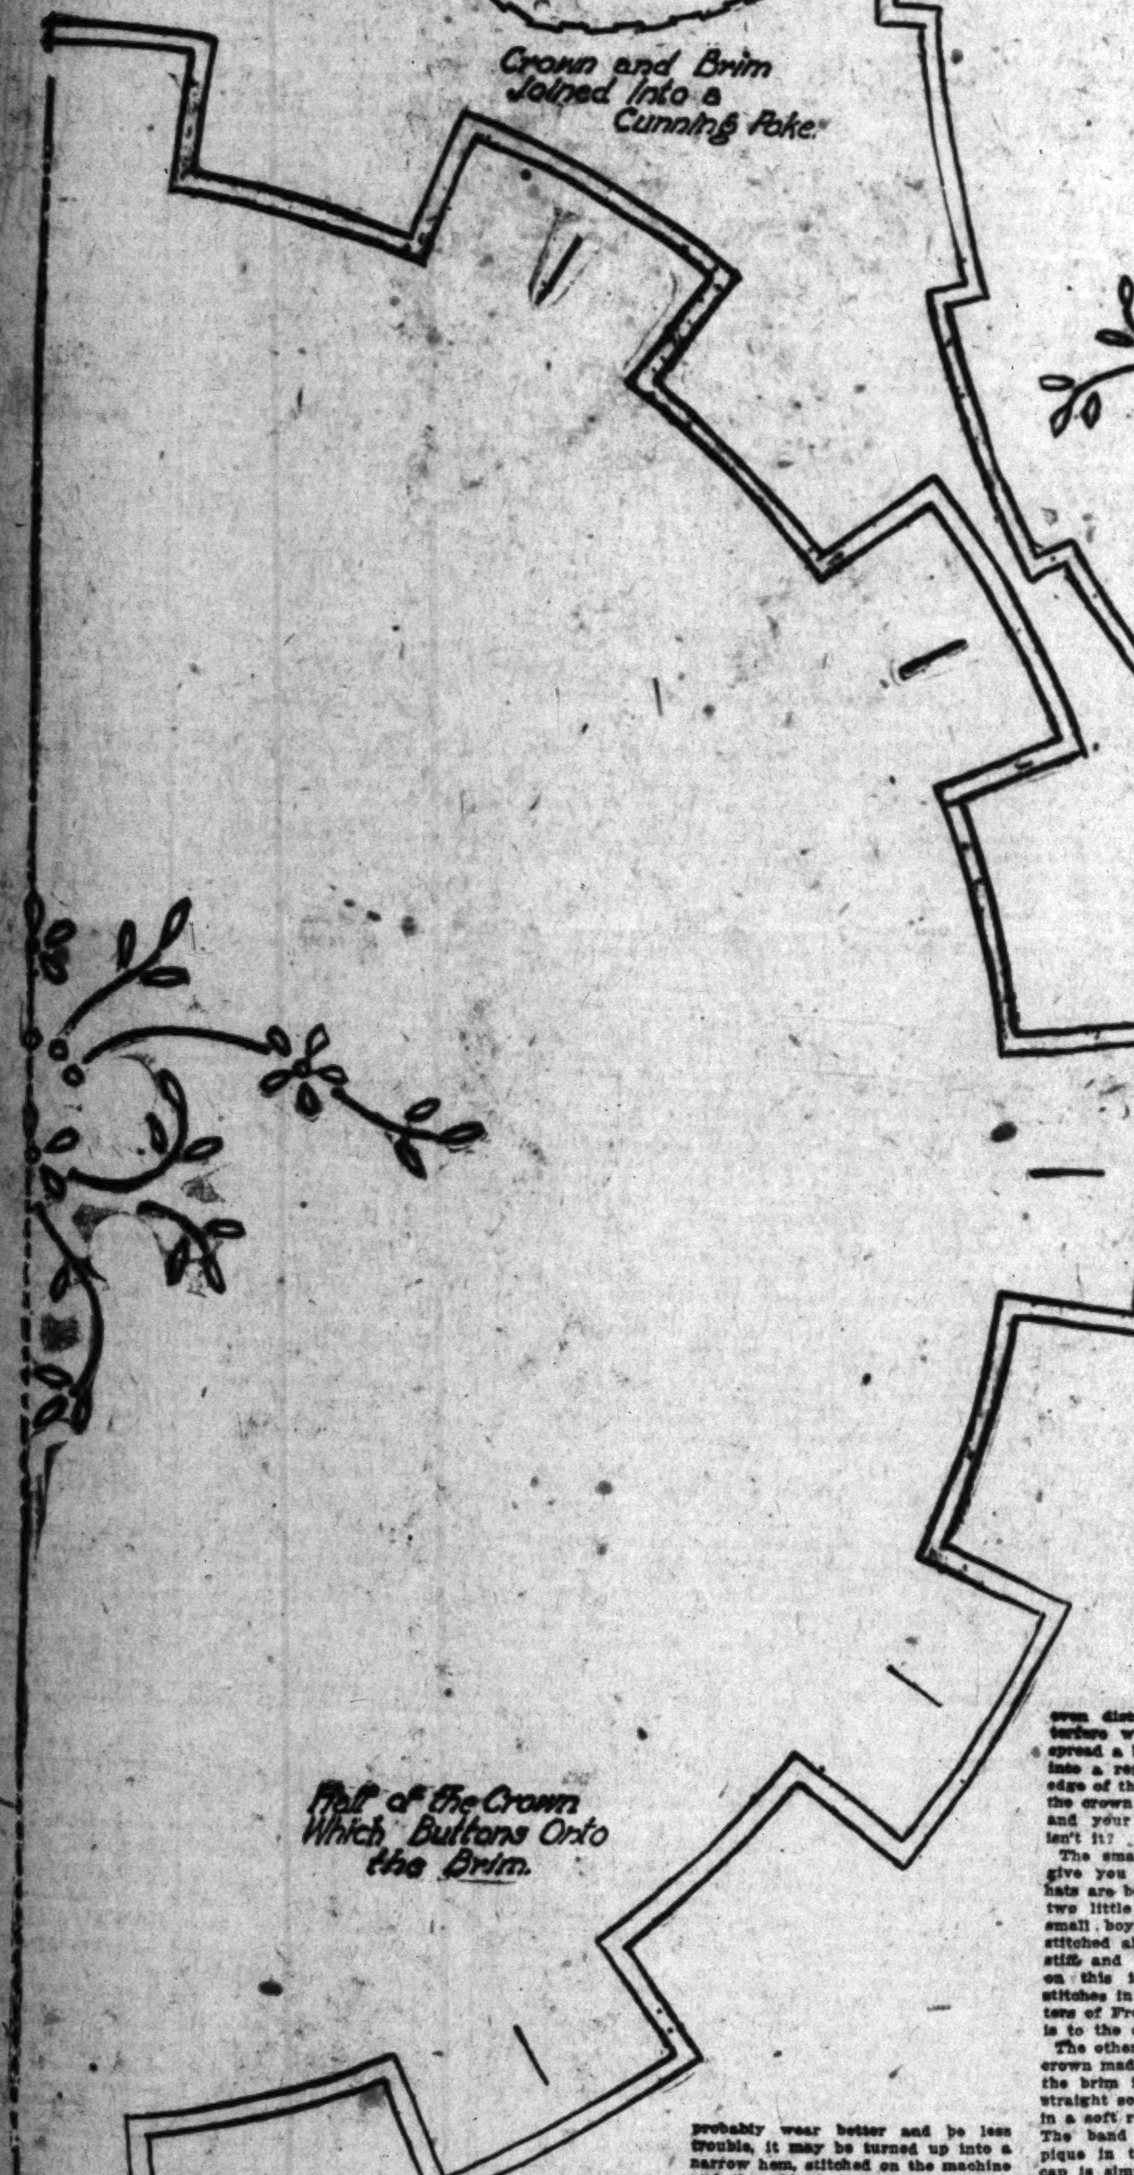
DESIGNED BY ELIZEBETH MILLER.



Crown and Brim Joined Into a Cunning Poke.



Half of the Brim—to be Seamed in Back.



Half of the Crown Which Buttons Onto the Brim.

The mother of every tiny tot who has outgrown her baby bonnet feels the need of some sort of head covering that will not be too old and will provide a brim to shade the baby eyes from the sun. Dressing the growing baby is always a puzzling problem, but here is part of it solved by a bonnet with a poked brim that will be just the thing for the two-year-old or the toddler of 3 or 4. It can be enlarged as will be seen later.

Materials are many for the summer bonnet, but linen and pique lead. Cotton poplin or rep, cotton gabardine and any of the heavier cottons will all do, but if handwork is to be put on the bonnet then it surely pays to buy a better material. Pique because of its laundering qualities is probably the best choice. The bonnet may be worked in all-white, and for the very little tot this is perhaps best, or it can be worked in one color, a delf blue, for instance. The stitches are simple, outlining for the stems, satin stitch for the filled-in leaves and petals and eyelets for the centers of the flowers. To save time lazy-daisy stitches may be substituted for the padded flowers.

The edge may be button-holed closely and then trimmed or, what will probably wear better and be less trouble, it may be turned up into a narrow hem, stitched on the machine and then blanket-stitched as in the small puffed-crown bonnet photographed. The square scallops will be a bit tedious to treat this way, but not hard, once you have mastered the trick of slitting the hem a bit at the corners.

And now for the making of the bonnet. You will have seen by this time that only half of the tam crown and half of the brim are given. Space would not allow of the whole thing being printed. But it will be easy enough to supply the other halves of both brim and crown by folding the carbon and the material when stamping and making the whole imprint with one tracing from the design.

As the design stands it will fit the average 2-year-old. To enlarge it add to the back of the brim where the dotted line is shorter. This is where the brim seams up. It might be well to make a large allowance on this seam, anyway, so that it can be let out as the little head grows larger. Be sure to add the same amount of material on each side of the seam, and finish out the square scallops so they will catch as nearly as possible.

These slits in the tabs of the round crown are to be worked in regular buttonholes or eyelets. The buttonholes will prove stronger, however. They will button over tiny pearl or white crocheted buttons sewed at the crosses indicated on the brim. If the brim is enlarged move the dozen buttons around so that they fall at even distances. This will not interfere with the crown, as it will spread a bit more instead of puffing into a regular tam. Finish off the edge of the brim on the inside under the crown with a bias band of lawn and your hat is finished. Simple, isn't it?

The small hats photographed will give you an idea of how kiddies' hats are being treated this year. The two little stiff models are for the small boy. One is a heavy crash stitched along the brim to make it stiff and practical. The handwork on this is negligible, long single stitches in different colors with centers of French knots being all there is to the decoration.

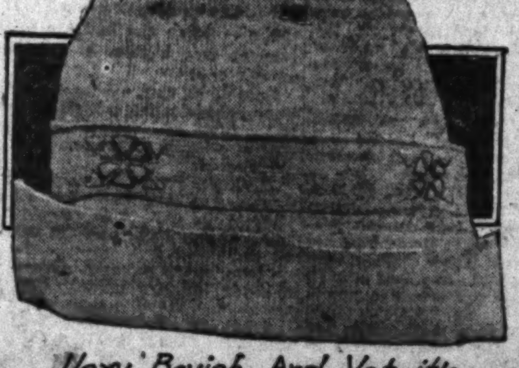
The other little hat is of pique, the crown made in four pointed sections, the brim is double and cut almost straight so that it can be turned up in a soft roll. The band of pique in this cap is simply embroidered in blue and white.

Something on the order of the hat for which the design is given is the little blanket-stitched model. The buttonholes which fasten the crown to the brim occur here in the eight points into which the hat is cut.

Always starch these hats just a bit in laundering to keep them in shape.

Just the Thing for Buster.

Another "Iron-Out-Flat" Model.



Very Boyish, And Yet it's Embroidered.

The Top of Your Chemise

It's a simple enough matter to cut out half a dozen plain or envelope chemise patterns from a piece of nainsook. It is just as easy to seam up the side seams and stitch a hem around the bottom. But to get variety into the straight chemise top without a lot of trouble is another matter.

Here are half a dozen suggestions for the girl who makes her own underclothes. Hemstitching and picoting will do a lot to help make the simple chemise attractive.

For instance, a facing of self material can be cut for the top of a chemise which is continued into shoulder straps. Let the facing run under the straps too, and into yoke depth on the chemise. The outline of this yoke may be pointed or blocked, or simply rounded and it may be brought out by hemstitching, which will hold the two thicknesses together or by featherstitching. Picoting will finish off the edges of the armholes and neckline, the two thicknesses of material serving to make it very firm.

Hemstitching will turn two yards or less of pink batiste into a joy forever. Cut the chemise straight across and have the hem hemstitched. Fold pieces of material double and have them hemstitched along both edges for shoulder straps. Across the front, let hemstitching in a long upward curved line and two short ones, give a trimming touch. Concentric circles of hemstitching will give the same effect.

Pointed top chemises are gaining so much favor. Here are two ways of making them. Run rather wide lace, about an inch wide, anyway, around the sides of the points to be set on to the straight chemise top at yoke depth. On the shoulders, let just the lace meet. This gives a filmier effect than having the muslin come to the shoulders.

Another way is to make ribbons hold the points over the shoulders for a few inches.

A chemise which shows a pointed top set on at yoke depth has the top joined by hemstitching to the chemise. Right across the front and back there is a casing which ends at the sides. Thru this a ribbon is run and is tied in a long bow and ends over the hips. A pretty conceit for the thin girl for under her summer frock.

The top of a silk chemise can be prettily supplemented by ribbon. Small strips of it are set on vertically and held together, the pointed ends caught to the silk at the top by a strip of lace. One horizontal band of ribbon laces thru these so that a lattice effect is the result.

Something for the Kiddies to Do

LITTLE GIRLS LIKE TO DO OUTLINE EMBROIDERY, ESPECIALLY WHEN THE DESIGN IS PICTURESQUE AND ATTRACTIVE. JUST THE KIND OF A DESIGN THAT A LITTLE GIRL WOULD LOVE TO MAKE—A JAPANESE SCENE WHICH CAN BE WORKED ALL IN BLUE—IS GIVEN ON THIS PAGE NEXT SUNDAY. SHE CAN PUT IT ON THE ENDS OF A TABLE RUNNER FOR HER MOTHER AND MAKE HER WORK REALLY VALUABLE.

Stitch and Penny Savers

Runners in stockings very often come because the stocking is too tight over the knee. Either get out-sizes or else split the back seam of the hose and insert a V-shaped piece cut from an old stocking. Another thing to prevent runners is to run a line of close machine stitching around the top of the stocking just below the garter line.

Old woolen underwear is too precious to be thrown into the piece bag now for polishing cloths. Instead, the better parts should be saved. They will make interlining for winter coats next year, or in the case of larger garments, can be turned into shirts for the children. One woman whose husband does not like long sleeves in his undershirt, cuts off the sleeves and turns them into soft shirts for the baby.

Don't let a hole in the sweater go because you cannot match the yarn to mend it. Rip off a pocket or ravel out the sash for a few inches. When you do darn it, use a crochet hook and imitate as nearly as possible the knitting stitch when you fill up the hole.

Table cloths always wear along the edges and along the folds. To give them an extra length of life, cut an inch or so off one end and one side when they begin to wear. This makes the folds come in a different place and the wear from the table edges also falls in a different line.

The hardest part of making children's underclothes at home is apt to be the buttonholes. Now either buy the buttonholing by the yard for bands and fastenings or else work the bands yourself from extra muslin so they will outlast several sets of garments. If they are sewn on with a large machine stitch they can easily be ripped from an old garment and placed on a new one. Buttons sewed on separate strips are time-savers, too.

Cover the Telephone Book

Why not? There is no particular reason why the phone book should be out of the scheme when the right cover can happily bring it in. Three-quarters of a yard of eighteen-inch material plus two pieces of stiff cardboard just a bit wider than the width of the book itself, some library paste, a cord and a tassel will be quite all you will need.

After allowing for turn-ins of perhaps half an inch place the cardboard on the single length of material about an inch and three-quarters apart or far enough to leave space for opening and closing the book with ease. The cord is strung thru a tiny hole at top center of the middle and the tassel left to hang free, thus making an attractive marker and finish at the same time.

Some First Principles of Hand Sewing

It is truly surprising how many people there are who sew without the A B C's of the trade, and this refers mostly to handwork. Now to the experienced sewer, it may seem absurd to give detailed information on stroking gathers, for instance, to any one who can handle a needle at all. Yet there is quite a bit of gathering done with never even a thought about stroking. Hence the following:

This is the way to stroke your gathers, if you would have them make a good appearance. After you have run in your gathering thread, let it go. Then holding the material between the thumb and forefinger of your left hand take your needle and stroke it down vertically between the gathers. The object is to fix the gathers evenly side by side. Then push each under your left thumb so as to keep it in place, meanwhile supporting the material at the back with your other fingers.

Nor does every home sewer know the correct way to sew gathers on to a band or to plain material. First of all, you must distribute the fullness equally. Divide the gathered part of the material and the band or plain stuff to which it is to be attached into equal portions, and pin the two together at corresponding distances, the gathered part under the plain; then hem each gather to the band, sloping the needle to make the thread slant, and slipping it thru the upper threads of the gathers only.

Nor might it be one bit amiss to suggest the all-importance of pressing. As a matter of fact, no garment can be considered to have finish without a thoro pressing. Seams should be done as soon as they are completed, and gathers, too, if you would avoid the sticky-out look.

The Times Literary Page Books and Their Makers

CONDUCTED BY GORDON RAY YOUNG

REBECCA WEST, CRITIC, WRITES HER FIRST NOVEL.

"The Return of the Soldier."

REBECCA WEST is a name not unknown in America, particularly among the Seekers after Truth that read The New Republic wherein her literary opinions are frequently found; but in London she has more of a reputation, being ever ready for a fight and with plenty of quills in her quiver. It is said that Rebecca West is not the name she was born into, that few know who she really is. There are always the curious who are unhappy until they have nosed out the personal affairs of such people as write, so some day we may have details about her.

It is interesting to have the maiden who has damned so many books write one of her own. It seems to be a fate that all critics come by; the cobbler will insist on painting pictures. "The Return of the Soldier" (The Century Company) is her first novel, not a big book in size or otherwise, but one that is very well done, unique in theme, and convincingly emphasizing a phase of psychoanalysis (not Freudian) that should be of special interest. As might be expected, there is nothing trivial about it; Rebecca West is inclined to intensity at all times, and though the beginning of the story is more or less conventional, there are many brilliant sparks flying upward from the text as it approaches the close. The caustic bitterness, never more than a phrase, released against the dainty, selfish, patrician Kitty, whose portrait with seeming lack of effort is effectively drawn, reveals that the author probably had a class, rather than a type, in mind.

Christopher Baldry, an English officer, returns from the war suffering a lapse of memory. He comes again to his great estate, to his pretty wife and sister, who relates the story, unable to remember anything during the past ten or twelve years, including his marriage. His wife is a stranger; he remembers one Margaret Allington, now a Mrs. Grey, the daughter of a tavern keeper, who has grown blousy and shabby, cheap and common in appearance; and he says that if he cannot see her he will die.

Mrs. Grey comes. Most amazingly, Capt. Baldry does not notice how changed in appearance she is, and he is happy and contented as a child with her. To his sister Capt. Baldry confides the idyllic courtship of his and Margaret's younger days; and it is those days that he remembers and cherishes. Kitty is a stranger in his house; he is courteous, but unimpressed.

Physicians come from far and wide, question, advise and depart. Capt. Baldry remains the same.

Gradually as the story advances, one comes to understand and to appreciate Mrs. Grey, even as the sister does; and at last it is no surprise to find that a very famous psychoanalyst talks to her in the relieved tone of one who has met an equal. And against both the physician's judgment and Mrs. Grey's inmost wish, the cord in Capt. Baldry's brain is touched that restores—not harmony; no—but memory.

There is in these days very acceptable scientific ground for Rebecca West's conception; and though some abbreviation might not have impaired certain pasts, there is in others a remarkable condensation of narrative, and—at least, for me—not once does an incongruous note slip in nor plausibility recede. "The Return of the Soldier" is a strange though withal a quite simple story; amazingly forceful without ever a sign of force, or of straining, scarcely of effort. One is likely to close the little book with a feeling of being baffled, of disappointment; then in reflection it seems to fall into an artistic perspective, and one begins to appreciate that Rebecca West has given something new and penetrating.

"His Job."

Horace Bleackley's "His Job" (John Lane Company,) a sober and serious story, has the elements that are almost uniformly lamented by the earnest critics as being absent from current books. And though the book has been out for many weeks, I haven't encountered any huzzahs from the lugubrious tribe of reviewers who pretend to be pining away for want of just such material as Mr. Bleackley's publisher has presented to them.

First, of course, it is very well written throughout. It is realistic—in the true sense. It is implacably true to life as the author has visualized the life of Ronald Egerton, the youngest of the house of Egerton, which has built up a large dye works not far from Manchester. There is nothing sordid, nothing sensual, no red "slices of life;" the opposite entirely. And if there is no "happiness" there is no morbidity; and no action; the sort of book that bores the lugubrious tribe that is so uniformly contemptuous of exciting, the-true-course-of-love fiction. Yet what else gets the most attention? And the detailed castigation reveals how carefully and with what unbored attention Mr. McGrath, Mr. Vance, Mr. Roche, are read.

There is not a great deal to tell of the story's plot. It has one, personified by Maggie. Maggie is the daughter of the dye works manager, and Ronald's love for her is returned in full. But for once the pride of the common people is greater than that of the high caste; the marriage is most severely opposed by Maggie's father, who says the people in the works would look down on him if he allowed her to marry the owner's son. In the rivalry between Ronald and Lord Harry there is something of narrative suspense, and a solution that will surprise and perhaps delight those who admire what may be called real courage in an author. The story moves to its conclusion by emphasizing the manner in which Ronald has grasped the business of his fathers and his determination to hold on to it though seductive financial offers would make him, at a youthful age, independent for life. But he hangs on. It is "his job" to stand by the works (incidentally a detailed and entertaining description of the works is given,) and he does.

"Vicky Van."

Carolyn Wells, writer of humorous verse, compiler of humorous anthologies, continues in the footsteps of A. Conan Doyle; and though her detective novels have seemed rather conventional, machine-made affairs, she does something much better than usual with "Vicky Van" (J. B. Lippincott Company.) Of course she dallies with the highly improbable, if not the impossible; but as long as the suspense is maintained and the solution fairly tolerable, one may forgive other things.

Fleming Stone, the veteran detective, and his assistant, the kid Fibsy, are called in to clear up the mysterious identity of Victoria Van Allen, in whose home the millionaire, Randolph Schuyler (and also next-door neighbor) has been murdered. Vicky Van a is lively, beautiful young woman who gives pleasant parties and admits no married men. But Schuyler gets in under another name. He is seen dead on the floor and Vicky Van beside him, holding a blood-stained knife. Then she disappears as if by magic. More than that, while the whole city is being combed for her she again appears near and in the house, but efforts to locate her are frustrated.

But then nothing can permanently baffle Fleming Stone and Fibsy, and at last the mystery is revealed, and the explanation seems very adequately to justify the murder.

"INSPIRATIONAL."

LIGHTED WINDOWS. By Frank Crane. John Lane Company, New York.

Dr. Frank Crane in an exhortive mood again arises to stir the sluggish heart. When it comes to punchy preaching, this emotional moralist stands on a soap box by himself. To change the figure of speech, he is the strong man juggling with platitudes, giving them dazzling whirls and setting the mob agape. "What a wonderful mother is Nature!" "In all mortal affairs you have to make allowance." "Of all gifts of nature to man the most blessed, rich and beautiful is sunshine." "The dead are not those who lie in the graveyard." "'Invictus,'" he says, "is one of the greatest poems in any language." (Why not Henley's Hospital Poems?) Such are the texts with which the Rev. Dr. Crane begins his sermons.

Having a bit of interest in "greatest poem," I inquired deeply into Dr. Crane's blurb, to learn that: "I give first rank to Henley's poem because, first, of the importance of its message."

So I take it that Dr. Crane thinks salvation, food conservation, morality and other things of importance, if preached in verse, would be great poems. Proceeding further, it may be learned that "After all, any piece of literature stands or falls by its thought contents, by its inspirational power," which is vague enough to be out of Rabindranath Tagore. "Thought contents" and "inspirational power" may mean anything; and things that may mean anything, mean nothing. By Dr. Crane's critical standards one has as good, if not better, grounds to argue that "The Blessed Damozel" is a greater poem than "Invictus;" and it is.

But Dr. Crane does no harm, and I understand that his testimonial letters number into the hundreds from people whom he has helped; so anybody that feels he or she can be helped by emotional platitudes should hie to the bookstalls with $1.25 tightly clutched in the fist.

A TRUE WAR STORY.

Two men who are resting in a dugout to escape the heavy shelling of the enemy, for a few minutes cannot see each other in the blackness, but with that spirit of "camaraderie" so common out there, although they are total strangers, begin to chat. After exchanging the numbers of their battalions, which happen to be both Canadian and in the same brigade, one says:

"But you're not a Johnny Canuck; you talk like an Englishman."

"That may be; I was born in England. But I am a Canadian. I've been out there for seventeen years," the other returned a little proudly.

"Indeed! I was in Canada only three years. W'ere'd you come from in old England?"

"Faversham, Kent."

"Faversham! Well, I'm blowed! That's my 'ome. What the 'ell's yer name?"

"Reggie Roberts."

"W'l, blime me, I'm your brother Bill!" Affectionate greeting followed, then explanations: The elder brother had gone out to Alberta seventeen years before while the younger was still at school. Correspondence had stopped, as it often does with men. Fourteen years later the other boy went out to Ontario. When the war broke out, they both enlisted but in different regiments, and they met after seventeen years' separation in the dark entrance to a dugout."—[Told by Capt. R. J. Manion, in his book, "A Surgeon in Arms" (Appleton,) a story of a medical officer's thrilling experiences in the war.

Arnold Bennett.

"BEYOND ARCHITECTURE."

BEYOND ARCHITECTURE. By A. Kingsley Porter. Marshall Jones & Co. Boston.

Mr. Porter writes of architecture as a means of expressing certain esthetic ideals and observations; and though early in the book, while discrediting the grandeur that was Rome, the architectural beauty and value of her buildings, he says that though in matters of taste "there is no absolute proof to which we can have recourse," yet "for the lover of art his esthetic creed is, perhaps, the most deeply rooted part of his inner being." He is sure that the charm which now invests the Baths of Caracalla or the ruins of Palatine were never dreamed of by the builders. "The picturesque masses, the colors, are the work of time—the most clever of artists. A flash of beauty here and there he grants, but "one feels intuitively that the builders cared little for the selfish Caesars in whose honor they created triumphal arches and palaces; that they cared little for the populace to shelter whom they built unending colonnades on the streets and forums, and least of all for the temples to strange, cold gods."

Looking backward and forward, he believes the greatest architectural—perhaps the greatest artistic—age known was that of the era just preceding the Renaissance. The great Gothic cathedrals, with their unfathomable variations, their logic for every portion, their utility for every gargoyle and picture, the extreme symbolism revealing new beauties at every thoughtful glance, are, in his opinion, the most perfect works of art ever raised.

The age that produced such art—now being laid in ruins by the brutish Hun—was the age of poverty, chastity and obedience. Material things were spurned; men sought dialectics and beauty, not fleshpots. "To the medieval mind, reality was but a symbol of unreality, matter but a reflection of the immaterial. Our earth became but the shadow of heaven." And as our age is the age of the individual, when each man who does a thing wishes credit for all time blazoned below his name, so the age that produced the Gothic cathedrals was one of the community. "Thus all medieval labor was bent toward the same end. The work was everything, the worker nothing. We know the names of but few artists of the Middle Ages. These men who created such idyllic beauty had apparently little desire for personal glory."

Mr. Poster expresses the generally realized esthetic principle that "works of art are great in measure as they possess the quality of inexhaustibility. The obvious may captivate at first glance, but is incapable of bestowing an abiding satisfaction. Close and continued familiarity will, except with shallow natures, inevitably breed contempt for the meretricious. In art, as in all else, we take out as we put in. That which forces itself upon us, the pleasure which we acquire without expense or effort, will not endure. Here perhaps lies the final proof of the worth of medieval art. For no other style requires as great preparation on the part of him who would enjoy; nor is there any which extends such rich rewards to the happy initiate."

The very comforts and conveniences of which this age boasts as indications of civilization, all the mechanical devices, steam, electricity and factories, raise in Mr. Porter's mind the grave doubt that we have purchased them without the irremedial loss of something of even greater value: the sensitive appreciation of art. He considers this, architecturally especially, about the worst of all ages; and America as the least enlightened country, filled with monuments of marble ornamented with dodads.

The longest curse from this war upon the Germans will, he believes, be called by posterity upon their heads for the destruction of art. It is pointed out that time so changes and alters racial bitterness that we scarcely recall the names of the hordes that overran Greece and Rome, but succeeding generations have never ceased to lament the loss to art. And the Germans, by taking from the world many of its most precious possessions, can never lift their names above opprobrium. They are down in history for all time as Huns.

Mr. Porter has hope for the future, though a very tiny flame of hope. He believes studies in art appreciation should begin with the very young and be continued; and yet "in the olden times the race got along very well without instruction in the appreciation of art. Ancient Greece was not absolutely without its critics, but it is hardly open to doubt that the Athenians studied their masterpieces with such assiduity as we of today bring to the same works. Yet their instinctive enjoyment was more valuable than our conscious and somewhat labored appreciation. The people of the thirteenth century in France must have brought to the Gothic cathedral, without any instruction, a feeling for its beauty and an intelligent comprehension of its content which a two-hour course would be quite inadequate to give even the most intelligent modern collegian. The appreciation of art, which was a natural heritage in the past, the present generation can acquire only by conscious effort.

"The same thing has happened with literature. The English of the time of Elizabeth doubtless enjoyed and to a certain extent appreciated Shakespeare's plays without being taught them. Today in our schools and colleges we find it necessary to teach Shakespeare. If we did not, the great majority of our students would never rise to sufficient intellectual heights to appreciate the plays, and the literary culture of the race would thereby be impaired.

". . . . It is evident that the character of an art depends primarily and fundamentally upon the character of the people who produce that art. No genius, however exalted, could have built the Cathedral of Rheims in the Florence of the fifteenth century. Had Michaelangelo lived in the age of Giotto he would undoubtedly have painted great things, but not the works he did actually create. No man can avoid the spirit of his time. It is necessarily the environment which creates art. To educate artists, therefore, is not sufficient. It is even more vital to create sympathetic and stimulating surroundings for the artist. Failure to perceive this fact, it cannot be too solemnly emphasized, is the fundamental fault with existing conditions in America."

Tough on Norah.

Norah was a new servant girl in the employ of the Browns, and hardly had she been twenty-four hours on the job before she had the misfortune to drop a piece of roast beef on the floor.

Roast beef that has been used as a mop becomes just a little bit gritty to the taste, so Norah thought it the part of wisdom to consign it to the garbage can.

"I think, Norah," remarked Mrs. Brown, rambling into the kitchen later in the day, "that we will have some of that roast beef cut cold for supper."

"Sure, an' Oi'm sorry, ma'am," responded Norah, contritely, "but the cat got it when Oi wasn't lookin'."

"The cat got it!" exclaimed the mistress. "What cat?"

"Jay whizz, mh'am!" rejoined Norah, considerably concerned. "Ain't there no cat?"—[Philadelphia Bulletin.

"CABINET OF JADE."

A CABINET OF JADE. By David O'Neil. The Four Seas Company, Boston.

I really have no desire to prejudice anyone against this tiny volume of vers libre, but I must quote Mr. William Stanley Braithwaite's comment on it: "Giving expression to nothing but what is essential in quiet and harmonious flexibility of speech, bearing upon its frail surface phrases of profound potency, these poems have a very real and distinctive interest in our poetic renaissance."

The value of such comment is wholly minimized by the fact that out of the inexhaustible depths of his charity Mr. Braithwaite manages to say something of the kind for almost every book of verse that is issued. It is one of the enviable distinctions of Mr. Braithwaite that he can with evident facility write as though saying something of importance; and since it is true that he has written more words of praise for the poets of this day than all other critics combined, we may pardon his verbosity in view of his determination to maintain that unique though quite senseless record.

But to come to Mr. O'Neil. I suppose I am not sensitive enough fully to appreciate impressionism via free verse. I find these poems not without interest and a certain charm, but their carefully-fashioned fragmentary character does not satisfy. Mr. O'Neil has, I fancy, tried to suggest, to give the reader's mind an impetus, and has felt sure that those to whom he wished to appeal would understand and that who did not understand would be those to whom he did not wish to appeal.

Take "Marionettes" for instance:

In the doorway
Of a vacant store,
A toyman was listlessly dancing
Painted toys
On an invisible string;
And crowds were listlessly passing,
Puppets of Life's invisible
"Why."

That, I think, is illustrative of Mr. O'Neil's more vivid and finished conceptions. Of course it is patently superficial; the whole idea is exhausted at a glance, but among the trinkets of poetic art with which vera librists are entertaining themselves, having repudiated rondels and quatrains, "Marionettes" and others of "The Cabinet of Jade" have a place of passing interest. Mr. O'Neil does what many, a great many, others are doing and does it better than some. "Enslaved" is another that shows a skill at suggestiveness:

With his millions
Came gold handcuffs
Wrought by millions
While he slept;
And when he awakened
He felt them bind.
And the crowd
Envied
Gold bracelets.

My only personal objection to this sort of thing is due to the inclination of many people to take it seriously, to consider it as something of "profound potency," and to think that real poetic ability devoted to these trifles is finding its highest or even a high expression.

I choose to quote a few more of them, running them into the prose form, which certainly doesn't impair their value and saves space:

"First Love:" At the window she watches, Down the lane, His coming shadow. Like a quiet pool Flecked by the wind, Her heart quivers."

"Tramping:" Home was where night found us. The gypsy spirit Thatched our hearts against the homeless winds Of the plains—The yawning distances Of the plains! And at nightfall The camp fire Drew the horizon Close around And home was where night found us.

"The New Dawn:" You may withhold her freedom As the clouds and rain Hold back the dawn; But the east quickens in her eyes, And in her heart Awakens an ecstasy of longing For the day."

So it may be seen, particularly in "Tramping," that these are pretty little conceptions, sometimes touched with allegory, as "The New Dawn;" and, of their kind, entitling Mr. O'Neil a modicum of attention.

DUTY AND HONOR.

A GENERAL'S LETTERS TO HIS SON. Preface by Gen. H. S. Smith-Dorien. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

It is not easy to write about these letters because they have the dignity and spirit of fatherly intimacy, and it seems almost a personal matter between the unknown author of them and his son; yet, as Gen. Smith-Dorien has said, they "give all necessary information, and if young officers will only study them carefully and shape their conduct accordingly, they need have no fear of proving unworthy."

The very highest kind of manhood is held up for the model. Briefly, the father says: "Play the game, not for yourself but for your side; look after your men, you belong to them, not they to you; be a gentleman, touch drink if at all ever so lightly, and when it comes to the point of death, die unafraid."

But the language in which this is written is rich with simplicity; of all the literary wealth of the world, that of the utterly simple and direct is in the fewest hands. There is nothing of the dictatorial, nothing of the parochial in these letters, an elder friend speaks to a younger. The warmth of tone is tempered by a stern regard for Duty, not military duty alone, but the Duty of downright manhood, of elemental virtues in all respects of life.

The author is evidently a graduate of the old school; he speaks with allowable pride of the fact that officers commissioned in the British army are not required to take an oath of allegiance, as they are presupposed to be such gentlemen of loyalty and gallantry as make the need of an oath vanish; and his guidance in these letters is toward the practical ideal of the utmost loyalty and gallantry.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

Prize Dramas.

The prize plays in the patriotic play contest of the Drama League of America have just been published in book form by Samuel French (25 cents each.) These two plays were written especially for production by amateurs, in schools, clubs, Red Cross societies and the like throughout the country, in order to stimulate interest and enthusiasm in the national ideal of patriotic service.

"Rise Up Jennie, Jennie Smith," a play in one act by Rachael L. Field, is a stirring appeal, addressed to people of small means, and shows in a touching and thrilling manner how a poor little dressmaker's assistant gives all her savings in order to buy a Liberty Bond.

"The Land Where Lost Things Go," a play in three acts and a prologue, by Doris Halmon, is the story of a young man whose parents are pacifists. In a dream he sees the heroic deeds of his ancestors in the Revolution and the Civil War, and finally meets his brother who has been killed in the aviation service during the present war. He awakens with a true sense of the magnificent opportunity America offers him today, and dedicates his life to the service of his country.

By special arrangement these plays are offered to all amateurs free of royalty.

Mrs. Rinehart's "Creed."

When Mary Roberts Rinehart and her family went through Glacier Park and across the Cascade Mountains on horseback, the party stopped one day at Kalispell in Montana. Mrs. Rinehart wore an old felt hat, much the worse for weather and fish hooks. Sitting her horse, she was surveying the hat ruefully while she purchased a new one—"a cowgirl affair" she calls it. "Suddenly," she says, "a gentleman I had never seen before but who is green in my memory, stepped forward and presented me with his own hat band. It was of leather, and it bore this vigorous and inspiring inscription: 'Give 'er pep and let 'er buck!'" In "Tenting Tonight," Mrs. Rinehart's new book just published by Houghton Mifflin Company, she tells the story of the hat band, and adds: "Today, when I am low in my mind, I take that cowgirl hat from its retreat and read its inscription: 'Give 'er pep and let 'er buck!' It is a whole creed!"

Poetry Anthology.

Small, Maynard & Co., Boston, announce the publication of Mr. Braithwaite's "Anthology of Magazine Verse for 1918," which is the sixth volume in Mr. Braithwaite's series of Anthologies. The best of the shorter, lyrical poems produced during 1918 have been chosen, proving that in spite of the realistic method and expressions, the spontaneous, singing note has not departed from American verse. The 1918 Anthology not only reflects the ascending achievement of American verse, but is notable as a record of the sane and traditional evolution of American poetry.

Mad Monk's Manuscript.

In his recently published autobiography, "The Mad Monk of Russia—Iliodor," the famous accuser of Rasputin and the Russian court, tells how he dispatched to Petrograd from his place of exile in Norway, shortly after the war began, the manuscript of his book of revelations: "I communicated with my friend, Prugavin, asking if he could not find some one in Russia who would take up its publication. He asked me to send him one copy of my manuscript. For this purpose I succeeded in communicating with some of my faithful in Tsaritzin, and they procured some paper like the lining of my trunk. I spread the pages of my manuscript all over the bottom of the trunk, pasted the new paper over them, and sent it off. On the Finnish border the trunk underwent a very severe search, but, fortunately, the secrets it contained were not discovered. A few days later I received a telegram from Prugavin, 'Mother dear has safely arrived.' Owing to this, my book containing the revelations of Rasputin saw the light during the first days of the Russian revolution."

"Cook-Book of Left-Overs."

Last week a letter from an Englishwoman, concerning the "Cook-Book of Left-Overs," fell into the hands of Harper & Brothers. It ran: "In 1914 I got a copy of 'Harper's Cook-Book of Left-Overs' from Brentano's for a friend of mine in Johannesburg, South Africa. He wrote me it was of the greatest value to him and that his cook had made full use of it." Owing to the demands of war-time housekeepers the "Cook-Book of Left-Overs" has been put to press for a large printing.

"The Ship of Death."

Bretano's make the important announcement of the publication in the course of the next two weeks of Dr. Edward Stilgebauer's new novel entitled "The Ship of Death."

This novel, founded on the Lusitania tragedy, is said to be a book to make one pause. If ever a book had a message this book has it.

As in his "Love's Inferno," the author is moved by a power that seems inspired, to reveal the awful consequences that follow when we act contrary to the highest instincts of our humanity.

Stilgebauer is a German by birth, but he is one of those Germans who still believe that the law of right is wiser and more beneficent than the law of might. His book is charged with the fine Christian spirit of love for which modern civilization stands, yet it throbs with an appealing indignation against those principles of conduct which have made this war what it is. It is also a reassertion, in most compelling form, of the redeeming power of the Christ-like life.

This is the message, but the story itself is a fine product of the writer's imagination.

Pershing's Foreword.

Gen. Pershing contributes a foreword to Charles H. Grasty's new book, "Flashes from the Front," in which he says in part: "It is a fine thing to us soldiers in the service to look toward home and see a mighty people responding to the call of idealism turning nobly toward duty, in the splendid spirit expressed in the phrase, 'The utmost for the highest.' We may make mistakes here and there, in this detail or in that, but we have the practical mind, and with each new experience we shall move to a higher level of excellence. Of the human material that America is sending to this war, I can speak with exactness. It is the best, and with enough of such material there can be no doubt of America's showing. I have had but one opinion always of American soldiers and that opinion has been more than confirmed in France. Given opportunity, the American army in France will fulfill the best that has been expected of it."

Capt. Hall's "High Adventure."

Just as the news came to this country that Capt. James Norman Hall is not dead, but badly wounded and a prisoner in a German hospital, the completing chapters of his book, "High Adventure," a narrative of the air fighting in France, were received by his publishers, Houghton Mifflin Company, making it possible for the book to appear on June 20. A silent tribute was paid to Capt. Hall by his flying comrades after they first heard he had been killed when his airplane fell behind the German lines. A new plane, bearing the number of Capt. Hall's wrecked machine, "17," appeared on the American front northwest of Toul. Immediately under the pilot's seat, on each side, was placed the inscription "Old Jimmy." Capt. Hall's companions are wishing now that he might come back some day to fly "Old Jimmy" himself.

EARLY WAR DAYS.

LIEGE: On the Line of March. By Glenna L. Bigelow. John Lane Company, New York.

This is the diary of an American girl who was in the home of a wealthy Belgian family, living just outside of Liege, when the Germans came through. It begins with the rumors of war and concludes some three months later with an arrival at Paris and the victory of the Marne. It seems genuine, and no doubt is.

People with sensitive imaginations have tried to evoke the picture of just how German officers would take possession of a private home, just what they would say and do. What they said and did is told here—though the home of the author's friend was rather more than usually respected because of marriage connections with certain of the aristocracy in Germany.

First is described the rush of preparations made by the Belgians, their inordinate hope that the forts would hold, the fighting, the stream of wounded, the approach of the invaders, and the coming of officers, some of whom were inclined to be gentlemen.

NEWEST WORDS.

Mr. Thomas Atkins has further enriched the English language with war words and phrases (says London Answers.) They may not creep into future dictionaries, but they will certainly remain as part of the common language of every-day use. "Nahpoo," coined by Tommy from the French "Il n'y a plus," is now our general expression for "nothing doing." It is safe to assume that the expression "over the top" will become part and parcel of our language, to be used when man must be put to the supreme test. "Anzac" is another coined word that will remain for all time. A "scrounger" for a forager, "buckshee" for anything extra in the way of rations, and "Conchy" for the shirker are hardly likely to be forgotten.

The Riddle.

WHY THE GUILTY PLAY FOR STAGE OR SCREEN.

Critic Suggests that People Like to Figure Life from Unfamiliar Angles.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

AT HEART nearly every one is an idealist. Each of us has his dream. Beauty is the only excuse for vision. We are all seeking for an end of limitations and for the final escape from the sordid.

Our material world goes beyond even this and confesses as its goal the socialization of man. Every permanently successful enterprise must consciously and consistently advance this cause. Every effort put forth today must have as its end an improved standard of living for all men.

With this goal firmly established in the public mind, there must be some reason why plays of social guilt and why "crook" plays persist with a degree of frequency and popularity. In all probability there are three reasons for the anomaly, since most thinking is done in steps of three, as the only thoughtform men have learned to follow.

It is the inherent goodness of people that permits them to enjoy drama that is based upon social error. If the people were not good they would enjoy guilty plays no more than they would enjoy being sent to the penitentiary. It is because they are so free at heart from the wrongs that are dramatized that they dare contemplate plays of this nature and can extract both amusement and knowledge from them. They see the thing that they themselves are not and they make innocent mental speculations about the world they have never entered and the line they will never cross.

If the people as a mass were not entirely sound, the play of a hectic complexion would never prove itself a box office attraction. If the people had a guilty knowledge, they would hide their faces from all evidence of crime. The murderer will not look upon the temple he has destroyed. The greatest of all murderers, he who has slain an ideal, will not willingly witness the shattering of ideals and call it entertainment.

Each of us believes in the law of compensation—for the other fellow. Many of us like to stand around waiting for the large chunks of retribution to descend with relentless force and consuming fire upon the head of another culprit.

While it is my personal opinion that the race has a considerable spell of evolution ahead of it before any of us dumb creatures may so arise to our immortal stature and so realize our immortal nature that a gallows or a throne is not a total assumption and one of which we are at present utterly void of responsibility in making, this belief in compensation is probably at the back of the "crook" play, its number and its success. We realize that a certain element which we have called the underworld is playing an exciting and a losing game and we go to such plays to see their tricks first exploited and then exposed. We watch the crime followed by the vivid pursuit and certain punishment which society will visit upon the criminal. We are not evil-minded in this, we are only curious.

Another reason for the existence of dramas based on the idea of guilt is that the public, in seeking an acquaintance with conscience, is groping its way blindly through suspicions that lead us to the brink of the unsuspected and tide us beyond our depth in a way that is at once responsible for our growth and our confusion.

In the lust to know, which has been the dominant and consuming trait of the ego since the descent of spirit into matter or the manifestation of spirit in man, we have always had a secret longing to come upon the form of crime. In some cases this longing amounts to an acute mania which jumps the question and tries, not to apprehend the form of crime, but to anticipate all steps and at once reform the criminal. We are likely to be fascinated by this search for the decarnate for just so long a time as we tarry in reaching Ibsen's final conclusion that we, ourselves, are the dead to be awakened.

Among the many reasons why this search for the form of crime so dazzles us is that the way to its discovery leads to many other of the remarkable fruits to be found upon the tree of knowledge. One of these strange and unsatisfying fruits is a certain definite and easily definable law under which crime is first developed and then detected. It often happens that people who have suspected this law give up the original pursuit and follow one of many inviting by-paths that are thus apprehended.

Of course, if we really found the form of crime or the form of anything else, we would have solved the riddle entire. Because crime is abnormal it is comparatively easy to give it our attention. Contemplation in full consciousness of the simplest wild flower would reveal just as much to us as the orchids of hate, but we have no eyes for the obvious.

In truth, the spoken drama and the photoplay are now working hand in hand under the inspiration of two dominant impulses. One is the struggle of the drama to lay bare the idea back of the fact, and the other is the struggle of motion pictures to complete chains of events that will contribute interesting visualizations of the fact. Our great spoken plays consist more in the idea than the situations, although having their climax in big situations. Our best pictures have taken logical steps in imbuing the fact with animation, and both admit the potency of sudden conversion.

A sharp division already exists between the producer who believes that his chances of success lie in sensationalizing the public mind and the producer who sees that pictures are a powerful influence on the thought and home life of the nation and who realizes that they must proceed along those lines of soundness that will bring a vision of beauty and a desire for the completeness of life.

Not only may pictures not annihilate the verities, but they must not so much as violate them or advance one step by any false principle.

Incidentally, the style in film editors has changed. The people must be told the truth and they must be comforted. The world is weary of dregs and when we look upon plays of social evil and "crook" plays on the stage or on the screen, we are seeking an end of the illusion. Where, now, is the soft, warm glow of our sophistry? Whence flown are its tints of rose and dawn? How was its music stilled? When did young hope die? Why was the great price paid? What is there left to show.

Such questions come back to us from the dregs to rouse us from the nightmare and to brush the hideous dream aside. This is not the truth about you, and no lie shall endure. You belong to the world of realities and shall not go down with any pretending failure. You are a part of the life that moves in the light and you shall not be lost in shadows. Even the relative and conditional shall reflect for you the abiding, the strong and the glad.

Soda Fountain Season Ticket.

While a Red Cross sale was in progress in Higginsville one of the hens to be sold began cackling, and it was found she had laid an egg. The egg was auctioned for $72, the purchaser agreeing to raise a Red Cross chicken from it. Another thing auctioned in the sale was a "season ticket" to a soda fountain, good for anything served at the fountain any and every time it is presented during the summer. The purchaser, says the Higginsville Advance, is the envy of all the small boys and large girls in town.—Kansas City Times.

Diversity.

TINA LERNER, PIANIST, HAS INTERESTING HOBBIES

PETITE, vivacious and dark-skinned is Tina Lerner, with such tiny hands that one wonders at the augmented octaves and tenths so skillfully presented in composition such as Liszt's "Campannello." Miss Lerner has large brown eyes that gleam at you as she talks—with a delightful Russian accent, by the way.

She is now making her debut in vaudeville. When asked whether or not she enjoyed playing to the average vaudeville audience, Miss Lerner said:

"I have found my work so far very enjoyable and a pleasant rest after my strenuous concert tour of last season. Contrary to popular belief, the average vaudeville audience is a very attentive one to play to, unless, of course, one plays too much of music which is ultra-modern and which can only be appreciated by those who are well informed musically."

Miss Lerner will not complete her vaudeville season until next December, and has made no plans beyond that for the future. "During that time," she continued, "I shall just rest and read and do a great deal of typewriting. Oh, yes, that is my particular hobby; I love to typewrite."

But first and last in her heart and thoughts is her baby—Dollina, just 2 years old. Exactly how much Dollina is a part of her talented mother's life is best evidenced by the number of photographs of her that Miss Lerner carries in her trunk. In her dressing-room she always has one right before her eyes, where she can see her cherubic face smiling for all the world like an angel.

"Dollina is at present with her grandmother in San Francisco," explained Miss Lerner proudly. "The climate is glorious, and she is just in the proper surroundings. Letters I receive daily tell me that she is growing like a weed, and the wonder of it all is that she prefers the piano to anything else for a toy. It looks as if she is set on following in her mother's footsteps."

CLUNE'S AUDITORIUM.

"The Warrior," starring Maciste, the giant Italian, will make its first public showing in Los Angeles at Clune's Auditorium Monday afternoon. This film is the work of the greatest moving picture artists that Italy has at her command, and the scenic effects, taken in the Alps, are beautiful. It is a modern melodramatic comedy, with countless thrilling situations that are amusing and tense. "The Warrior" was written especially for Maciste and simply duplicates the actual experiences he encountered while a soldier in the Italian army, fighting in the Alps against the Austrians. The operation of the greatest copper mine in the world, "Inspiration," has been filmed and shown as an added attraction. This mine has been equipped with the most modern mining machinery, and experts have stated that it is the best operated and equipped copper mine in the world.

The Riddle.

WHY THE GUILTY PLAY FOR STAGE OR SCREEN.

Critic Suggests that People Like to Figure Life from Unfamiliar Angles.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

AT HEART nearly every one is an idealist. Each of us has his dream. Beauty is the only excuse for vision. We are all seeking for an end of limitations and for the final escape from the sordid.

Our material world goes beyond even this and confesses as its goal the socialization of man. Every permanently successful enterprise must consciously and consistently advance this cause. Every effort put forth today must have as its end an improved standard of living for all men.

With this goal firmly established in the public mind, there must be some reason why plays of social guilt and why "crook" plays persist with a degree of frequency and popularity. In all probability there are three reasons for the anomaly, since most thinking is done in steps of three, as the only thoughtform men have learned to follow.

It is the inherent goodness of people that permits them to enjoy drama that is based upon social error. If the people were not good they would enjoy guilty plays no more than they would enjoy being sent to the penitentiary. It is because they are so free at heart from the wrongs that are dramatized that they dare contemplate plays of this nature and can extract both amusement and knowledge from them. They see the thing that they themselves are not and they make innocent mental speculations about the world they have never entered and the line they will never cross.

If the people as a mass were not entirely sound, the play of a hectic complexion would never prove itself a box office attraction. If the people had a guilty knowledge, they would hide their faces from all evidence of crime. The murderer will not look upon the temple he has destroyed. The greatest of all murderers, he who has slain an ideal, will not willingly witness the shattering of ideals and call it entertainment.

Each of us believes in the law of compensation—for the other fellow. Many of us like to stand around waiting for the large chunks of retribution to descend with relentless force and consuming fire upon the head of another culprit.

While it is my personal opinion that the race has a considerable spell of evolution ahead of it before any of us dumb creatures may so arise to our immortal stature and so realize our immortal nature that a gallows or a throne is not a total assumption and one of which we are at present utterly void of responsibility in making, this belief in compensation is probably at the back of the "crook" play, its number and its success. We realize that a certain element which we have called the underworld is playing an exciting and a losing game and we go to such plays to see their tricks first exploited and then exposed. We watch the crime followed by the vivid pursuit and certain punishment which society will visit upon the criminal. We are not evil-minded in this, we are only curious.

Another reason for the existence of dramas based on the idea of guilt is that the public, in seeking an acquaintance with conscience, is groping its way blindly through suspicions that lead us to the brink of the unsuspected and tide us beyond our depth in a way that is at once responsible for our growth and our confusion.

In the lust to know, which has been the dominant and consuming trait of the ego since the descent of spirit into matter or the manifestation of spirit in man, we have always had a secret longing to come upon the form of crime. In some cases this longing amounts to an acute mania which jumps the question and tries, not to apprehend the form of crime, but to anticipate all steps and at once reform the criminal. We are likely to be fascinated by this search for the decarnate for just so long a time as we tarry in reaching Ibsen's final conclusion that we, ourselves, are the dead to be awakened.

Among the many reasons why this search for the form of crime so dazzles us is that the way to its discovery leads to many other of the remarkable fruits to be found upon the tree of knowledge. One of these strange and unsatisfying fruits is a certain definite and easily definable law under which crime is first developed and then detected. It often happens that people who have suspected this law give up the original pursuit and follow one of many inviting by-paths that are thus apprehended.

Of course, if we really found the form of crime or the form of anything else we would have solved the riddle entire. Because crime is abnormal it is comparatively easy to give it our attention. Contemplation in full consciousness of the simplest wild flower would reveal just as much to us as the orchids of hate, but we have no eyes for the obvious.

In truth, the spoken drama and the photoplay are now working hand in hand under the inspiration of two dominant impulses. One is the struggle of the drama to lay bare the idea back of the fact, and the other is the struggle of motion pictures to complete chains of events that will contribute interesting visualizations of the fact. Our great spoken plays consist more in the idea than the situations, although having their climax in big situations. Our best pictures have taken logical steps in imbuing the fact with animation, and both admit the potency of sudden conversion.

A sharp division already exists between the producer who believes that his chances of success lie in sensationalizing the public mind and the producer who sees that pictures are a powerful influence on the thought and home life of the nation and who realizes that they must proceed along those lines of soundness that will bring a vision of beauty and a desire for the completeness of life.

Not only may pictures not annihilate the verities, but they must not so much as violate them or advance one step by any false principle.

Incidentally, the style in film editors has changed. The people must be told the truth and they must be comforted. The world is weary of dregs and when we look upon plays of social evil and "crook" plays on the stage or on the screen, we are seeking an end of the illusion. Where, now, is the soft, warm glow of our sophistry? Whence flown are its tints of rose and dawn? How was its music stilled? When did young hope die? Why was the great price paid? What is there left to show.

Such questions come back to us from the dregs to rouse us from the nightmare and to brush the hideous dream aside. This is not the truth about you, and no lie shall endure. You belong to the world of realities and shall not go down with any pretending failure. You are a part of the life that moves in the light and you shall not be lost in shadows. Even the relative and conditional shall reflect for you the abiding, the strong and the glad.

Soda Fountain Season Ticket.

While a Red Cross sale was in progress in Higginsville one of the hens to be sold began cackling, and it was found she had laid an egg. The egg was auctioned for $72, the purchaser agreeing to raise a Red Cross chicken from it. Another thing auctioned in the sale was a "season ticket" to a soda fountain, good for anything served at the fountain any and every time it is presented during the summer. The purchaser, says the Higginsville Advance, is the envy of all the small boys and large girls in town.—Kansas City Times.

Diversity.

TINA LERNER, PIANIST, HAS INTERESTING HOBBIES

PETITE, vivacious and dark-skinned is Tina Lerner, with such tiny hands that one wonders at the augmented octaves and tenths so skillfully presented in composition such as Liszt's "Campannello." Miss Lerner has large brown eyes that gleam at you as she talks—with a delightful Russian accent, by the way.

She is now making her debut in vaudeville. When asked whether or not she enjoyed playing to the average vaudeville audience, Miss Lerner said:

"I have found my work so far very enjoyable and a pleasant rest after my strenuous concert tour of last season. Contrary to popular belief, the average vaudeville audience is a very attentive one to play to, unless, of course, one plays too much of music which is ultra-modern and which can only be appreciated by those who are well informed musically."

Miss Lerner will not complete her vaudeville season until next December, and has made no plans beyond that for the future. "During that time," she continued, "I shall just rest and read and do a great deal of typewriting. Oh, yes, that is my particular hobby; I love to typewrite."

But first and last in her heart and thoughts is her baby—Dollina, just 2 years old. Exactly how much Dollina is a part of her talented mother's life is best evidenced by the number of photographs of her that Miss Lerner carries in her trunk. In her dressing-room she always has one right before her eyes, where she can see her cherubic face smiling for all the world like an angel.

"Dollina is at present with her grandmother in San Francisco," explained Miss Lerner proudly. "The climate is glorious, and she is just in the proper surroundings. Letters I receive daily tell me that she is growing like a weed, and the wonder of it all is that she prefers the piano to anything else for a toy. It looks as if she is set on following in her mother's footsteps."

CLUNE'S AUDITORIUM.

"The Warrior," starring Maciste, the giant Italian, will make its first public showing in Los Angeles at Clune's Auditorium Monday afternoon. This film is the work of the greatest moving picture artists that Italy has at her command, and the scenic effects, taken in the Alps, are beautiful. It is a modern melodramatic comedy, with countless thrilling situations that are amusing and tense. "The Warrior" was written especially for Maciste and simply duplicates the actual experiences he encountered while a soldier in the Italian army, fighting in the Alps against the Austrians. The operation of the greatest copper mine in the world, "Inspiration," has been filmed and shown as an added attraction. This mine has been equipped with the most modern mining machinery, and experts have stated that it is the best operated and equipped copper mine in the world.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Graduate.

She graduates, a vision fair
In lace and mull and roses,
Her essay covers everything
The world has known since Moses.
With algebra and ologies
Her girlish brain is busy,
Her knowledge of astronomy
Would make Flammarion dizzy.

She speaks with ease the purest Greek,
And spouts a piece in Latin,
And gets a neat diploma tied
With pink or azure satin;
Then, though upon her classic brow
She bears the college label,
Next in a boarding-house we find
Her waiting on the table.
—[Minna Irving in Leslie's.

The Way to Berlin.

The way to Berlin is the will-to-win.
Firmly it stretches out
Over quicksand fears and blasted years,
Over marshes of woe and doubt,
Like a silver path for God's own wrath
Across the slime of sin,
It finds the gate of the lord of hate,
In the royal palace, Berlin.

The way to Berlin is the will-to-win.
It passes from avenue Lift
Through the thoroughfare of Grin-and-Bear,
Across the lane of thrift;
Then winds along through Hopeful Song
Toward the summit of Never-Give-In,
From which it leads through the road of Deeds
To the royal palace, Berlin.

The way to Berlin is the will-to-win,
And all of us belong
On that only way—a great array
Of a hundred million strong.
—[Elias Lieberman in New York Times.

The Purpose.

Beneath it all, this blood and soul-deep woe,
This waste of happiness, these senses numb—
Beneath it all, like joy beneath the snow,
A balm-fraught purpose waits for spring to come.
—[Oscar C. Williams in Everybody's Magazine.

Everyone—but Mother.

Sunday, at our house, we Have all sorts of rompin'—
Father an' the twins an' me
Ist go trompin'—trompin'—
Berrying an' gettin' posies,
Hackberries an' these wild roses—
Yes, an' chase each other!—
Ist the bestest time there be,
Everyone—but mother.

Nen comes dinner time, we
Ist all eat until it
S'prises father—he can't see
How we never spill it!
Ist pieplant an' berry pie,
Jelly tarts an' such—O my,
We ist race each other,
Eatin' till we most can't see,
Everyone—but mother.

Nen, when dinner's done, we
All go off a-sleepin'
Underneath the maple tree,
Where they's shadows creepin'
'Cross our faces—one that's near,
When we wake is over here,
An' they ist chase each other!
Nen we're rested as can be,
Everyone—but mother.

When comes night, we set
All around the table,
Pickin' at the bones we et
Long as we are able;
Nen we set on mother's knee—
"Story time," that is, and she Tells one after t' other,
'Til we're 'sleep an' ist forget
Everyone—but mother.
—[John D. Wells in Pittsburgh Leader.

Below the Water Line.

Did ever ye serve in the warship's hold,
Deep under the water line,
With hatches locked and the blowers on,
Close up to a hidden mine—

Bare to the waist and dripping wet,
A 'grimed and gasping crew,
To shovel coal and feed the fire
Until the sea fight's through—

Where check valves sigh with the hissing steam
And the greedy grates cry "more!"
Like galley slaves in the olden time,
Chained to the bench and oar?

No cherubs sit in the bunker's dust
To watch o'er us below,
While overhead the turrets clank
As they turn to find the foe.

The guardian angels keep aloft—
None here where the turbine moans;
There's nothing ahead, if things go wrong
But tickets to Davy Jones.

Forget yourself, forget the world,
Forget the sun and sky!
In the boiler-room you face your doom;
You're there to do and die!
—[Don C. Seitz in Scribner's Magazine.

Ypres.

She was a city of patience; of proud name,
Dimmed by neglecting time; of beauty and loss;
Of acquiescence in the creeping moss,
But on a sudden fierce destruction came
Tigerish pouncing; thunderbolt and flame
Showered on her streets, to shatter them.
Her ancient towers in ashes, riven across,
She rose, dead, into never-dying fame.
White against heavens of storm, a ghost, she is known
To the world's ends. The myriads of the brave
Sleep round her. Desolately glorified,
She, moonlike, draws her own far-moving tide
Of sorrow and memory, toward her, each alone,
Glide the dark dreams that seek an English grave.
—[Lawrence Binyon in London Times.

Barristers' Wigs.

Barristers' wigs first came into vogue about 200 years ago. Up to the end of the seventeenth century judges and sergeants-at-law alone had any distinctive dress.

Under Queen Anne the Queen's Counsel adopted the court dress and silk gown which made up the mourning of the period, together with the full bottomed wig then usually worn by all persons of position.

Thereupon the outer bar started wearing a modest short wig, with strings of horsehair tied up at the end, in imitation of the fashion of tying the back hair up into a pigtail. Some judges, we are told by a legal historian, found these wigs "economical," and would not allow barristers wearing them to plead in court.—[London Chronicle.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS,
WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 360 hairs an hour. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to this work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers will testify to my skill as an expert.

SEE THE SAND GAZER.

DR. MUNDO-DARE, ORDAINED.

DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHERS.

SPECIAL READING, THIS WEEK, 50c.

The only member of INDIA'S MYSTIC BROTHERHOOD to ever visit this country. First in America to introduce this MYSTERIOUS ART employed by PROPHETS OF OLDEN TIMES. His remarkable disclosures are pronounced "PHENOMENAL" by thinking people who have consulted him. Any Clairvoyant can tell your name, the past and present. If wives, husbands, sweethearts or friends are true or false, and many other things of more trivial importance. All these things the SAND GAZER tells at a glance. What you want is to be successful and make the most of a life that is passing ALL TOO FAST. To get what your Creator promises, you must know your strongest points. Your future possibilities, physical condition, how to gain the one you desire, how to be magnetic, etc., etc. To acquire these things, you MUST SEE THE SAND GAZER SOONER OR LATER, so COME TODAY.

IN HIS DEPARTMENT HE STANDS SUPREME.

You need not speak for him to call your name in full, names of those you wish to know or what you came for, how to make business pay, whom you will marry and when, every possible advice regarding love, travel, changes, speculation, divorces, lawsuits, sickness, etc. All of life's active principles are minutely analyzed by THIS WIZARD OF THE SHIFTING SANDS. The Only Psychic who really demonstrates the mysterious power to help you. Come. Test him and be convinced. Hours, 12 to 8 daily and Sundays. Maid in attendance. 1920 S. FIGUEROA ST. Phone 22141. No sign.

PERSONAL—

PEERLESS PALMER
AMERICA'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.
50c—READINGS THIS WEEK—50c.

Calls you by name and tells the object of your visit without asking a question. Names enemies and friends. Tells whom and when you will marry; if the one you love loves you; whether wife or sweetheart is true or false; how to influence any one you desire, even though a thousand miles away. Develops personal magnetism; causes speedy and happy marriage with the one of your choice. Gives advice on all matters of business.

He gives more satisfaction, more encouragement, more success, more help, more facts than any other Psychic. He is worthy your confidence.

REMOVES EVIL INFLUENCES.

Do you find the one you have bestowed your affection and trust upon acting cool and indifferent? Has a rival or obstacle of any kind crept between you and your future home, or has misfortune assailed the quietude of your happy home? COME TO THIS GIFTED MEDIUM and find help.

THE PROFIT

is life's sunshine, conscious power, magnetism to attract and strength to hold. It's not so much in what I tell you as it is what I do for you by my special influence, that I put forth in your behalf to overcome all your sorrows and troubles so that you can have the power to win your greatest desires. What good is a psychic's advice unless they are able to lift you out of your troubles, worriments and bad luck? None whatever.

I will accept no fee unless you receive perfect satisfaction.

ATTENTION—

SPECIAL OFFER!

The price of NEW CHANDLERS has advanced TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS. For the balance of this month we will still offer our slightly used CHANDLERS at the same price as before the raise.

REMEMBER

We are the distributors for New Chandlers. We do not offer a used Chandler for sale until we are willing to guarantee it the same as A NEW CAR.

We will not sell a used CHANDLER until it has been thoroughly REBUILT and REFINISHED. It is then practically as good as a new car as a few thousand miles just puts a CHANDLER in the pink of condition. It is far better than any LOW GRADE new car that you could purchase at the same figure.

We have our reputation, and that of the CHANDLER car to maintain, and you may rest assured that we leave nothing undone to see that these used CHANDLERS are perfect. You know that being CHANDLER DISTRIBUTORS we ought to know how to do it. We can prove to you that we do see that it is done.

WE CAN STILL OFFER:

OPEN TODAY, ALL DAY.

DON LEE,

ANNUAL JUNE PRE-INVENTORY SALE.

RE-NEW-ED CARS

It is very nearly certain the production of automobiles will soon be practically stopped entirely, which means used cars will double in value.

A reliable automobile in good condition today is the best sure thing investment you can buy.

DON LEE RE-NEW-ED CARS in appearance, condition and performance are so near like new that they are a far better investment than the average used car.

We feel sure that you can not duplicate any car in this sale for less than 25 per cent. additional by the 15th of July.

We are after a record for this season, which closes June 30, otherwise we would have omitted our regular June sale.

The price of every car we have in stock on July 1 will be marked up.

In most of the following cars we have both Touring Cars and Roadsters.

GOOD USED CARS—
Camouflaged was meant to deceive the enemy and not supposed to be used to fool a buyer of an automobile.

I do not sell camouflaged used cars. My stock is clean and I sell you what you want and any representations I make are on past records of the car in question. No slipshod, worked over, cheaply painted stock in my salesroom.

Exceptionally High Grade Cars.

All my cars are in good mechanical condition and I guarantee them absolutely. I have had 27 years' experience in the automobile business, and I know what cars will stand a guarantee. I'm not taking any chances, neither are you with a man like GEO. W. CONDON, 953-955 S. Broadway. Phone 14134. Open Sunday.

THIS IS OUR SPECIAL—
OLDSMOBILE "8."

HUPMOBILE AND CHALMERS—
THE ONLY PLACE TO BUY GOOD USED HUPMOBILE AND CHALMERS CARS.
Cars that are rebuilt and refurnished and which in every respect are in A1 shape; cars that will give as good service as those that are new, we will sell at a saving of from 40 to 50 per cent.

Bear in mind that there is to be a further reduction in the output of automobiles. This means the used car market eventually will be combed for cars. It also means that along with new cars the used ones will bring higher prices. Now is the time to buy. In six months used cars will be scarce. See T. W. Taylor, used car Dept.

"BARNEY SNYDER" SAYS—I'VE STILL got a few of them—"BRAND NEW"
"LEXINGTON" MINUTE-MAN SIXES"

Four-pass. "CHUMMY ROADSTERS" on hand and you can "BET YOUR LIFE" I am going to sell them—and, of course—you all know what that means—are you on! All right. Now—what's the matter with you getting in touch with me right this minute. "REMEMBER," they are "BRAND NEW," right out of the warehouse and the very "LATEST" thing in automobiles—"NOT USED CARS"—don't forget that. I might say that "WE ARE NOT USED CAR SPECULATORS," etc.! etc.!—you know—but that would "NOT" be "ON THE SQUARE," and since you all know that I "AM" "ON THE SQUARE" I'll have to let that—(We are not used car speculators) to them other fellows that don't seem to care how they handle the "TRUTH"—

"BY THE WAY"—These little wagons have "CONTINENTAL" Red Seal Motor—"TIMKEN" Bearings—"WESTINGHOUSE" Lighting and Starting System—and, in fact—the best of everything right in them—so "DON'T" fail to see me at once for the "BIGGEST"—"SQUARE-DEAL"—"NO FOOLIN'" "BARGAIN" you ever heard of—

"THANKS."

WAR PRISONERS RUSSIA'S HOBOS.

German Captives are Shiftless Wanderers.

They Neither Wish to Work Nor to Fight.

Surprised United States not Teuton Ally.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 8.—The German war prisoner has become the "hobo" of Russia—an idle, shiftless wanderer who wants neither to work nor to fight. Many such prisoners, both Germans and Austrians, were encountered at different points in Russia by the members of the American Red Cross mission returning from Rumania. They were never under guard, were usually in small groups, and apparently had no employment or wish for employment. They were without arms and shabbily clad, and always declared emphatically that they had no desire to get back into the German army, nor even any wish to return to Germany until after a general peace was declared.

If the prisoners showed any disposition to organize or even to travel about in marauding bands, they would furnish a serious problem, but under present conditions, they are merely a nuisance.

At a small station north of Vologda, there was a group of about fifty prisoners idling on the station platform some asleep in the winter sun, some playing cards, others whittling little toys and knick-knacks out of soft wood. The Associated Press correspondent talked with several of them. They were greatly surprised to hear that the United States had entered the war a year before, and several of them expressed still more surprise that America was not the ally of Germany.

They had been sent to this part of Russia nearly two years before in a railway construction gang, but had done no work for several weeks. They lived in freight cars and got their food by hook or crook from the villagers.

Some of them declared that they had not had a square meal for many days, and they accepted with genuine gratitude three old loaves of black bread and a few pieces of chocolate which the Americans were able to spare them. As an afterthought, one of the Americans brought out to them the remains of a large round American cheese. It had been purchased in New York City and had accompanied the mission from Vancouver to Yokahama, Moscow and Jassy, serving throughout the Rumanian campaign.

There were several large camps of German prisoners in the far north of Russia, but these had mostly broken up completely since the revolution, owing to difficulties with the food supply. It was said that thousands of German prisoners in these northern camps died of scurvy, which was also prevalent in many of the far northern villages and among the refugees.

SPIRIT OF VOLUNTARY SERVICE HAS GONE AND MORAL FIBER WANES.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, June 30.—German youth no longer rush to the colors with the enthusiasm that marked the mobilization of 1914, according to an article in the Berlin Vossische Zeitung, telling of the wartime impairment of the German educational system.

"The spirit of voluntary service which at the beginning of the war revealed itself in its fairest aspect has now disappeared," says the article. "Everywhere we hear lamentations over the increasing distaste shown for military service."

Scholastic standards in the public school have fallen so low, it is said, that "promotions no longer represent any definite standard of accomplishment." Scholastic efficiency has suffered considerably because pupils subsisting on war diets for long periods are found to be generally undernourished.

Juvenile delinquency has spread to an alarming extent, and it is announced that "already the number of violent crimes committed by youths in the city of Berlin is more than three times the number reported in 1914."

"Thus," concludes the article, "dark shadows are falling over the brilliant picture of 1914. Every disciplinary influence, every effort of the still fundamentally-sound German nation must be exerted to oppose this tendency, and to lead the children back to the path of rectitude."

OUR AVIATORS STUDY ITALIAN OVER THERE.

MUST LEARN MANY PHRASES TO UNDERSTAND LATIN COMRADES IN CAMP.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMERICAN SEAPLANE TRAINING CAMP, ITALY, May 11.—"The watchwords of this camp are efficiency, friendship, victory," remarked the American commander as he stood on the beach of the lake directing the afternoon's flying. "The efficiency is for our boys, the friendship for our friends the Italians, and the victory is the destruction of the enemy," he explained.

If anything, the work in a training camp here is apt to be harder than in a similar camp at home. In addition to the usual routine of flying and studying, the students must learn French and Italian or both, to know the names of machine parts, technical terms, and to know how to find their way about.

The aviators have found that they must know a good many phrases and sentences if they would understand the Italian mechanics, motor drivers, and aviators. So the Americans already have begun studying Italian as a sideline to their many other studies. Most of them know the meaning of a long list of words employed for taking off, banking, turning, gliding, diving, snaking and landing.

A good deal of Italian has been picked up by the aviators right in the village, where the people are very friendly and do not laugh at the weird expressions used by the Americans, whom they have adopted as their very own. The younger aviators, whose ears are keener, have the advantage in learning the language and they find it comes in handy at the mess tables. The mess of the entire camp is located in a fine old middle-age palace. The entire kitchen and first floor has been turned over to them, and there they eat surrounded by frescoed walls and ceilings typical of an Italy of other days. The mess is overseen by a chef formerly with the Duke d'Abruzzi and the Americans are said to be among the best fed soldiers in Italy—all for 83 cents a day.

The aviators repay the chef, Consotino, by teaching him American slang.

TRENT NOW IS VAST DISTRIBUTION CAMP.

HISTORIC CITY OCCUPIED BY AUSTRIAN MILITARY ALMOST ENTIRELY.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

HEADQUARTERS ITALIAN ARMY, May 11.—Austrian prisoners captured in the patrol raids along the mountain front, tell of the intense activity which centers at Trent, the railway center of concentration, where all the Austrian men and supplies are brought down for use in the Brenta Valley, Lagarina Valley and all along the mountain front.

The city itself, they say, is a huge military camp which extends ten miles southward to Calliano, and eastward though the Sugana Valley which is the great artery leading to the Brenta Valley and the plains of Italy. The railways have been trebled, so that this whole section is joined by a network of railway sidings and connections.

The military administration is carried on chiefly at Trent, the headquarters being in the Pretoria Palace near the famous old cathedral of Trent, where the Council of Trent was held. Near by is one of the main barracks, located near one of the historic monuments of the city. In the Piazza Dante the bronze statue of Dante, has around its base a number of delapidated cannon, which are claimed to be trophies of war.

The city is practically evacuated of its civilian population and given over entirely as the base for the military operations on the mountain front.

GENUINE DIAMONDS ARTIFICIALLY MADE.

FEW AND SMALL, ENORMOUSLY EXPENSIVE, BUT SHOW WHAT'S POSSIBLE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 20.—Real diamonds, artificially made, were exhibited in connection with the annual May lecture before the British Institute of Medals. The speaker, Sir Charles A. Parsons, who is widely known for his work in developing the turbine engine, told of experiments which showed that diamonds exist in iron.

The diamonds displayed were few and small, and it was stated that they were produced at enormous cost. Only the resources of a great engineering works made the experiments possible. However, the lecturer believed that with the advance of chemistry and electrical engineering it might some day be cheaper to make diamonds than dig them.

A method of making diamonds of commercial size and quantity was suggested by Sir Charles. His plan was to submit a large mass of iron, alloyed with other elements, to heat. After the molten metal had set, but when still at a temperature permeable to gas it should be subjected to carbon monoxide at a pressure of about 1000 atmospheres. Under this process, he believed, segregations forming into diamonds might take place slowly within the mass.

One source of diamonds might be attributed, he said, to prehistoric falls of meteors.

SEVERAL SUICIDES IN JAPAN BRIBERY CASE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, April 30.—The suicide of Norikichi Oshikawa, president of the government iron foundry at Yawata, has resulted in the arrest of more than 100 persons, including prominent officials and business men. It is stated that seven others have hanged themselves while their conduct was under examination. The homes and offices of many railway and mining company officials have been searched.

Oshikawa's management of the iron foundry has been investigated by a court, and the Japan Times says it has revealed "one of the worst scandals that has ever occurred in Japan." It is alleged that Oshikawa accepted a gift of 10,000 yen for a favorable contract granted to a shipbuilding concern. He formerly was Minister of the Department of Agriculture.

UNCLE SAM'S TESTING SHOP

Bureau of Standards Carries Big Responsibility.

Engaged Chiefly on Problems of War at Present.

Tackles Puzzles from Spark Plugs to Buttons.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) June 4.—The brass button has long been the symbol, in song and story, of military magnificence. As a matter of fact, the buttons on the service uniforms of our soldiers are bronze. And, in the interests of economy, they will soon cease to be made of metal at all. The quartermaster's department has called upon the bureau of standards to find for it a button that will look like bronze and will wear well, but will not cost as much as a bronze button. So the bureau of standards is now playing, "Button, button, who has the button," with all the button manufacturers in the United States.

This matter of selecting a button for the army is not as simple as it might seem. We are going to have an army of 5,000,000 men. You can figure out for yourself how many buttons it will take to keep them all dressed. And you will then realize that this button contract is worth having. The manufacturers know this. Bone buttons, fiber buttons, composition buttons and enamel buttons of innumerable kinds are pouring in upon the bureau of standards. In fairness to the manufacturers, each of these has to be tested thoroughly. Each button is boiled, steamed, dry heated and submitted to every other ordeal that a button could possibly encounter in the course of an active life in the army.

Rumor has it that a certain vegetable composition button is to be the winner.

UNCLE SAM'S TESTER.

This button test is typical of the work which the bureau of standards is doing in connection with the war. It is chief consulting engineer to the United States government. It has some of the finest physical chemical and engineering laboratories in the world. Formerly these were pretty much at the disposal of any citizen; any manufacturer could have a material tested in these laboratories. But now the bureau of standards is engaged almost exclusively in testing the great variety of commodities and materials which the government is buying for use in the war. It is the wise friend of Uncle Sam who prevents him from "getting stung." And it has grown, since we entered the war, just about 100 per cent. in personnel and in the amount of floor space it occupies. At present it has about 600 tests under way.

Two of the greatest scientific problems of the war are the combating of the submarine and the improvement of the airplane. The bureau is at work upon both of these problems, but for obvious military reasons is not saying much about them. Its submarine work, especially, is not a subject for publicity. So many devices guaranteed to sweep the submarines off the sea have already been touted in the newspapers that the scientists who are doing the really important work in this line do not care to say much about it until they have actually proved the value of their work.

AIRPLANE STUDY.

For the testing of airplane devices the bureau has a remarkably perfect equipment. It has an "altitude laboratory," where it can reproduce exactly the atmospheric conditions up to an elevation of 40,000 feet. In its "wind tunnel," it can subject airplanes or instruments to exactly the air friction they would encounter at any given speed. It not only tests engines and engine parts, but also all of the instruments which an aviator must carry. These include tachometers, which show the speed of the engine, speedometers to show how fast the plane is traveling, barometers to show how high it is, inclination indicators to show the angle of the planes, statoscopes to show whether the machine is rising or falling, compasses and watches.

Many of the most important devices upon which the bureau is working are too technical for the grasp of the layman, and must be kept secret for military reasons. It is known, however, that especially valuable work has been done in the perfecting of instruments by which the exact direction of the fire of an enemy battery may be determined. These instruments have practically been invented in the bureau. In the case of one instrument used in submarines, the bureau has had to function as a factory, and has turned out in its shops the number needed by the government, because no manufacturer could be found who was able to do the work.

LEATHERLESS SHOES.

Less mysterious and confidential is the work which the bureau is doing in testing substitutes for leather and wool. Both of these animal products are becoming so scarce that substitutes must be found. Accordingly, the bureau is putting a variety of shoes with composition soles to the test by the simple method of having soldiers wear them. In some of the camps recruits are to be seen with a leather shoe on one foot and a shoe of composition material or rubber on the other. The soldier is required to wear these under all conditions of weather and over all sorts of ground. The results are watched by inspectors from the bureau, and the wearer's opinion as to the comfort and serviceability of the substitute shoes is taken into account. It is known that some kinds of shoes containing little or no leather have proved very satisfactory.

Woolless blankets are also being tested, and it is known that here, too, some good fabrics have been found, containing only a small percentage of wool, which are both light and warm.

SPARK PLUG PROBLEMS.

Spark plugs for airplanes are the subject of a special study. How apparently small matters may influence great events is shown by the fact that an airplane spark plug better than any now in use might change the course of the war. The plug in the flying machine is subjected to terrific heat from within and intense cold from without, and is exposed to the combustion of enormous amounts of fuel. The result is that it cracks and fouls. Often its life is no more than an hour, and an ordinary automobile plug in an airplane engine would not last five minutes. That is why scientists of high attainment are putting all of their time on the spark plug question.

Airplane fuel is also being studied by the bureau. Having to develop hundreds of horse power, an airplane burns a great deal of fuel, and yet it can carry but little. Only the purest, lightest gasoline can be used. To make a practicable airplane fuel that will develop more power in proportion to its weight than the fuel used by the enemy would go a long way toward insuring our dominance of the air.

SO FAR, NO FARTHER.

There is scarcely a material used in war work which has not been subjected to the scrutiny of the Bureau of Standards. The wall board used in building cantonments, the concrete sections for making concrete ships, optical glass for binoculars and range finders, paints, fire extinguishers, acetylene lights, nonbreakable goggles, porcelain cans for food, solder for mending aluminum, are just a few of the materials and devices recently tested. Many honest American products have been given the approval of this authority, and also a surprising number of frauds have been detected. Manufacturers trying to sell inferior goods to their government through political influence have gotten as far as the Bureau of Standards, but no farther.

When the war is over the Bureau of Standards will have the laboratories and the personnel for the testing of a great variety of things which are used in the every-day peace-time life of the people. Why should not this impartial, scientific faculty of the government then be used to protect the public against fradulent and inferior goods, as it is now protecting the War Department?

RUSSIAN CHURCHES IN ALASKA HIT BY WAR.

ONE CLERGYMAN TAKES JOB AS CUSTOMS INSPECTOR TO EKE OUT LIVING.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

JUNEAU (Alaska), May 15.—Russian churches in Alaska have been having hard times making both ends meet since turmoil in Russia stopped the payment of money by the mother church toward the upkeep of these faraway parishes.

All the churches in this section are now being supported solely by their small congregations. Many of the churches contain valuable paintings and jeweled robes.

In order to eke out his salary, one member of the Russian clergy, Father A. P. Kashevaroff, arch priest in charge of the Russia church at Juneau, has taken the post of inspector of customs at Hidden Inlet, near here, for the summer. Father Kashevaroff is a native of Sitka, Alaska, and is well known in Southern Alaska.

ALASKA FARMER TO TRY GOAT RAISING.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

FAIRBANKS (Alaska) May 18.—Goat raising may be added to the industries of interior Alaska. Joseph Kehoe, a pioneer Tanana Valley farmer, left here recently for "the outside" to purchase goats for shipment here next spring. He said he intended to study the goat question and decide, if possible, which kind of goat can best withstand the rigors of a northern winter.

TWO ACTIVE DOMINIES IN BRITAIN'S PEERAGE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 18.—The new Lord De Mauley, who succeeds to the barony made vacant by the death of the former baron, brings up to two the number of active clergymen now in the British peerage. He is the vicar of a small parish at Wantage. The only other active clergyman in the peerage is Lord Montmorres, who is vicar of Swinton.

There are two other peers, the Earl of Mar and the Marquis of Normanton, who are qualified clergymen, but who hold no active church post at the present time.

RAISE IS EXPECTED TO INCREASE POSTCARDS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 23.—Until the new budget put a war tax on mail, this country had been sending letters for a penny—two American cents—for seventy-eight years. Not until 1870 was the postcard introduced. It has required a half-penny stamp, now raised to a penny, for inland delivery.

Papers here express the belief that the increased postal charges will cause more postcards to be used. In announcing the increase of half a penny for letter postage, the Chancellor of the Exchequer pointed out that the new rate had been fixed by all the big countries of the world.

NUTHALL, WAR VICTIM, ENGLISH JIU-JITSUIST.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 19.—Recent casualty lists from the big battle in France contain the name of E. W. Nuthall, who under the name "Prof. Ozaka" was known, before the war, as European champion at jiu-jitsu.

He had studied the art for many years in Japan, and acted as chief instructor in gymnastics in the British army during the early years of the war.

About two months ago he was, at his own request, transferred to active duty at the front. He was killed in the fighting on the Armentieres front.

ENGLAND CUTS COAL TO HOMES; SHORTAGE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BIRMINGHAM (Eng.) April 18.—A national scheme for household coal to apply to the whole country was decided upon at a conference here this week. A reduction in the use of coal for householders is contemplated in order to avoid rationing supplies for industrial purposes.

A Home Office report shows the output of coal from mines in 1917 to be 248,473,119 tons, a decrease of 7,875,232 tons.

Long Beach.

BEACH MORAL ORDINANCE.

Validity of the Anti-Spooning Law Attacked.

Infringement of Personal Liberty, Declared.

Fackett to Appear for Sentence Thursday.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, June 8.—Representing A. T. Fackett, the first man arrested under the new anti-spooning ordinance recently enacted by the City Commissioners of this municipality, Attorney Paul Otto of Los Angeles today bitterly assailed the constitutionality of the law, declaring that it is an unwarranted infringement of personal liberty.

Arguing before Police Judge Carl Hawkins, Attorney Otto said: "Why, Your Honor, under this ordinance a man may not kiss his own wife while in public, a son may not embrace his mother in a railroad station or on the street when leaving for the battle front, nor a little child, wearied by romping on the beach, is not allowed to lay its head upon its mother's lap."

The recently enacted ordinance forbids hugging, kissing, holding of hands or expression of other endearments between persons of the opposite sex while on the beach, in a park, street, or other public place.

Attorney Otto declared the anti-spooning ordinance does not conform to the Constitution of the United States, or of the State of California, and that it is entirely too sweeping in its prohibitions and works an unnatural hardship upon men, women and children. Assistant City Attorney Dwight Bathurst, prosecuting the case, offered arguments designed to prove that the measure is no more than is required to maintain public morals, particularly in time of war.

Judge Hawkins found Fackett guilty as charged, but continued the case for sentence until next Thursday. At that time, Attorney Otto stated today, he will make a motion for a new trial and an arrest of judgment. If the motion is denied, Attorney Otto said, he will appeal the case to the Superior Court, and even higher, if necessary. It was apparent that the main object of the defense is not to prove there has been no violation of the ordinance, but to impeach the new law itself, making it a test case.

TOKEN OF SANTA ANA.

CITIZENS PRESENT UTAH REGIMENT WITH CUP—ACCEPTED BY COL. WEBB.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, June 8.—Presentation of a loving cup to Col. William C. Webb by the citizens of Santa Ana as a token of the cordial esteem and sincere friendship for the officers and men of the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Field Artillery felt as the result of the regiment's presence here this week, marked the eve of the artillerymen's departure on the return hike to Camp Kearny. The presentation was made by Chairman R. L. Bisby of the Entertainment Committee to Col. Webb immediately following a concert by the regimental band at Birch Park this evening, and wild cheering greeted the ceremony. Col. Webb accepted the token with a few appropriate words, expressing the regiment's appreciation of the courtesies extended them during their visit here.

On one side of the cup is inscribed: "From the Citizens of Santa Ana to Col. Webb, 145th (First Utah) Field Artillery, June 8, 1918," and the opposite side bears the inscription: "To 145th F. A. Officers and Men—You came to us as strangers. You won our hearts. You leave as our adopted sons."

The artillery regiment breaks camp early Sunday morning, and will march around the head of Newport Bay to Balboa Island, where camp will be pitched by noon. Free dancing, bathing suits and accommodations, and ice cream for dinner, are some of the things the men will enjoy at the hands of Newport and Balboa folk. Monday the regiment will march along the coast to Laguna Beach, where they will camp Monday night and where a dance will be given for them.

"The people of those coast cities have invited us to return that way," said Capt. Woolley, in command of the camp in the absence of Col. Webb, today, "and in the light of the superb treatment accorded us as we came through on our way north, and in view of our enjoyment of their hospitality, there could be but one answer. The manner in which our regiment has been received in Orange county, the opening of your homes to them, has done more to strengthen them in their faith in what they have as soldiers set out to do than anything that has occurred since their arrival from Utah. It has been a wonderful demonstration of the fact that the hearts of the American people are back of the boys. It is a service that the officers and men will never forget."

FIREBUG WORKING IN ORANGE COUNTY.

ATTEMPTED DESTRUCTION OF HAY BARNS ATTRIBUTED TO ALLEGED I.W.W.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, June 8.—The south end of Orange county is being combed today by officers and ranchers in search of an alleged I.W.W., who is held responsible for two attempts to start fires on the Oscar Rosenbaum ranch at San Juan Capistrano, upon which a large barn filled with hay was destroyed last year in an incendiary fire. Fire was discovered in a pile of straw against the side of one of the barns and again in a stubble field, but both were extinguished in their incipiency, and little damage resulted.

An examination of these fires disclosed some sacks evidently soaked in some kind of greasy inflammable material. The wanderer whose actions have aroused suspicion bought some old and spoiled suet at the El Toro meat market the other day, and it is thought he tried to use this in starting fires on the Rosenbaum place.

MONROVIA BOARD PRACTICING THRIFT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, June 8.—With the single exception of the superintendent, Thomas E. Thompson, the faculties of Monrovia High and grammar schools have been re-elected en masse. Mr. Thompson, who went to law with the school board last year to retain his post as head of the system, ends his five-year contract July 1, and will not be asked to return. Following the plan of war conservation, the school trustees propose to divide up the work of superintendent among the various principals, and for the present at least do away with the position entirely, thus saving the system $2400 a year.

Phalen, and will be assigned as an anaesthetist at the base hospital. She has practiced medicine fourteen years.

The mother holds the world's record with 41.01 pounds of butter and 1005.80 pounds of milk for a seven-day period.

The seller was A. C. Hardy, Brookville, Ontario, and the buyer E. A. Stuart, operating farms at Oconomowoc, Wis., and Seattle, Wash.

PACIFIC ELECTRIC MEDIATOR NAMED.

CAPT. CONNELL WILL ACT FOR GOVERNMENT IF DIFFICULTIES ARISE.

Capt. Charles T. Connell, Federal Mediator, has been assigned by the government to adjust any difficulties which may arise between the management of the Pacifi Electric Railway and the unions which are trying to get a foothold among the employees of the road. Announcement of Mr. Connell's appointment was made last night at an open mass meeting at Burbank Hall, held to encourage trainmen to join the union. There was an attendance of 200.

The meeting was addressed by A. N. Miller, who is doing the organization work; W. J. Clark, a Pacific Electric employee, who acted as chairman; R. A. Edwards, representing the Grand Lodge of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; J. F. Smith, past president of Local No. 808 of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; W. B. Harrison, J. B. Dale, an organizer who has been active in trying to get unionism into the Los Angeles public schools; J. F. Jacobson, local chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and D. Densmore, Grand Chief of the local lodge Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

The speakers declared that 500 Pacific Electric motormen have joined the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and 900 trainmen have joined the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. The speakers declared that already the Pacific Electric is dropping men who have joined the union. Organizer Miller sent a telgram on May 29 to President Wilson, notifying him that an attempt was being made to unionize the employees of the Pacific Electric and the appointment of Connell is the result.

TEACHING THRIFT.

Three Precincts Will be Organized At Meeting to be Held Tuesday Evening.

In order that Mexican women may be properly instructed in food conservation, save food in their kitchens, three precincts will be organized Tuesday night by Dr. J. Z. Uriburu, prominent in Americanization work among the Spanish people here.

"Many of the poorer class women have been unable to understand why they receive 'black' flour with their white flour, and have thrown it out through ignorance of methods of using it. We shall co-operate with the Food Commission by teaching them," said Dr. Uriburu yesterday. "Other patriotic work will be taken up with them as the various Red Cross and Liberty Loan drives and the Thrift Stamp campaigns come along. They will all be encouraged to learn English as an essential part of their Americanization."

Committees will be formed at the Bronson House, at the Plaza, and at the Methodist Settlement House, in order to reach the Mexicans in each district.

FOR MINIMUM WAGE.

State Industrial Commission Members Hold Conference With Women Workers.

A conference of workers in hotels, cafeterias, restaurants and other lines for which a minimum wage has not as yet been fixed, was held last night in Symphony Hall, No. 232 South Hill street, under the direction of Mrs. Katherine P. Edson of the State Industrial Welfare Commission. Mrs. Edson has already conferred with employers in these lines.

Workers last night stated that the average wage in these lines is $1 a day, and in some cases seventy-five and fifty cents a day. Mrs. Edson stated that undoubtedly the commission will, before August 1, fix a minimum wage in these industries, at not less than the present minimum wage of $9.60 a week, established for other lines of unskilled work, most of the employees concerned being women.

NEEDED THE FURNITURE.

So Girl Took it from Other Homes to Make Room Livable, She Tells Police.

Charged with stealing furniture from surrounding homes, May Muller, 20 years old, was arrested by the police yesterday and lodged in the City Jail. The girl told a pathetic story when questioned by Policewoman J. A. Barton. She said she took the things to make her room at No. 906½ East Ninth street livable. With only $2 left, which she paid for the rent on the unfurnished room, the girl was tempted to steal the chairs and other things she is charged with taking.

Miss Muller said she came here from Denver and sought work in the moving pictures, but without success.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

TROY (N. Y.) June 8.—A fast mohogany cruiser for the use of President Wilson will be launched next week at the plant of a Watervliet boat building company.

CAMPAIGN FOR U.S.C. NEARING ITS GOAL.

NEARLY EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS PLEDGED UP TO SUNDOWN LAST NIGHT.

The territory covered by the million-dollar campaign for the University of Southern California reaches from Merced on the north to San Diego on the south. It is divided into five districts—Fresno district, Long Beach district, San Diego district, Pasadena district and Los Angeles district. The campaign will close at midnight on the 12th inst.

The two districts supposed to contain more wealth and more Methodist money than any other part of this great territory covered by the campaign are the Los Angeles and Pasadena districts. These are now racing neck and neck.

A fine letter of recognition of the work done by the University of Southern California came to President Bovard yesterday, from the University of New York. Arthur Torrence, who took his degree in divinity at commencement here last Thursday, and who is an alumnus of the college of liberal arts of the University of Southern California, took his Ph. D. last year at the old and honored New York University. The letter from New York to President Bovard said:

"If you have any more students like Arthur Torrence, we have a scholarship for one next year. Torrence was a good product and we want more of that kind."

Up to sundown last night, the amount reported at the jubilee office in the Tajo Building was $792,817.

PLAN TO COUNTERACT I.W.W. INFLUENCES.

Spanish-speaking People Gather at Plaza to Hear Wholesome Addresses and Music.

Several hundred Mexicans and Spaniards heard addresses in their own language last night at the Plaza, delivered by prominent Spanish-speaking men who are anxious to stamp out I.W.W.ism among the ignorant classes and put Americanism in its place.

Egbert Adams of the Playground Commission is foremost in the work, this being the third weekly programme he has arranged. Hereafter the Plaza meetings will be held every other Saturday. Joaquin Robledo, a young man who has worked among his people for the Red Cross and Liberty Loan, acted as chairman last night.

Many songs were sung in Spanish, including solos by A. G. Aldama and Jose Sanchez, the latter a pupil of Florencio Constantino, and national and folk dances were given. The principal speakers were Ramon S. Arriola, Vice-Consul here for Mexico; Dr. J. Z. Uriburu, chairman of the Spanish-speaking Committee for the Americanization of Foreigners, and Enrique Acosta, who told his audience of the necessity of co-operation of the Mexican people with America.

SCHWAB AND PRESS PRAISED BY HURLEY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 8.—Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, last night at a joint banquet of the Association of National Advertisers and the Audit Bureau of Circulations, paid tributes to Charles M. Schwab, head of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and the press.

Mr. Hurley characterized Mr. Schwab as a typical American citizen and said that when he asked him to join the government and leave his own business, Mr. Schwab replied:

"Mr. Hurley, I am a soldier. If the government wants me, nothing else counts with me."

Mr. Hurley said that he had found the support of the press one of the greatest factors of progress in his work. He said that "from the beginning I have believed that the American people should be fully informed of the difficulties which were in the way."

MAKES CASE WORSE.

Alleged Offer of Bribe to Arresting Officer Adds to Charge Against Woman.

An alleged attempt to bribe Patrolman J. H. Frilot when he arrested her and a man on a charge of violating the rooming-house ordinance in a bungalow court on New High street yesterday only added to the troubles of Isabel Rives. The patrolman, according to the police, caught the woman and Martin Lemes in a room, and was taking them to the station when the girl offered him $25, with a promise of $25 more later on, if he would discharge her.

The officer brought his prisoners to the station, and there lodged an additional charge of attempted bribery against Miss Rives. Lemes was taken to Judge Chesebro's court and fined $25 or twenty-five days in jail.

PRESIDENT FAVORS A LIMIT TO WAR TALK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—When the Senate today resumed consideration of the Underwood resolution to limit debate during the war, Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, the minority leader, said he believed the resolution was offered to meet the wishes of President Wilson.

"The President wanted the rule changed," said the Senator, "and that is the reason for it, I think."

Both Senator Gallinger and Senator Sherman of Illinois, Republican, insisted that the present cloture rule is adequate.

TONNAGE TO EUROPE NOT HURT BY U-BOATS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Cereal foodstuffs shipped from North America to the Allies during May, aggregated 700,278 tons, of which wheat and wheat products constituted 371,253 tons, the Food Administration estimated last night.

In April, shipments were 836,034 tons.

COLORED PATRIOT.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The sense of uncertainty which war brings to us all was well expressed by a colored citizen the other day, who said that he felt as if he had one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel.

This cheerful epigram is characteristic of the happy-go-lucky and courageous spirit in which many American negroes are facing the war. It is a well-known fact that they have furnished their share of the fighting force, both officers and men. The way in which negro civilians, and especially negro women, are supporting the war policies at home is not so well known. The Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense here in Washington is enthusiastic over the co-operation it is receiving from colored women. In the South, especially, their part is important. Of 70,000 women who registered for war service in New Orleans 22,137 were colored.

The response of the negroes to the nation's war need is the more creditable because they have been the object of a special propaganda by enemy aliens. Spies, traveling in the guise of book agents and insurance solicitors, have sought to mislead the colored population by a series of the most absurd falsehoods. Colored people have been warned not to deposit their money in the banks because it would be confiscated by the government. They have been told that food conservation is stinginess, and therefore contemptible. They have also been informed that if the Germans captured the United States the colored population would be much better treated than now. It would have a country of its own, probably the State of Texas, with a sort of German protectorate over it. These agents have also sought to make them believe, like the Indian quoted by President Wilson, that a war for democracy means simply a war for the benefit of the Democratic party.

This particular brand of the German propaganda seems to have been based upon a serious underestimate of the negro's intelligence and of his loyalty as a citizen. For the colored population everywhere has given ample proof of its patriotism.

Patriotic work among colored people is being carried on through a variety of agencies. In Maryland the government has appointed a colored Council of National Defense, which is doing excellent work. In Baltimore a colored patriotic mass meeting was recently held, at which 1000 negroes were present. In many States negro societies are using their organizations for patriotic work, while in other States subsidiaries of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense have been organized.

Negro women have shown a special aptitude for the conservation and production of food. There are thousands of war gardens cultivated by negroes, who are especially fond of gardening anyway. Here in Washington it is noticeable that there are few negro backyards which do not produce something. In some cases bricks and paving stone have been laboriously dug up in order that the soil may be planted.

Food conservation begins at home, and colored housekeepers are doing their share of it. The younger generation especially are competent and thrifty housewives, because they have been taught household economics and cooking in the colored schools.

A most significant and important part of the food conservation programme is the signing of Food Administration conservation cards by negro cooks. Everywhere south of Mason's and Dixon's line the meals of Americans in homes, hotels and restaurants are prepared by colored men and women. The food of half the nation is really in their hands. For the mistress of the house to sign a food conservation pledge is interesting as an evidence of patriotism, but when the cook goes in for food conservation something is really going to be saved for the Allies.

That these colored women are really in earnest about the conservation of food is shown by the fact that many of their clubs and societies are taking up the study of the subject. Especially distinguished work has been done by the Rosebud Study Club of Portland, Or., which has not only taken up the subject of food conservation, but has prepared and published an original war cook book to be sold for patriotic purposes.

In Florida splendid work has been done by a colored woman named Bertha White, who opened a canning kitchen to teach colored women how to preserve perishable foods. This canning kitchen has now attained a wide influence and has become a sort of clearinghouse for all lines of patriotic endeavor among the colored women of Florida.

Mrs. Pattie Semple of Louisville, Ky., is a white woman who is devoting most of her time to encouraging war work among her colored neighbors. She has taught the importance of war-time economy not only in food, but also in dress. Negro women have quickly grasped the idea that display must be sacrificed to economy and comfort in war-time garments.

Colored women are also working for the comfort of their men in the training camps no less enthusiastically than white women. They are making knitted garments, bandages and hospital supplies. Colored laundresses have made their special abilities of service to the government by laundering the Red Cross hospital shirts.

An especially fine patriotic record has been made by the colored women of Chester, Pa. They raised $400 for the Red Cross, packed 210 boxes of foods and comforts for the colored soldiers from their town, and presented the men with a Victrola, forty records and a large supply of chewing gum.

Colored soldiers who have no relatives to look out for their comfort have been adopted and cared for by societies of colored women.

In the training camp for colored soldiers the same problems have arisen as in all of the other cantonments. Mothers, sisters and sweethearts have flocked to the camps and it has been necessary to provide for them. At Camp Upton a hostess house has been opened by the colored branch of the Y.W.C.A. under especially prominent auspices. Mrs. Roosevelt was present at the opening and made a contribution for the support of the house, and Mrs. Booker T. Washington also sent a check.

The child welfare work which has been organized by the children's bureau and the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense as a patriotic measure has been taken up enthusiastically by colored women. All over the country colored babies are being weighed and measured; colored visiting nurses are taking the field, and day nurseries are being established for the benefit of colored mothers who have gone into war work.

Gerard Corrman, the new Premier of Belgium, in formally notifying Secretary Lansing, today, of his appointment, expressed the profound gratefulness of the Belgian people for the aid given them by the United States and declared that the fact that the American and Belgian soldiers now are fighting side by side is an "auspicious harbinger" of the fruitful relations of the two countries when peace comes.

FINDS ITALIANS WELL SUPPLIED WITH ARMS.

AMERICAN ORDNANCE EXPERT STUDIES PRODUCTION OVER THERE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

HEADQUARTERS ITALIAN ARMY, May 11.—Gen. Crozier, of the American ordnance department and member of the Advisory War Board, has spent a week of observation along the Italian front and at the various large centers where artillery and munitions are produced.

Besides seeing Gen. Diaz and the Duke of Aosta he visited a number of the corps and division commanders along the mountain and Piave fronts, going into the trenches and among the men, discussing the many questions of equipment and supplies and specially observing the resources in guns. His impressions on the general condition of affairs were entirely favorable.

The production of artillery in Italy has been greatly intensified within recent months and the present equipment of light, field and heavy guns is probably as good or better now than it was before the reverse of last fall. The great industrial plants of Genoa and Milan have doubled and quadrupled their output in guns, trench mortars, rifles, machine guns, the production of mortars increasing sevenfold during the year.

Similar extensive development has been going on in the production of mines and armor for naval construction and in the output of airplanes, ninety establishments being now equipped to turn out complete airplanes.

AMERICAN LABOR MEN SEE LONDON'S SLUMS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 25.—A "slumming tour" around London was one of the diversions provided for the American labor delegation soon after their arrival here. The places visited were London's Chinatown, several Salvation Army hostels and the Thames Embankment. Under the guidance of Commander C. C. Perkins of Scotland Yard, the party went to the famous Limehouse Police Station, where they were shown in detail the police system of registering aliens.

They were then taken through the Chinese district, where they saw rice ground in the most primitive manner by a stone turned by hand, shook hands with Chinatown's two Chinese babies, ate sweet cake and drank tea in the district's most pretentious Chinese restaurant.

BRITISH ANXIOUS AS TO RUSS SECURITIES.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 18.—British holders of Russian securities are showing increasing uneasiness in consequence of the financial chaos prevailing in Petrograd.

It is being suggested that the government be asked to take steps for the formation of a committee to act with the Board of Trade for the purpose of protecting Russian interests held in this country.

GREAT SCARCITY OF SERVANTS IN BERLIN.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—So many German women and girls are now working in munitions factories, according to German newspapers, that there are now practically no domestic servants to be had in Greater Berlin.

The Labor Exchange of the metropolitan area reports that on the average there is only one servant to every five places vacant.

CAN'T SELL BOOZE TO RETURNED SOLDIERS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MELBOURNE, May 4.—An Australian parliamentary committee, after exhaustive investigations, has recommended a bill prohibiting the supply by saloon-keepers of intoxicating drink to any returned soldier who is under medical care, the penalty for the offense to be so severe as to act as a real deterrent.

Possible, But——

OVERSEAS BY AIRPLANE?

Inventor Says it Can be Done at High Speed.

Railroad Trains Better for Short Journeys.

Perpetual Safety in the Air? No Such Thing.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 10.—Airplane trips from England to America are quite feasible by use of a machine traveling day and night at the rate of 100 miles an hour, declared F. Page, inventor of a type of machine named for him, in a recent statement to the representative of the Daily Express.

"I have received a cablegram from Canada congratulating me on the construction of a machine to travel to and from America, continued the inventor, "but I have no such machine on hand.

"The trip would be from Ireland to New York, via Newfoundland, being 1700 miles. An alternative journey to America would be via the Azores. On the steady 100-miles-an-hour basis you can compute all the long-distance runs that occur to you, including week-end trips to China and Peru.

"For short distances, such as London to Manchester, I am not inclined to think that airplanes will take the places of railways unless in case of pressing urgency. A comfortable first-class carriage of a fast train will continue to be a more usual course of travel. The airplane has a great advantage of speed, but it has severe handicaps in the way of wind and fog and other adverse climatic conditions.

"I do not think that after the war wealthy men will take up private airplanes. Few people can afford private yachts, and a pleasure airplane would be as expensive as a yacht.

"There is no such thing as perpetual safety in the air, and this is bound to have an effect on the average man. I am speaking, of course, of the immediate future only. In the 'long results of time' there are infinite possibilities in the evolution of aviation.

"There is an immense future for aircraft, as aids to the world's prosperity, but what I call the tourist idea of 'round the world in forty hours' leads nowhere and means nothing.

"In the course of time bigger machines will be built, with more powerful engines to direct them, but I can see no immediate prospect of turning out airplanes that will carry as many passengers as ocean liners. We must continue to beware of hot air in airplane prophecies."

ANCIENT LORE IS TOLD IN STORY BY ESKIMO.

TALE AS VIVID TO NATIVES OF ALASKA AS ULYSSES TO THE GREEKS.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

NOME (Alaska) May 11.—"Adventures of Ki-ya-yuk-tua-look," a tale of the wanderings of a character in Eskimo lore, was the only article published in a recent issue of the Eskimo, a native school publication issued here. The story, written by a native, is believed to be as vivid to the natives of this country as the stories of Ulysses were to the Greeks and the sagas to the Norsemen.

Joe Sekonik, an Eskimo, the author of the tale, is said to have spent much time gathering his material from the old people of the Kavalina section near here, many of whom heard it from their fathers. According to the tale, Ki-ya-yuk-tua-look, the hero of the story, was the father of the Kavalina tribe.

The hero wandered into many parts of Northwestern Alaska, meeting strange adventures, fighting hostile natives and finally killing a giant. The tale tells of life of the nearly Eskimos, of their belief in magic and their harsh treatment of strangers.

GERMAN PRISONERS TRY DARING ESCAPE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 18.—A daring attempt to escape from England by crossing the English Channel in an ordinary rowboat was made the other day by two escaped German prisoners. They were caught on a dark night by a patrol at a point on the English coast nearest Zeebrugge, their objective.

The prisoners who were dressed as seafaring men, wearing blue-serge suits and high boots, had traveled about sixty miles from their camp near Salisbury Plain. One, who spoke English fluently, made no secret of their intention. When searched they had between them nearly the equivalent of $5 in silver. About a mile along the beach from the spot where they were captured they had concealed, beneath a boat, bags of biscuits, together with bread and fruit, a razor, shaving brush and a large bottle of water.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The first link in a chain of improvements, which, when finished in their entirety, are bound to work a tremendous benefit to Los Angeles, was forged last week when the new bridge across the Los Angeles River at Ivanhoe Station was opened to the public. There are doubtless those in the city who can hardly realize even yet that this bridge is a reality and who may want to have a look at it and drive over it before they will be entirely convinced. The bridge, nevertheless, after years of agitation, is at last a fact.

Before the span can fulfill its real mission in the general traffic scheme, of course, the three connecting streets between Ivanhoe Station and the northern end of Lakeshore avenue will have to be improved in such a way as to be made serviceable. With the bridge finished, however, there will be a real inducement upon the part of the property owners along these streets to do the work. It has also impressed the Fact and Comment man, too, that the city and county of Los Angeles should help out on this expense, just as they chipped in together to pay for the bridge. This seems reasonable when the wide-spreading benefits of the bridge in combination with the streets to be improved are taken into consideration.

The new bridge brings Brand boulevard in Glendale down across the river to Los Angeles. Lakeshore avenue in this city now runs as a wide, paved thoroughfare to [illegible] avenue. With the grading, paving and widening of the latter avenue and the two short avenues, [illegible] and Rowena, that extend from it in almost a straight line to the bridge, there will have been created in completed form a new through boulevard between Los Angeles and the whole of the Glendale, Eagle Rock, Crescenta, Canada and Western San Fernando valleys. This boulevard will cut down the present shortest traveling distance from this city to the points mentioned by three miles.

The bridge, of course, is serving the immediate purpose of enabling people to get back and forth between Glendale and the district on the south side of the river. To a certain extent it is bound to be used by those going from Glendale to Los Angeles proper, or vice versa. Although unpaved and badly in need of grading, the present streets between the river and the northern end of Lakeshore avenue are passable and by using them the driver who is willing to stand a little jolting can save time as against other improved, but roundabout, routes.

The Los Angeles-Glendale boulevard, when completed, will not only greatly shorten the traveling distance to the rapidly-developing Glendale district, but will afford to the automobile driving public a new scenic route for pleasure trips. The avenue lies for a considerable part of its length along Silver Lake reservoir, the ninety-acre body of water that is now a part of the park system of Los Angeles and the shores of which have been beautified by the planting of hundreds of trees. Nearly all of the route is lined with patches of woodland and the bordering hills are among the most beautiful in the city. Most important of all in this connection is the fact that the route leads on a direct line to the main entrance of Griffith Park, the comparative inaccessibility of which has for years been the source of disappointment to the citizens of Los Angeles.

The Other Links.

With the completion of the projected Second-street tunnel, the new inter-city boulevard will have a direct outlet into the downtown business section of Los Angeles. This opening through Bunker Hill, of course, is the key to the fullest usefulness of a number of contemplated improvements affecting West, Northwest and North Los Angeles and the territory adjoining them. Without it the Los Angeles-Glendale route, the West First street-boulevard and the many important highways tapping these main trunk thoroughfares will have to make a circle around the south end of Bunker Hill to get into the business district.

It is something to have made a start in the great programme of street development so necessary to the much-too-isolated portions of Los Angeles and its suburbs west and north of the hill barrier, and the completion of the Ivanhoe bridge represents just such a start. Those who have a real and earnest interest in the future of Los Angeles will place no stones in the way of the early carrying out of the rest of the programme.

Special Notice to Property Owners

Property owners in the City of Los Angeles can be assured that they will receive notices of any and all proceedings affecting their property in the way of public improvements, if they will furnish the City Clerk in the City Hall their address, and a list of properties owned by them, thus avoiding extra expense that may be attached to such assessments, where correct names and addresses do not appear on the City Tract and Lot Record.

LARGE AUTOMOBILE BUILDING LEASED.

GROWING FIRM SECURES NEW QUARTERS—OTHER DEALS REPORTED.

R. A. Rowan & Co. report having closed a lease whereby the firm of Owen Bros. & Wells, conducting a large auto livery business in this city, has secured for a long term of years a new building erected by Charles C. Chapman of Fullerton at Nos. 512 to 520 South San Pedro street. The structure covers a ground area of 115x180 feet and is of brick construction. The lessees take the entire building with the exception of a small room at the south end, which has been leased to Longley & Son, plumbing contractors. The company securing the building started out in 1912 under the name of Owen Bros., beginning business with two cars. R. E. Wells, formerly general manager of the Salt Lake Railroad, associated himself with the firm a little later. The firm now operates forty-five cars and employs seventy-five men.

The leasing department of R. A. Rowan & Co. also report the following additional leases, covering varying terms of years:

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company to Jacob Salzman, storeroom at No. 531 South Spring street, for clothing store, $15,000 rental; Churchill Company to College Boot Shop, storeroom at No. 557 South Broadway, to be used as a retail shoe store, $25,000 rental; United Cigar Stores Company, to Harry Scollinos, storeroom at No. 255 South Spring street, to be used for restaurant, grocery and candy store, $15,000 rental; J. The Tallest Structures of Their Kinds in Downtown Los Angeles.

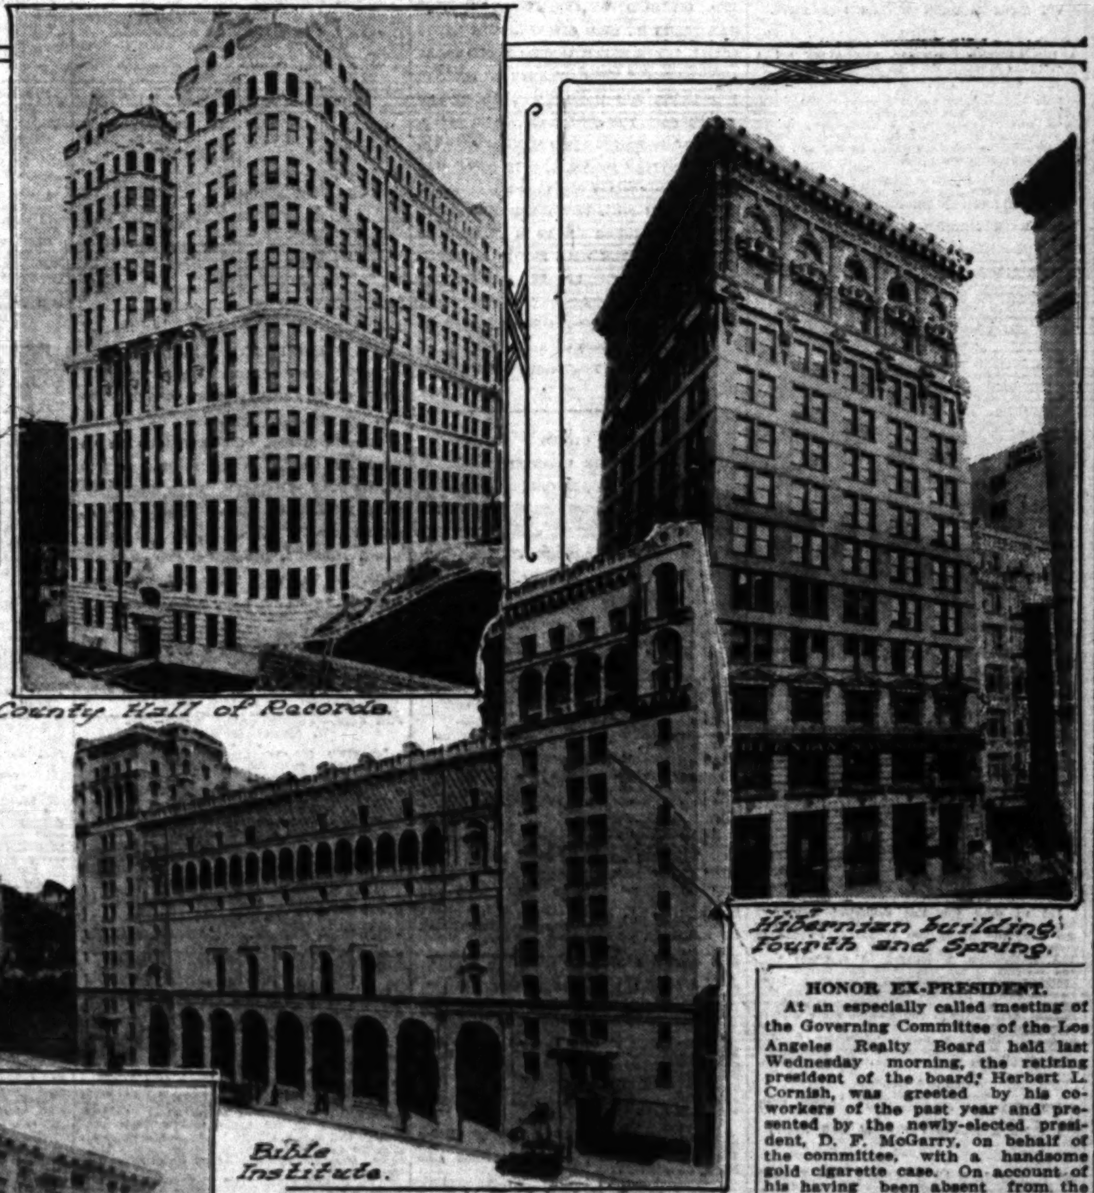
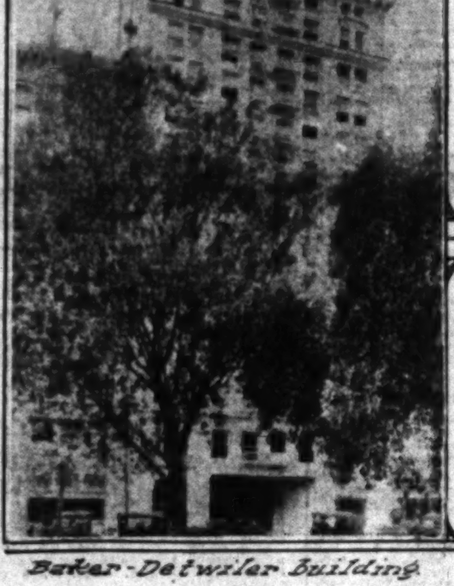
Grauman Theater, Third and Broadway



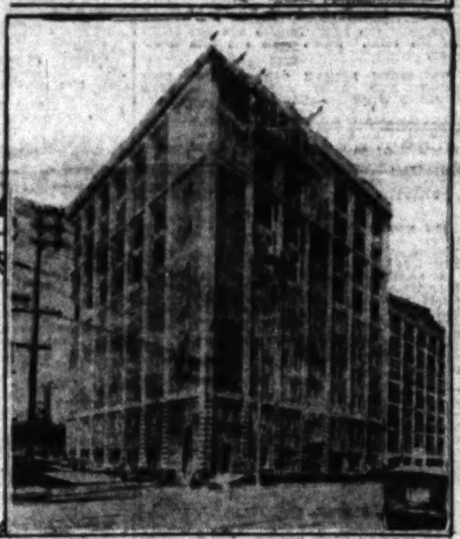
County Hall of Records.

Hibernian building, Fourth and Spring.

Bible Institute.



Baker-Detwiler building.



Peck & Hills Furniture Company plant.

Some cornices that scrape legal sky lines.

Los Angeles has had several legal height limits for buildings of different types in the last decade and a half, having arrived at the present uniform limit of 150 feet only within the past few months. The Hibernian Building, tallest in the city, is 180 feet high and of steel frame construction, and was started just before the limit for buildings of this type was fixed at 150 feet more than ten years ago. The Baker-Detwiler Building, steel frame and 150 feet high, has the distinction of having the most stories (fourteen) of any structure in the city, having two more than the taller Hibernian Building. The many other 150-foot buildings of the city range from ten to thirteen stories. The new building housing the Grauman Theater is 150 feet and steel frame, as is also the Hall of Records, which is the tallest public structure in the city. The Bible Institute, which is the city's tallest religious edifice, is of reinforced concrete and 133 feet high, having been erected when this was the height limit for concrete construction. The tallest factory in Los Angeles, the furniture plant of the Peck & Hills Company, is of like height and structural type. Most of the concrete buildings of downtown Los Angeles were built when the limit for concrete construction was 120 feet. Although the limit for all buildings is now 150 feet, not all structures can be built that high. Under a new State law, no hotel is allowed to go higher than one and one-half times the width of a fronting street. There are now a number of 150-foot steel frame and 120-foot and 133-foot concrete hotels in the city.

HONOR EX-PRESIDENT.

At an especially called meeting of the Governing Committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board held last Wednesday morning, the retiring president of the board, Herbert L. Cornish, was greeted by his co-workers of the past year and presented by the newly-elected president, D. F. McGarry, on behalf of the committee, with a handsome gold cigarette case. On account of his having been absent from the city on the occasion of the recent annual meeting of the board, Mr. Cornish was at this time also presented by ex-President W. W. Mines, on behalf of the board, with an elaborately-engrossed set of resolutions attesting appreciation of the capable and satisfactory manner in which the affairs of the organization had been conducted during his term of office. Mr. Cornish is now giving his whole time to Red Cross work.

HOTEL CHANGES HANDS.

E. W. Cason & Co., associated hotel brokers, have negotiated an important hotel transfer, whereby the furniture and lease of the 120-room Hotel Modesto at Modesto, owned by Hogin & Crow, have passed into the hands of Amon J. Barnes of Los Angeles. The purchase price is given at $25,000. At the same time a new lease was entered into for a long term of years, at an average annual rental of $7500. Mr. Barnes has been a resident of Los Angeles for the past twelve years, and prior to coming here was proprietor of the Menger Hotel at San Antonio, Tex., and later on the Bexar, in the same city.

FOR SALE—

A REAL BARGAIN!

This charming COLONIAL COTTAGE is located on one of the best streets in the WILSHIRE DISTRICT. Six rooms, just completed, and contains every modern appointment; the simple, dignified design, with a free use of colonial detail, strikes a fresh note among the many "real estate houses" built from "stock" plans. The colonial influence is carried into the interior, the delicate moldings, red brick fireplace, corner china, closets, unusual buffet, fluted columns, old ivory woodwork, give that bright, homelike atmosphere so characteristic of this type of architecture. It's a quality house that will stand intelligent inspection. The price, lower than similar surrounding places, is $5500.

Designed and built by JOHN HARNISH, a guarantee of honest dependable construction. Open this afternoon. Located at 110 N. RIDGEWOOD PLACE.
(Ridgewood is first street west of Wilton.)

FOR SALE—RESIDENCE—
LOCATION—In the choicest, most artistic, close-in residence neighborhood and most charming spot in Los Angeles, with winding drives, among picturesque surroundings, commanding a sight of the beautiful city of Hollywood, an unobstructed view of the great teeming city, and a sweeping survey of mountain ranges, foothills and ocean unequaled from any other residence location in California—out of the noise and confusion of the business section, in the purer atmosphere of a higher altitude. In this land of towering mountains and beautiful foothill country, many have gone far beyond the confines of the city to satisfy that intense longing for scenic outlook, pure air and mental uplift. My villa, however, is located in a neighborhood which enjoys the matchless climate of Hollywood, yet it is located within 15 to 20 minutes by any of the Hollywood, Laurel Canyon, Colegrove or Sherman cars, or is reached by automobile from the center of town within 12 minutes. The view by night is one of the most brilliant night scenes possible around Los Angeles. The lights of the Soldiers' Home and the beaches, the scintillating flash of moving cars, the searchlight on Mt. Lowe and the myriad lights of the great city form an electric display grand and inspiring.
HOUSE—Italian renaissance style, stucco on metal lath; 6 rooms, 9½ and 12-foot ceilings, all improvements. Garage same style as house.
GROUNDS—317 feet by 290, consisting of lawns, terraces, Grecian and sunken gardens, all kinds of fruit trees, rustic bridge, pergola, etc. Everything considered, this is one of the finest close-in places in Los Angeles. Come up and see the place and I will make price and terms very reasonable.

When a home like this is offered for sale, it is almost impossible to give a real description of it in an advertisement.
It should be enough for us to say that it is in an ideal location, surrounded by fine homes, on highest ground in town, and is a real bargain.
If such a statement does not arouse your enthusiasm enough to inspect the property, nothing would. We might add that the owner would consider vacant suburban property as part payment.

FOR SALE—THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW, WHEN others must sell; when general buying starts again you will pay twice the price of today.

The thing to buy is a grove of as pretty and profitable a tree as can be found in Los Angeles county—the famous Bartlett pear tree of the Littlerock and Palmdale region. It requires three irrigations a year—oranges, 6 and 7. You do not smudge, fumigate, nor fear frost; you can grow beans and the like between the rows.

Palmdale is on the great Mint Canyon Blvd., and its gravity water supply comes from the Sierra Madre snows. In this region a pear grove comes into bearing in the 5th and 6th years, and is held at $500 to $700 per acre; at full bearing it will yield from $300 to $500 an acre, gross, and has gone as high as $2000.

Because of war conditions we offer 125 acres in 10 and 20-acre tracts for $300 per acre, ⅓ cash and the balance on reasonable time at 6 per cent. 40 acres are bearing this—the 5th—year, and 85 will bear next year, assuring an income almost from the start. No trades will be considered. If we can't get the cash we prefer to keep the pears as the next best thing. Call or write for further information: OWNERS, 546 Wilcox Bldg., 2nd and Spring, Los Angeles.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

But don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling with large and expensive machines. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "Square of its diameter."

So drill smaller diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machine ever built for territories from 800 feet to 2500 feet deep. Write us for particulars and circular.

WE GET LOTS OF COMMENTS ON OUR ADS, and we also hear some criticism because we write (as they say) a lot of unnecessary stuff that don't get us anything. Well, we're not losing any sleep about what the critic thinks about us, the newspapers get their money for every ad we insert and it's our own money we spend, so they should worry. If any merchant has confidence enough to place his business or property in our hands to sell or exchange, and we think enough of it to handle it, we will write the most attractive ad we know how, and count the cost of the ad afterward. We will give the very best that is in us, and the best proof that we have not been total failures is the fact that we have been able to stand the test for six years. You who are reading this ad and have something to sell or want to buy or exchange something, remember that I am here at your service, and all I ask from you is that you do not ask me to do something that is impossible for any one else to do. COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Butter shows a decline of 1 cent for the week while egg prices are inclined to be weaker. The amount of eggs in storage is about 20 per cent. higher than this time last year with liberal shipments arriving. Slight declines in cheese early last week were offset by advances yesterday, leaving the average about the same. A careful distinction is being made between those who seek to hold cheese for legitimate trade reasons and those who wish to speculate, for it is realized that much of the new cheese being received now is not mature enough for retailing, being so soft that exposure to ordinary temperature is sure to result in spoilage. All who have need to store for these reasons are freely granted permits, but speculators are absolutely barred out. California fresh advanced a cent yesterday to 24, while block Swiss is up 2 cents to 38.

Lemons have made another advance to $8.25 per box for packed and $6.25 for loose and Valencia oranges are up to $7 per box and limes are practically out of the market. Cantaloupes are moving quite freely, a few carloads having been shipped. Ponies are firm at $3.25 while standards have declined 25 cents to $3.75 per crate. Lettuce is still somewhat scarce though the shipments coming in are of good quality, the price yesterday was $2 per crate. Green asparagus is up to 10@11 cents while celery is down to $1.75. Almonds are out of the market and roasted peanuts have advanced to 21 cents.

Poultry prices fluctuated both ways, the latter part of the week the average being downward. Young tom turkeys are selling at 27 cents and old toms at 25, which is also the quotation for hens. Young geese are bringing 23 cents and ducklings are firm at 28 and ducks at 23. Stags are up a cent to 14. Heavy hens are bringing 26 cents and light hens 22 cents. Small broilers are priced at 25 and 1¼ pounds up at 30 cents while fryers 2¼ pounds up and soft boned roasters 3 pounds and up are also quoted at 30 cents.

Receipts at the Produce Exchange yesterday were as follows: 345 cases of eggs, 1000 cases of Eastern eggs, 36,500 pounds of butter, 1850 pounds of cheese, 112 sacks of potatoes, 330 sacks of onions.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National Farm Loan Association of Los Angeles county, held in the offices of the company in the Bradbury Building yesterday afternoon a board of directors was elected consisting of the following men, E. Two Women and One Man Dead.

Are these the auto accident victims?

They were found by the police in a room at the Sherman Hotel believed to have been occupied by the two women killed. The hotel clerk identified the one on the right as Mrs. Dorothy Weidler (Mrs. R. Reynolds) and the other as Mrs. L. Smith (Mrs. G. Buck.)

Two Certainly.

DEAD IN MOTOR CRASH PARTIALLY IDENTIFIED.

TWO women and one man are dead, and another, the driver of the ill-fated machine, is facing at least ten weeks in the hospital as the result of the fatal accident early yesterday morning when a Pacific Electric car bound from Venice to Los Angeles struck the automobile near Fredericks Station on Washington boulevard. The machine was dragged more than 200 feet, two of its occupants instantly killed and the third one, believed to be Mrs. G. Buck of San Diego, also known as Mrs. L. Smith, died at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning at St. Catherine's Hospital, Santa Monica. According to Pat Fields, Montebello oil driller, the driver and owner of the wrecked Dodge car, he was only introduced to Mrs. Smith, or Buck, about fifteen minutes before the accident by Mrs. Dorothy Weidler, who was killed instantly. He recalled, however, that Mrs. Weidler addressed her as "Ruth." A note found on the person of the latter, apparently written by the hotel clerk at the Sherman Hotel, where the two women stayed, was to the effect that a "Mr. Smith" would return to see her.

Mrs. Weidler was today positively identified as the divorced wife of Jack Weidler, an Anaheim business man, now said to be in the United States Army. She was 25 years old and employed as a waitress at an Anaheim restaurant. The body of the fourth passenger was today identified by William P. Johnson of R.F.D. No. 2, Fullerton, an oil driller, as his son, Arthur Johnson, 18 years old, of the same address. Two bodies are at the O. A. Kirkelie morgue in Ocean Park and that of Mrs. Weidler at the Venice establishment of Bresee Bros. & Todd. A Corner's jury will view the remains at the latter place tomorrow morning and then go to the Kirkelie place for the inquest.

After an operation on Fields's fractured skull it was said at St. Catherine's Hospital that he will recover. He is also suffering from a compound fracture of the right leg, two broken ribs and a badly lacerated left arm, hand and shoulder. According to his story, he and young Johnson were about to leave Venice last night, after purchasing several bottles of beer and having been drinking at some of the Venice bars. They went to the auto park across from the St. Mark's Hotel and there, while looking for their car saw Mrs. Weidler, whom he said he had known for several years, seated at a neighboring lunch counter with the other young woman. He asked them to ride home, and after introductions, the invitation was accepted. He said this introduction occurred in a very poor light and that he would not have recognized the young woman again, as he did not get a good look at her. She immediately got into the rear seat of the car with Johnson, while Mrs. Weidler rode with the driver, hence he had no further opportunity to learn who she was. Another card found in the latter's effects was signed "Ruth Russell," or "Ruth Reynolds." That she is married, or has been married, is believed because she was wearing a wedding ring, also a Tiffany setting, from which the diamond was missing, evidently having been torn out by the force of the collision.

WHOLESALE LEASES.

Agents for New Los Angeles Street Building Report Placing of Several Tenants.

The W. Ross Campbell Company, through Richard C. Willis, of its leasing department, has just closed several deals with prominent wholesalers in the new ten-story fireproof wholesalers' and manufacturers' building recently completed on Los Angeles street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, by M. J. Connell.

S. Halff & Co. have leased a ground floor store with mezzanine and basement. The firm is engaged in the wholesaling of hosiery, gloves and underwear and was organized about four years ago.

Joseph Katzev will occupy commodious quarters on the fifth floor of the same building, moving from No. 347 South Spring street. He is a manufacturer of ladies' suits.

Scully Bros., manufacturers of gloves, formerly known as the Napa Glove Company, Napa, Cal., have secured space on the seventh floor of the building, which they hold under a long term lease. The firm in its new quarters will employ nearly 100 operators. The company is preparing to practically turn over its entire plant to the manufacturing of gloves for the government.

In addition to the foregoing deals, Mr. Willis reports having closed a lease to Butler Bros. of Chicago, said to be the largest wholesalers of general merchandise in the world, with district houses in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis and Dallas, and sales offices in forty other cities in the United States. The lease covers the ground floor at No. 729 South Los Angeles street, where display rooms and offices will be maintained.

CANNERY COMPLETED.

With over $5000 worth of special canning machinery installed the new rabbit canning factory of the Phair Canning Company at Florence avenue and Main street, is ready to begin operation. Gordon E. Phair, manager of the plant, states that the factory will turn out the first cans of rabbit next Wednesday and that an average of at least 10,000 cans will be shipped from the factory weekly. This is the first factory devoted to the exclusive canning of rabbits to be built in the United States, according to Mr. Phair.

The cannery is on the New Homeland tract, recently placed upon the market by Edward D. Silent and where rabbit raising has become an established industry. The subdivision comprises several hundred lots and is being handled by I. N. Gillis as sales manager.

STAR IN THE WINDOW FOR THE BOY "OVER THERE."

It caught the morning sunbeam as I was passing by,
It told its loving story as evening shades drew nigh,
Breathed the message ere so lightly, it gripped my heartstrings tightly;
It made that modest cottage seem the proudest on the square.
'Twas an emblem and a token of a chain of love unbroken,
'Twas a star in the window for the boy "Over There."

'Twas a star in the window for the boy "Over There,"
'Twas a star in the window for the boy "Over There,"
Breathed the message ere so lightly, it touched the heartstrings tightly;
'Twas a hope, an inspiration and a prayer,
An emblem and a token of a chain of love unbroken,
'Twas a star in the window for the boy "Over There."

Loving fingers traced it, loving hands had placed it, loving eyes watched o'er it day by day,
Mid the colors of Old Glory where it told its simple story, and little children told it at their play.
Near the woodbine and the rose, where the honeysuckle grows, and loving lips oft lisp't the tender prayer;
Oh, angels bright, watch o'er him; Oh, God of might, restore him,
To the star in the window for the boy "Over There."

Today a band of patriots marched forty thousand strong,
Ten thousand banners waving as they gaily marched along,
But the noblest sight recorded by angel pen this day was a bit of bunting flying and a lady old and gray.
Her trembling footsteps tottered 'neath her somber gown of black,
But her heart never faltered as she trod the beaten track,
For aloft she held an emblem where it stroked her thin gray hair,
'Twas a star in a banner for the boy "Over There."

Put a star in the window for the boy "Over There,"
Put a star in the window for the boy "Over There,"
Breathe its message ere so lightly; 'twill clutch the heartstrings tightly;
'Tis a hope, an inspiration and a prayer,
An emblem and a token of a chain of love unbroken;
Put a star in the window for the "Boy Over There."

Quarrel.

BONE-DRY MEN RAP GANDIER.

Federation Issues Circulars to Voters of the State.

Say Anti-Saloon Leader is Working for Wets.

Prohibitionists not Helping Initiative Move.

Thousands of circular letters will be mailed today by the Bone Dry Federation of California, which has its headquarters in Los Angeles, to the voters of this State. The circular protests against what it declares are unfair methods to defeat the constitutional right of petition. In it is a strong attack against D. M. Gandier, secretary of the California Ratification Committee, which body at a meeting in Fresno last February decided not to attempt to carry a bone-dry measure in California at the next election, but to direct all its energies to the election of a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Senators and Assemblymen who will ratify national prohibition.

Despite the fact that in this convention there were representatives of practically all the temperance forces of California, the Bone Dry Federation of California has placed its bone-dry petitions in the field, and, in this circular, it bitterly attacks Dr. Gandier because of his attitude of hostility to the bone-dry measure.

But now come officials of the Prohibition party of California, who declare that "We stand by the action of the Fresno convention."

PROHIBITION PARTY STAND.

It was stated at Prohibition party headquarters, in the American Bank Building, yesterday, that the party is making no move to support the circulation of the bone-dry petitions, and its attitude, as shown in its recent State conference at Pacific Grove, is one of such sympathy for the ratification of national prohibition that it has been willing to refrain from making party nominations in districts where they might affect the election of men from other parties who stand for ratification of the national measure.

The Prohibition party of California held its State conference at Pacific Grove last Thursday. It was attended by 150 delegates, representing all parts of the State.

"Among other things for which this conference was notable," said J. C. Bell, campaign manager, yesterday, "was the evidence of absolute sincerity in the desire of the delegates to have the national prohibition amendment ratified. This was attested by the fact that they refrained from naming a candidate for Governor or for Lieutenant-Governor, pending the action of other parties, and should other party actions justify, there will be no Prohibition party nominations, but their support will be given to the men standing for a ratification of the national prohibition amendment.

"The same attitude will be taken in Senatorial and Assembly districts, where the nomination of a Prohibition party candidate might interfere with the election of a candidate of some other party, who is pledged to support the national prohibition ratification measure.

FOR WOMAN IN CONGRESS.

"For the balance of the ticket, exceptionally strong persons were selected as prospective candidates. A resolution was adopted asking Mrs. Stella B. Irvin of Riverside, president of the State W.C.T.U., to accept the nomination for Congress from the Eleventh District. Similar action has been taken by several other bodies, including the big commercial organization of Riverside and the State convention of the W.C.T.U.

"The conference at Pacific Grove adopted a patriotic and up-to-the-minute platform and sent memorials to President Wilson, the United States Senators and Mr. Hoover, urging the necessity of prohibition during the war in the interest of conservation."

Discussing the bone-dry petitions, Mr. Bell said yesterday that the Prohibition party has decided to keep hands off, but that if the measure does go on the ballot, then the party will work for its adoption.

The circular letter that is to be sent out today from the bone dry federation urges that the Fresno conference had no authority to pledge the people of the State, the churches or other organizations to support only the movement to secure ratification of the national prohibition measure, and urges that as the associated wine and beer industries have decided to work for the Rominger bill, it cannot be to the interest of those opposed to the liquor industry to support it. It charges that Dr. Gandier would lead the rank and file of the voters of California into the camp of an enemy.

DENOUNCES GANDIER.

The circular refers to Dr. Gandier's fourteen years of work for prohibition in California, and says:

"As the net result of fourteen years of effort, we find Mr. Gandier now indorsing a wet measure, fighting a dry one and sneaking into the prohibition tent under forced draft, instead of coming in with clean hands on his own merit. . . .

"What is to be thought of a general whose forces must ask on which side he expects to fight? Why does a bone-dry measure affect Mr. Gandier much as a red rag affects a mad bovine? What is there about a dry measure to make a dry man shy? Why does Mr. Gandier play Damon to the Pythias of the associated wine and beer industries?

. . . .

"'There is no reason in all the world why any really dry man or woman should oppose a dry movement. The Fresno convention had no authority and no disposition to prevent the exercise of a constitutional prerogative. It conferred on Mr. Gandier no autocratic power. It delegated to him neither the authority nor the disposition of the Kaiser. If the preachers of California are to follow Mr. Gandier and close their doors to the dry cause, then there is little chance to keep the church on the Lord's side. It cannot serve both God and Rominger."

WOMAN'S LAND ARMY GAINING RECRUITS.

PATRIOTIC RALLY IS TOLD FULL UNIT OF TEXAS TEACHERS IS TO ARRIVE HERE.

At the Woman's Land Army rally yesterday afternoon on the grounds of Huntington Hall, South Pasadena, where a benefit programme and auction had been arranged by Miss Florence Hausel, head of the school, the most interesting feature, after the prima donna, the pedigreed pigs and the Naval Band, was probably the little group of uniformed ushers, who were the girls, Mrs. Eastman announced, of the new Occidental College unit soon to be put out at actual field work.

The patriotic porkers, high bred prize stock contributed for the cause by Mrs. Anita Baldwin and Mrs. Earle Remington, brought nearly $100 at the tender age of nine and seven weeks, respectively. Son of a champion Tamworth sire, valued at $700, and an unbeaten blue ribbon mother, Mrs. Remington's piglet displayed a gallant and admired spirit, only equalled by the sleek Poland China from the Baldwin estate. Both evinced unmistakable eagerness in the cause of food production. To eat, and then to eat again—all for the noble cause of pork production—was plainly their version of the Hoover plan.

Songs by Mme. Mariska Aldrich, esthetic dancing by the Morgan dancers, and 'cello obligato by Robert Alter, won appreciation from the interested audience, which listened with patriotic sympathy, too, to the speeches of Mrs. Myrtle Shepherd Francis and Leslie Henry, who told of the governmental need of volunteer war service by women willing to enter the field of food production.

That the numbers of these recruits are daily increasing was attested by Mrs. Eastman, who announced that units and individuals are volunteering daily, and that she will have no difficulty in sending out the 750 women workers whom she has agreed to place between June 20 and July 10.

Besides the new Occidental College unit, consisting of about twenty-five girls, new units are forming at both the Marlborough and the Westlake schools for girls, and eighteen teachers from Pasadena will form a unit of their own, under the Land Army management.

In evidence of the manner in which enthusiasm for this work has spread, Mrs. Eastman announced the arrival tomorrow afternoon of another unit of teachers, who will come from El Paso, Tex., to join this service under the first western branch of the national Land Army, in Los Angeles.

SPECIAL MILITARY INSTRUCTION

For Boys and Young Men Preparing for Patriotic Service.

The San Diego Army and Navy, during July and August, will conduct, in addition to its regular academic classes, a special course of military training and instruction under the personal direction of its Professor of Military Science and Tactics, Col. J. M. T. Partello, U. S. Army, detailed by the War Department. As a military school, the Academy is in the "M" class—a Real military school; in academic work, it is one of the three military schools in the University of California's Division "A," which represents the highest scholarship. The charges for the entire Summer Session are $100. Only the regulation khaki uniform will be required. The Summer Session is a happy combination of work and play with all the benefits of a summer on the coast and all under the careful supervision of trained men interested in the best in boy life.

Extracts from last War Department inspection report:

Are the conditions such as to impress cadets constantly with a sense of being under military discipline? Yes, decidedly so.

To what extent is a military spirit developed and nurtured? By practical instruction and by lectures. Every effort appears to be made to give the institution a decidedly military atmosphere.

With what degree of zeal is military duty performed? Excellent.

What was the general appearance of the cadets at inspection? Excellent.

Is the military instruction of such an extent and thoroughness as to qualify the average graduate for a commission as a lieutenant of volunteers? It is believed so, but graduate cadets considerably under minimum age limit.

Do the conditions warrant the continuance of the detail at this institution of an officer as professor of military science and tactics? The conditions warrant such a detail.

The training of the cadets in all matters military is carried out with most commendable esprit.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. T. Partello, U. S. A., Retired, is at the head of the military instruction. He has been at the academy since September, 1917, and, for inspection, turned out a remarkably well-trained body of cadets.

Physical drill (Butts' Manual) and bayonet drill, excellent. Review complete in detail and excellent.

Formal inspection: Though the rifles were commendably clean, several of them were somewhat out of repair due to fair wear and tear. The cadets present a clean and natty appearance and are very soldierly.

For further information, write CAPT. THOS. A. DAVIS, Pres., Late Sixth U. S. V. Infty., Pacific Beach, Calif.

Mrs. Frank Dee Sawyer announces the sale of the SAWYER BUSINESS TRAINING SCHOOL to the Misses Jackling and Giffen, and wishes to express herein her appreciation to all students whom she had the privilege of training along business lines, for their hearty co-operation and endorsement; and ask that the same co-operation be given the present directors.

TRADERS PLAY POOL IN SECURITY SPECIALTIES.

Brokers Take Complete Possession of the Market for Cliques.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—Traders representing pools and cliques were in complete possession of today's short and unimportant stock market, directing their energies mainly toward automobile, tobacco and other special issues.

Early gains of one to four points in General Motors, Studebaker, Chandler, Maxwell, first preferred; Pierce-Arrow, Sumatra Tobacco, Tobacco Products, Hide and Leather preferred, Central Leather, Industrial Alcohol and Distillery were mostly maintained at the close.

United States Steel and Related shares were sluggish at the outset with rails, but both sections strengthened visibly on short covering later, accompanied by American Smelting, Atlantic Gulf, Baldwin Locomotive and minor specialties.

Unusual activity was displayed by Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway issues, especially the common, both making extreme gains of three points. Pittsburgh Coal, which often acts in concert with Pittsburgh and West Virginia, also showed evidence of accumulation. Sales of stocks amounted to 185,000 shares.

A further decrease of loans and discounts was reported in the actual condition of clearinghouse banks, but last week's loss of reserve by members in the Federal reserve bank was more than recovered, likewise the excess reserves, which increased by slightly more than $11,000,000.

The strength of Liberty issues, especially the first fours, which rose 2 per cent. over the low record of the early week, was the noteworthy feature of the bond market. Total sales of bonds (par value) aggregated $3,525,000.

United States bonds, old issues, were unchanged on call during the week.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Mercantile paper, four months, 6 per cent.; six months, 6 per cent. Sterling, sixty-day bills, 4.72¾; commercial, sixty-day bills on bank, 4.72; commercial, sixty-day bills, 4.71⅞; demand, 4.75⅝; cables, 4.76 7-16. Bar silver, 99½. Mexican dollars, 77. Government bonds strong; railroad bonds steady.

FINANCIAL REVIEW.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The visit to American waters of submarines, the impressive participation of this country's troops on the French front, further details of the government's plans of taxation for the next fiscal year and additional encouraging crop reports comprised the chief features of the week in the stock market.

Dealings diminished considerably in comparison with the daily average set on the last fortnight and quoted values were more susceptible to bearish aggressions.

Public interest was materially reduced, partly as a result of the government's attitude towards the railroads.

Reduced dividends by several of the minor copper-producing companies were the direct outcome of the failure of the War Industries Board to grant higher prices for that commodity.

The money market showed no material change, a little more ease being manifested in rates for short-time accommodations. Call money ruled at 5 to 6 per cent., but the higher figure is expected to prevail during the coming week because of impending tax payments.

MINING STOCKS CLAIM GREATER ATTENTION.

TOM REED, UNITED EASTERN CONTINUE ACTIVE THOUGH STILL WEAK.

Oil stocks were less active last week on the local Stock Exchange than usual, the mining list diverting considerable interest. United Eastern and Tom Reed were very unsteady taking severe losses with several fruitless attempts at recovery. Heavy selling of Reed continued again yesterday with the stock fairly firm losing only ⅛ point under Friday's close while the close on Eastern shows a recovery of 7½ points in the small period. Reed closed at 1.85 with 1.85½ the ask and Eastern at 3.47½ with 3.52½ asked.

Gold Ore was not active. The stock was bid at 10⅝ with 17 asked. It seems that the panicky ones have all sold out their Gold Ore and no stock is forthcoming at the present low figure. While brokers evidently had buying orders and were trying to secure the stock at the best possible figure no stock was offered at the prices bid and indications point to an advance next week. Reports from the mill are to the effect that a clean up will be made the latter part of this month.

Liberty Bonds were generally stronger yesterday with the 3½'s registering another gain of ¼ point to 99½. this particular issue is in very great demand, especially in denominations of $1000 and brokers predict that the 3½'s will surely go above par within a very short time.

Richmond Cooper sold up to .34 yesterday. Union Oil was off a little at 106.12½ closing 105.75 at 106.00. Rice Ranch Oil sold at 1.30 and New Pennsylvania Petroleum at 19½ while National Pacific was weak around 4½ cents.

GOLD ORE

(Listed on L. A. Stock Exchange)

The spectacular drop in this stock appears to have been entirely unwarranted by physical conditions at the time. Many of the stockholders are taking advantage of the low prices and acquiring additional stock to average down their former purchases. About four months ago the stock sold around 50c per share, and the condition at the mine today is better than it was then, so we are informed. It appears to us that the stock if it can be purchased around 11c to 12c per share offers excellent opportunities for a profitable speculative investment. Your orders to buy this stock or any other stock or bond for cash or on margin will be promptly executed at the market.

GOLD ORE

Since the recent change of management both mine development and milling operations have been much improved. President A. C. Werden reports 2000 tons of ore broken down. Better values have been encountered. Four trucks are hauling ore to the mill. The mill is now handling 70 tons per day.

Notwithstanding these improved conditions, of which the public is largely uninformed, the market has continued low. As the former arrangement which the company had on the sale of treasury stock has been terminated, there has been no one here to keep stockholders regularly informed as to mine conditions. We therefore have consented to receive and hold on file for ready reference, daily official reports on mine and mill results.

All who are interested in Gold Ore are invited to call at our office and freely avail themselves of this opportunity to secure first hand information. We feel that Gold Ore is selling much under value and should be bought at once. Our Correspondence Department will serve out-of-town stockholders.

MANGANESE ORE AND CHROME

The War Industries Board of the United States Goverment has established a schedule of prices for Manganese Ore which went into effect 28th, that fixes the price for the producer so that he will know just what he is to receive for his ore at all times.

I am authorized to enter into contracts for the entire output of Manganese properties for the period of one year with no conditional and will take all ore containing thirty-five per cent. Metallic Manganese or over. I will pay you the full government schedule of prices for all ore shipped in Los Angeles or at sampling works.

I will pay eighty per cent. in advance on Western Sampling analysis and one hundred per cent. if ore is sampled in transit at the accepted sampling works.

Now is the time to get your properties into production and your should be rushed, as the furnaces are in need of all they can secure.

Get in touch with me at once. Wire if you have any ore for shipment.

ANNUAL ECONOMY RUN DRAWS SIXTEEN ENTRANTS FOR FINE TROPHIES.

Elimination of Short Railways by Motor Transportation a Policy of the Government.

Considerable Class.

SIXTEEN CARS ENTERED IN BIG ECONOMY TRIAL.

Two-Day Run to Yosemite Certain to Bring Out Some Exceedingly Warm Competition.

IN ADDITION to the three [illegible] prizes and the sweepstakes offered by Foster [illegible] in the second annual economy run from Los Angeles to Camp Curry in the Yosemite, Fred L. Baker, president of the Automobile Club of Southern California has offered a special trophy for the car which has the best economy average on gasoline, oil and water, according to an announcement made by Standish Mitchell, secretary of the organization.

The following are the cars that were entered at the time of going to press: Oakland, Saxon, [illegible] Case, Grant, Chevrolet, [illegible] Mitchell, Stephens, Lexington, Monroe, Pilot, Jordan, [illegible], [illegible], Marmon and [illegible].

Cars are to report at the [illegible] of the Nicholls-Loomis [illegible], Eleventh and San [illegible] streets, at 5:30 o'clock on the morning of the start, where tanks are to be filled and the cars weighed. Each car will be sealed and the sealing process will be followed throughout the run at the different controls by the A.A.A. officials.

The cars, after having been released by the referee, will be directed to proceed in the order in which they start to the Automobile Club, of Southern California on South Figueroa street, where they will be sent off by the starter in one-minute intervals. Numbers for each car will be furnished at the starting point, and these are to be pasted on the windshield. Harry Mason of the Chanslor & Lyon Company will be the referee, and Roy R. Meads of the Pacific Rubber Company will be chief observer.

The official noon control will be the Bakersfield garage at Bakersfield, where the street will be roped off for the cars, which will be under guard while they are there. The Hotel Tegler will furnish a lunch, so that all may be served on time. The Fresno Hotel at Fresno will be the official hotel for the night control, and the cars under guard will be stored in the large hotel garage. The lunch control for the second day will be at Wawona, and, under ordinary running conditions, Standish Mitchell believes the cars should begin rolling in at the final control in the Yosemite by about 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

MOTOR TRANSPORT IS GOVERNMENT'S PLAN.

French Officer in Charge of Transport at the Battle of Verdun Testifies that it is a Big Help.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, June 7.—Highway transport development to the point of doing away entirely with the short line steam railroads has become a major national policy as disclosed in conferences the past few days between government officials and representatives of war boards of twenty-four States, east of the Mississippi.

In contrast with a policy which in the beginning proposed to discontinue manufacture of automobiles entirely, except for government use, and far more recent ruling that road construction is of such a war necessity as generally would warrant the issue of bonds, the government now intends to foster truck manufacture and road building as an acute war need.

Efforts will be centered on main highways, over which food supplies for large centers of population can be carried. For such roads it is indicated, the government will aid in supplying money and materials.

The conferences have been conducted under direction of the motor transport committee of the Council of National Defense of which Roy D. Chapin, of Detroit, is chairman. Speakers, who were principally government officials, showed the importance of highway transport in various departments.

Col. Uhler, speaking for Gen. Geo. W. Goethals, quartermaster-general, declared that motor trucks have helped immeasurably in speeding up war work. He stated that 6000 trucks have been moved from Detroit and other western cities to seaboard, each carrying a full load of freight. He cited the transfer in one day of the entire office equipment of the Emergency Fleet Corporation from Washington to Philadelphia as an instance of emergency service. He said that launching of merchant ships has been materially speeded by delivery of needed parts of engines and other machinery by trucks and that regular army truck lines have been established to carry goods asked in emergency orders for Pershing from factory to ocean transport.

B. C. Wright, assistant traffic manager of the railroad administration, declared that W. G. McAdoo, director-general, is in favor of highway transportation development. Mr. Wright said that motor transportation eventually will do away with the short line railroad.

State representatives were asked to aid in development of highway transportation two particular lines; first—in establishment of rural motor express routes for handling of farm produce and the supply of articles needed by the farmer and the creation of return load bureaus.

It was emphasized that for the successful operation, motor trucks must carry loads during their full period of service. Return bureaus are the centers from which lines embodying hundreds of trucks radiate. The center sees that when a truck train carries a load of supplies from Detroit to Toledo, for example, this train is supplied with an equal load to carry back to Detroit.

Capt. Vandervell, of the French army, who was in charge of motor transportation at the battle of Verdun, declared that without 2000 trucks, mostly of American make, operating day and night carrying ammunition, food and other supplies to the troops, Verdun would be in the hands of the Germans today. He said all other systems of transportation broke down.

LIBERTY TRUCK MOTOR TOURING.

The Liberty truck motor that was on display at the Moreland Motor Truck Company's factory is now making a tour of the State, covering San Diego, Bakersfield, Fresno, Stockton, Sacramento, Oakland and San Francisco, at which points the Moreland Motor Truck Company has branches.

The Liberty motor is being transported on a one-ton Moreland truck, and is spending several days at each one of the factory branches, where large crowds of interested people are given an opportunity of viewing it and understanding its construction and the history behind its designing. This Liberty motor will be back in Los Angeles some time the latter part of this month, and will have its final resting place at the Moreland Motor Truck Company's factory.

OUR EX-AUTO EDITOR TRIES FLYING ALONE.

WARDE FOWLER, former automobile editor of The Times, who has just been commissioned a lieutenant in the Aviation Corps in France, writes an interesting letter of his early experiences in flying alone. In part, his letter follows:

"I'm voyaging these days—cross-country they call it in the States—and if I don't smash I'll be through here pretty darn soon. Then I'll pin the old wings on my manly bosom and be some guy. [A recent cable told of his being commissioned.]

"Day before yesterday I lit out on my first voyage, and surely had a wild time. I got where I was going all right and started back and ran out of gas. Well, I was pretty high, so I spiralled around for a while looking for a soft spot, and finally found what I thought was one. It was. When I got down I discovered that it was a mud hole, but it was too late to change my mind, so there was nothing to do but take a chance. I lit and climbed out and borrowed a bicycle and lit out for the nearest town to telephone for gas. By the time I reached a phone it was dark, so they said they'd send it out in the morning. I monkeyed around town, talking to the telephone magnate's daughter until about 11 o'clock, and then wandered back and slept in a farmhouse near the machine. In the morning the gas came out o.k. But then I discovered that it was going to be some job getting out of that mudhole. Well, the mechanics held the machine until I had turned it on full tilt; then they let loose, and I went out of that hole like a shot. I drove home and went to bed again.

"Yesterday I took a whack at another town, and there was a pretty heavy fog, and I got lost. Didn't know where in the deuce I was. So I spotted a farmer out tilling the soil, and lit alongside of him and asked where in the deuce I was. As it was only about ten kilometers from where I was going, and he pointed out the direction, I finally managed to hit the spot. I had to get in the machine while I cranked up, and I'll bet he lost twenty years' growth in the excitement.

"We also had a lot of excitement about our hats. We wear a little trick R.F.C. sort of cap with a white band around it to indicate that we are fliers or near officers, or something. Well, a lot of squadron men went into town and spread it around that the white band meant that we had smallpox, and we had the deuce of a time explaining that fatal blow away. Such is life.

"Say, if you want to start something in that motion-picture center of the world, why don't you organize a campaign to get all the movie companies to make one extra film of their good pictures and ship them across. We have movies two or three times a week, and some of the films are not bad—but the average tend to make you homesick—you've seen them so long ago. We had one of William Hart the other night which I saw back in the summer of '98, or something.

AUTOMOBILE PRODUCTION IS HIT HARD.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Automobile manufacturers when they complete the work in hand for which they have material now in possession will only be able to get steel on the following basis:

First—When making passenger cars for government orders.

Second—Where making trucks and commercial cars for government orders.

Third—Where making trucks and commercial cars for short hauls to transport essentials or assist in the making of essentials or the relief of the railroad system.

Fourth—Where they have practically finished a production of cars and need a small amount of steel to place the finished product on the market.

This is regarded strictly as a war measure and is believed to be only temporary in its action. The steel shortage has been caused by the sudden and almost unbelievably large demand on the mills for their product for the building of ships and making of munitions. It is confidently believed that the steel industry will very shortly succeed in catching up with the demands for war and industrial work and that before long there will be sufficient steel produced to continue the production of passenger automobiles.

However, this is the basis on which the automobile manufacturers will proceed under the new regulations by which the War Industries Board practically takes over the iron and steel production for the government. If, after the government needs are supplied, there is a surplus of steel the automobile makers will have a portion of the surplus allocated to them. There will be no reduction in output on any percentage basis as heretofore contemplated, but an absolute elimination of all production except on the above basis after the present material on hand is used up.

Every effort of the automobile manufacturers to agree on a certain percentage of output seems to have failed and now the government will allocate steel only on the above basis. There will be little disturbance in the factory pay rolls, as most of the plants are either working on munitions, airplane production or on trucks and other equipment for the army. One of the largest orders of the government is for tractors.

HOW TO DISCOVER ILLS OF MOTOR CAR.

Most of the ills of the motor car are indicated by audible symptoms. A weaving noise in the differential case may be taken as an indication that the master bevel gear of the unit is running out of alignment. A slight catch, which occurs several times during each revolution of the driving wheels, is the sign of a chipped tooth in the drive shaft pinion or ring gear.

The Truth About the Motor Car Situation

Sixty per cent. of the capacity of motor car factories is now devoted to war work, leaving forty per cent. available for the production of motor cars and trucks.

Reduced production inevitably means higher cost per car and increased prices.

Ten years ago, with small outputs, the manufacturers sold cars not so good as those of today at prices higher than prevail at present.

Year after year, as the demand grew and production capacities were enlarged, the output was increased and prices dropped accordingly.

Now, manufacturing capacity has been so reduced on account of war business handled by motor manufacturers that prices on motor cars and trucks have increased from 10% to 15% since last January and must go higher.

The limited number of vehicles available are gilt-edged investments, for even with prices higher, many will be unable, later, to purchase equipment for their transportation needs.

The necessity for adequate local transportation is rapidly increasing and must be taken care of by motor vehicles. It is sound business to buy NOW before prices advance again and protect your future needs.

First Return Load Bureau on Coast is Established Here.

RETURN-LOAD BUREAU HERE.

Anthony will Establish the Organization.

Will do Much to Relieve the Freight Problem.

Facts will be Given Free of Charge to All.

A partial solution of the shortage of freight cars for local hauls is offered by the establishment of a return-loads bureau for motor trucks in Los Angeles to cover the Southern California territory.

For some time the Highway Transport Committee of the Council of National Defense has been advocating the establishment of such bureaus throughout the country, and several are in successful operation in the East. They have resulted in greater efficiency of the motor trucks available for local hauls and have speeded up some farming sections by affording direct and speedy transportation of products of established markets.

Through the services of the bureau it will be possible to combine loads to a common point and avoid the necessity of several trucks carrying partial loads over the same route at the same time. Many return loads can be handled when the information in the files of the bureau is taken advantage of by shippers and haulers who would ordinarily return with empty trucks.

As they felt the urgent need of immediate action in the matter, Earle C. Anthony, Inc., has established a Los Angeles return-loads bureau for Southern California and will soon have a large amount of data on file for the benefit of shippers and haulers. This will be given to the public free of charge and the cost of the service will be borne by the Anthony firm.

In outlining the aims and plans of the bureau to a Times representative, Mr. Anthony said: "We have waited, hoping that some public organization would take this matter up, but decided to take the initiative and carry the matter along until such time as the proper body sees fit to take over the duties and obligations we have assumed. At such time we will be glad to turn over all of the information in our files which we have acquired in the meantime.

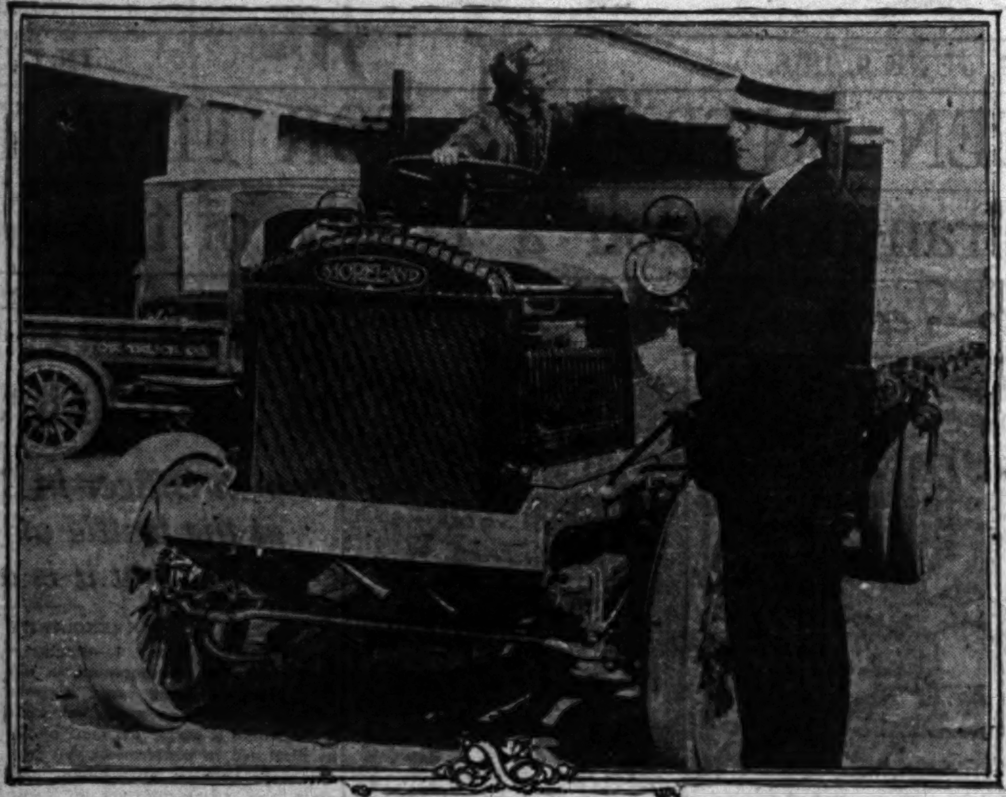
"There is a need that something be done so that the available motor cars will be able to handle the burdens that will be placed on them in addition to those they are now carrying. Unless the present inefficient methods are changed we are sure to find our local transportation facilities inadequate.

"We have been assured of strong support in the movement and invite all truck owners to file with the bureau the necessary data so that it will be available for shippers, who in turn will keep the bureau informed of their needs and the loads they have to haul, which will be passed on to the transportation companies.

"This will make it possible to combine small loads and permit one man and one truck to do the work of two or more, and will make possible many return loads where trucks now come back empty. Such co-operation of shippers and transportation companies is absolutely vital to attaining the maximum efficiency of our present truck facilities, and will aid materially in speeding up business by cutting costs and affording better transportation."

RUSTED ON.

Two parts of iron or steel that have become rusted firmly together may be separated by soaking them for several hours in a mixture of one-third lubricating oil and two-thirds kerosene.



Two boosters for the return load bureau system.

Behold Frank Carroll, big boss of the Goodrich Rubber Company for the Southwest, and a Moreland truck, two exponents of the recently-accepted return load system.

DEVELOP METHOD OF CONSERVING TIRES.

SAFETY CORD TUBE IS THE DIVICE THAT SOLVES THE PROBLEM.

The scarcity of ships has made it almost impossible for tire manufacturers to secure rubber from South American plantations and the great demand by the government for cotton to be used for war supplies has curtailed the available supply of long staple cotton. Consequently it is necessary for automobile users to conserve on tires. "This can be done," says Harry M. Haldeman, of the Pacific Pipe and Supply Company, "in other ways than merely decreasing the use of motor cars."

"Since we took the agency for the Palmer safety cord tubes we have carried on an exhaustive test and research. Our efforts have proven that by the use of these wonderful tubes the strength of the tire can be so increased that 75 per cent. of the casings will wear out through the tread. This means that there will be thousands of miles more use in every casing if it is equipped with a Palmer safety cord tube than by the ordinary tubes which are designed merely to contain air."

SELLING AUTOS IS NOW GETTING EASIER.

"There has been a steady tendency away from the necessity of demonstration in selling automobiles," says Billy Hughson of the KisselKar. "Of course, demonstration can still be made a factor in sales, but the public no longer demands it. The automobile has become a public commodity. It plays a big part in the nation's life and the public is therefore well informed about all phases of its utility. The inevitable result of this condition is a public knowledge of the machines and confidence in the manufacturers."

RETURN-LOADS BUREAU IS URGED BY TIRE MANAGER.

ONE of the busiest men in the automobile industry on the Pacific Coast is F. R. Carroll district manager of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company. Mr. Carroll divides his time about equally between San Francisco and Los Angeles, with frequent side trips to other towns under his jurisdiction—Salt Lake City, San Diego, Phoenix, etc.

He reports the Goodrich business during the present year as showing a healthy increase at all points, and is particularly pleased with the showing made in Southern California.

"The big business of everyone," said Mr. Carroll, "is to win the war, and every commercial undertaking should be made with that idea in mind. The automobile can do its part by relieving the railroads of much traffic; particularly can the motor truck be of invaluable aid.

"One of the most impressive events in the performance of motor-driven vehicles recently was that of the Moreland truck which drove from Los Angeles to Oakland in the record time of seventeen hours and thirty-two minutes."

ADVERSE CONDITIONS.

Speaking of this performance, Mr Carroll said: "The fact that this loaded three and one-half ton truck accomplished this in spite of very adverse road conditions which were met on a part of the trip proves conclusively to my mind that the time has arrived when the motor truck industry should organize a return loads bureau.

"It is every day becoming more and more essential that we release as many freight cars in the transportation of nonessentials as possible, in order that they may be used for the carrying of munitions, food and other supplies, to the seaboard, for transportation to our army in France.

"The successful establishment of these return loads bureaus in the East only goes to prove that this can be done in Southern California. We have better road conditions than those generally found in the East, and there seems to be no good reason why the motor truck should not be used far more extensively in the transportation of all kinds of goods between the various sections of Southern California.

"By the establishment of these bureaus the shipper and truck men are brought into close contact, so that when a shipment is made from Los Angeles to an agricultural community, the bureau will have ready a return load of farm products for the Los Angeles markets.

TAKING BURDENS.

"Motor trucks are taking from the shoulders of the railroads much of their local freight burdens in the East, and it is estimated that on the route between Akron and Cleveland, O., more than fifty double-header freight trains will be released this year for war and domestic transportation work by the trucks plying between Akron and Cleveland. This estimate has been made by the traffic expert of the Goodrich company, and we are one of the largest shippers over this forty-mile strip of highway.

"It has been found that by the use of the return loads bureau more and more motor trucks are constantly being placed in service, and the ratio of motor trucks to pleasure cars has been materially increased.

"Among the products carried by these trucks are building brick, concrete blocks, farm machinery, general merchandise, gasoline, hardware, lumber, sewer pipe, food, farm products, etc.

"In Southern California routes could well be established to San Diego, Riverside, San Bernardino and way points, Bakersfield and Santa Barbara, as well as many near-by cities."

For Service.

THIS LINE OF TRUCKS HAS A BIG REPUTATION.

"THE supreme important business of America today is to win the war. No small measure of the task will fall upon the motor truck—upon its ability to serve and endure over there and at home. The Menominee is going 'over the top,' doing its bit many times over," says Freeman A. McKenzie, distributor for Menominee motor trucks.

Mr. McKenzie has shown his confidence in the future of the motor truck industry by placing a stock order for twenty Menominee trucks, and they are on the way to Los Angeles from the Menominee factory in Michigan.

After having thoroughly tested out the merits of the Menominee, for a period of four years as agent for the line in Long Beach territory, Mr. McKenzie has taken the distribution of Menominee motor trucks for Southern California and Arizona, and has established a salesroom, parts department and service station at Twelfth and Olive.

Realizing the necessity of the service end of this business, Mr. McKenzie has now in stock one of the largest and most complete line of parts of any motor truck agency in Southern California—"Service that Serves" has always been the Menominee motto, and during the five and one-half years the Menominees have been sold in the Southern California territory no truck has been laid up for want of repair parts.

By Established Firm.

TRUCK ATTACHMENT TO BE REPRESENTED HERE

INCREASED demand for truck attachments throughout California due to their great value in converting used automobiles into motor trucks and the necessity of motor trucks in speeding up production, is making necessary further expansion of business in California for the motor truck attachment people.

As a result of this demand for motor trucks and consequently for sturdy truck attachments which will convert passenger cars into economical trucks, E. L. Williams of the firm of Pratt and Williams, distributors of Ralston truck attachments on the coast, announced this week the opening of their Los Angeles office at 518 Title Insurance Building.

Williams is well-known in Los Angeles and during the past week has been receiving congratulations of his many friends on the opening up of the branch here.

The increased use of the motor truck, its value in time saving and money making to the farmer and business man, and the wide field in Los Angeles and Southern California is given as the reason for the expansion of the business.

"Not only in the city, but throughout the State, we have received scores of letters from dealers and people interested in trucks asking about the Ralston attachment," says Williams. "Many of the largest concerns in this city have from one to six Ralstons in service, and their reports on the economy and durability of this truck attachment make the most convincing kind of recommendation for those concerns that need trucks for delivery or hauling purposes.

PNEUMATIC BOXING GLOVES FOR ARMY.

Pneumatic boxing gloves are being tried out at several of the army training camps, according to the Sporting Goods Sales Journal, and apparently with good results. Physical directors are quoted as saying that the freedom from knockouts and black eyes which is assured when the air gloves are used makes the rookies readier to engage in the sport and contributes greatly to the confidence and enthusiasm of men who never before had a desire to box anyone or anything.

HELPS OWNERS TO CONSERVE TIRES.

DEALER LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN IN LINE WITH SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.

In line with the spirit of the times, that of conserving everything we use as far as possible, the Weinstock-Nichols Company, the Federal dealer here, is launching a campaign directed at the tire user to aid him in getting the greatest mileage from his tires.

In announcing this campaign, the Weinstock-Nichols Company issues the following: "We not only handle tires that are noted for their extra service features, but these are war times, and we are going a step further. We feel that by giving the motorist a few tips from our long experience he may be able to add many miles of service to his tires. We will send out a series of pamphlets covering the many thoughtless ways in which automobile owners abuse their tires. These will all have the thought in mind that 'care saves wear.' We hope in this way to help the autoist add more miles to his tire wear by simply using precautionary measures which he may now be overlooking."

CARE OF TIRES WILL OFFSET CURTAILMENT.

What is going to happen to motorists if an embargo is placed on rubber importation and tire production is cut way down, is a question that is bothering some people now, and yet it is not one that should bother us at all, according to C. Fred Thompson of the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, California and Arizona distributors for Mason tires.

Any curtailment of tire production up to 50 per cent. of what it is now, could be successfully met by greater painstaking in the care of tires which would equal in actual mileage results the corresponding mileage that the new tires would give in the way we have been using them.

BARNEY'S FIRST CAR SOLD AT AUCTION.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

CLEVELAND (O.) May 29.—Barney Oldfield's first speed car, a two-cylinder, was sold in the police auction of stolen and recovered property here for $15. The dilapidated racer, built in 1901, came into possession of the police about ten years ago when Oldfield, arrested for speeding, gave it as a bond. The purchaser said he wanted the car as a relic.

FLAXSEED MEAL GOOD SILENCER.

To silence a noisy transmission try mixing flaxseed meal with the lubricant. This is recommended only as a temporary expedient, as a noisy transmission means generally breakage of the gears or misalignment that calls for a major operation to effect a real cure.

Ask Your Driver How Much He Would Appreciate a Properly Powered Motor Truck—For Instance, a Moreland

Moreland Motor Trucks carry power plants that are ample to render the best of service in the western country. For example, a motor of the bore and stroke such as we use in our 1½ ton truck is used by a great many eastern manufacturers, who have no true understanding of western conditions, for trucks ranging from 2 to 3½ tons capacity. The result is, when these trucks reach western working locations they do not have sufficient power to deliver the measure of satisfaction the buyer expected.

The motor dimensions of the Moreland 1½ ton truck are 4⅛x5¼ inches. The following motor sizes are from ten motor trucks that are most aggressively represented in this territory:

The Moreland 2½ ton truck has a 4½x5½ motor, equal to, or larger in horse power and hauling capacity than the average builder uses in a 3½ ton truck. This is one reason why your driver, if you will ask him, will tell you he would appreciate sufficient power.

The only place to get it, properly co-ordinated with other truck units is in the Moreland line. You had better investigate, personally, what a Moreland Distillate Motor Truck means in your transportation work.

Miss Betty Peters at the wheel of one of the Hudson super-sixes owned by the Bristol Taxi Company. She is one of the first two lady taxi drivers in Southern California.

GIRLS TAKE MEN'S PLACES AT WHEELS OF TAXICABS.

THE first recruits in a brand-new division of the rapidly growing army of the women war workers of Los Angeles donned their uniforms last week and took their places as drivers of taxis. Miss A. Louise Mowrey and Miss Betty Peters were duly license by the city last week as competent to perform this sort of work and have been putting in eight hours a day behind the wheels of two of the super sixes of the Bristol Taxi Company's big Hudson fleet.

Inability to secure the right sort of men drivers, and a desire to avoid keeping men from more essential war-time service, led H. J. Bristol, proprietor of the company, to consider the innovation of hiring women drivers. Bristol was the originator of the "10-cent-a-mile" taxi idea and has been a prominent figure in the Los Angeles taxi business for a long time.

"It has become increasingly difficult for the past few months to secure competent drivers," said Mr. Bristol yesterday. "Many of our men have left for war service, and it reached a point recently when it simply seemed impossible to secure the right sort of drivers to replace men who have joined the army.

"When Miss Mowrey and Miss Peters applied to me for positions as drivers, however, I hesitated at first, because I was in doubt as to a woman's ability to handle a car constantly in the congested district, where much of the driving necessarily is. The girls showed me that they had each done more than 25,000 miles of driving and I agreed to give them a tryout.

"I have always made it a point to personally test the driving ability of every driver that has ever been hired by the Bristol Taxi Company. I have a certain course that I make them take me over, one that includes the heart of the business district, steep hills, quick stopping and starting, everything, in fact, to try a driver's skill. I put both the girls through this test and both passed it as successfully as any man who ever drove for this company.

"The Hudson is an easy car to handle, of course, but this does not detract from the fact that both Miss Mowrey and Miss Peters passed the test in such excellent style. If I can secure more women drivers, as skilled as they are, I shall certainly employ them as vacancies occur, for I believe it is the duty of this and every other company to release men for war work wherever it is possible to satisfactorily replace them with women workers."

SERVICE CARS SAVE BUSY OWNERS TIME AND WORRY.

"WITH almost all lines of industry working at high speed the business man of today is seeking for those things which eliminate lost motion and which consequently save time. Not only is time money, but it is also a means toward winning the war," said R. R. Colby, manager of Barney Oldfield's tire service at No. 1211 South Hope street.

"When we first introduced the system of sending our service cars to give aid to those car owners who on the road had encountered tire trouble, the innovation was so new that there were many who failed to understand it. But that has all been changed. Today we have six service cars that are almost always on the jump during the day, while sometimes three or four work well into the night responding to calls.

"For instance, Mr. Business Man suffers a blowout or a puncture at Fifth and Broadway. He phones to us telling where his car is and while we are arriving on the job and making the necessary change, he is in a barber shop getting a hurried shave or attending to some business in the immediate vicinity. The only time he has lost was the minute used in phoning to us."

SAFETY SIGNALS TRIED IN CONGESTED CITY DISTRICT

A NOTICEABLE improvement has been shown in the manner in which automobile drivers are signaling their intention to turn either to the right or the left or in coming to a complete stop.

Many motor car dealers' associations officially approve a set of signals for the turning and slowing down of an automobile and are doing their utmost to bring this to the attention of the automobile public and to have this set of signals adopted by the State of California and the entire United States.

A Federal truck was used a few days ago in the produce district of the city to bring to the attention of motor truck drivers this new set of signals, which if universally adopted will do much towards guaranteeing the safety of pedestrians and obviate the many collisions that constantly occur through the lack of a driver signaling to those in the rear just which way he is going to turn. The signals as adopted by the Motor Car Dealers' Association are simple. The arm raised above the head as illustrated in the picture means turn to the right. The arm pointing straight out indicates that autoist is going to turn to the left. The arm pointing down means that he is going to slow down without turning. The same signals apply exactly whether a car has a left or a right wheel drive.

The Federal truck recently used to give demonstrations in the most congested part of the city, attracted wide attention on the part of the motor truck drivers. They were pleased to learn that a definite set of signals has been decided upon, for it means to them less strain in driving and more safety. Not only do these signals apply to motor-driven vehicles, but to horse-drawn vehicles as well.

CLEAN PLUGS SHOULD BE ONE AUTO SLOGAN.

Many car owners do not realize the importance of keeping the spark plugs clean. The points of the plug seldom need cleaning, but grease and mineral dirt do accumulate on the exterior and interior of the porcelain, so that the current passes that way instead of jumping the gap as is intended. The plugs should be kept clean, or ignition troubles will result.

New Safety Lock is Tough One for Thieves to Solv

One of the sure methods of hanging on to your car.

Here we have Detective Powell of the Automobile Club of Southern California and Frank Howard of the Howard Motor Car Company pointing out the new lock on all 1918 Buicks, which makes it a tough job for thieves to elope with them.

GOING FAST, SAYS OWENIE.

Captain Bird Writes Home from West Front.

French Game Sports, Says Los Angeles Boy.

Wonders if All the Autos are "Over There."

Many on Automobile Row remember Owen R. Bird, a former Times man who for some time before he entered the service as captain in the Quartermaster's Reserve Corps, was in charge of the advertising department for S. F. Seager & Co., now distributors of the Jordan, Columbia, Grant Six and International trucks. The following interesting letter, addressed to "Bob" Weaver, vice-president and general manager for the company, has just been received from Capt. Bird, now stationed in France:

"April 27, 1918.

"From Capt. Owen R. Bird, G.M. R.C.,

"Org'n Park, G.M.C.N.A.

"U. S. P. O. No. 701, Am. E. F.

"Dear chief:

"After a somewhat extended yachting cruise, have lit on 'terry firmy.' This is one of the oldest French cities and it is full of historic spots and American soldiers. We may have been slow getting started, but now, oh, boy—they are coming fast. The United States transport people are making a regular Yankee port out of this old place. Work goes on night and day; but let her roll, the faster the sooner.

HIS VOW.

"I want to state now, that whet this is all over and I have arrived once more in California, its going to take something bigger than has ever happened before to get me out of the place.

"Its cloudy here all the time and a few days ago we had a snow squall. Of course, the climate is blamed on the artillery at the front and I guess there is a lot in that, as every time they have a big party up there it rains here.

"The mark of war is all over the place, food rations, fuel rations, water short and all that sort of thing, but one must give the French credit, they take it like a lot of game sports.

"They think all the American officers are worth millions and as a result they make you spend a lot of money. We all get paid in francs and as a result have a pocket full of metal bagging our uniforms down and when it is counted, sometimes one has a much as a dollar and a half.

AMERICAN SMOKES.

"American smokes are worth their weight in fine gold. You don't borrow any more cigarettes, 'it is not done any more.' But they tell me the government has taken over the Bull Durham factory so we will probably get by.

"How is the auto game? And has the Salt Lake record been broken? There are trucks and cars by the thousand here—being made ready for service, and sometimes I wonder if there are any automobiles left in the States.

"How long I'll be here I don't know, but a letter will always find me, so drop a line, they help a lot.

"Remember me to the bunch with the warmest regards.

"I am sincerely,

"OWEN."

Good Business.

PLACES BIG TIRE ORDER TO EQUIP MOTOR BUSSES.

AN IMPORTANT tire order was recently filled when the J. G. Bennett Tire and Rubber Company equipped the A.R.G. motor busses with 200 Royal Cord tires, manufactured by the United States Rubber Company, according to J. B. Magee, district manager for the corporation.

"Undoubtedly the A.R.G. line was impressed by the test given several makes of tires by the El Dorado stages and which resulted in the equipment of all El Dorados with Royal Cords. The test lasted more than a month and when all other makes of tires had been eliminated Royal Cords were still on the job and with many more miles in storage," stated Magee.

"Although not generally known all along the row, it is a fact, nevertheless, that J. G. Bennett was the first dealer in Los Angeles to recognize the quality of material and excellence of workmanship found in Royal Cords and which have made these tires famous. Our records show that he was the first dealer in this city to take on the line.

"Tires on stages are put to hard service. The stages are generally loaded to capacity with passengers and baggage and the schedules must be covered regardless of weather and road conditions. Tires in such instances mean a big item in operation expense and the more mileage secured the less the overhead."

"I know something about tires, I have to in this business," declared A. R. Good of the A.R.G. stage lines. "I placed the order for Royal Cords because I believed them to be the make that would give us the best all around service."

YANKEE TRACTORS INVADING ITALY.

In line with steps taken to increase the production of foodstuffs in Italy, the Italian government has purchased twenty American made tractors for use in the province of Catania. Each tractor has a capacity of ten to twenty horse power and is expected to plow six to eight acres daily.

"Each tractor will be equipped with Master carburetors," stated L. A. Hardie, secretary of the Master Carburetor Company, "and in response to a request made from the Italian royal experiment station through the purchasing agents in this country, we will supply printed matter giving details of the care and adjustments of our product, in the Italian language, for distribution among the Italian cultivators."

MAKE 'EM ALL WORK, IS LATEST IDEA FROM OHIO.

EVERY man between the ages of 16 and 60 should be required to do a minimum amount of work to form an adequate supply of labor for the carrying out of necessary public improvements, such as the building of roads, if the movement originating in Ohio became effective nationally. Under instructions from the Federal government, public improvements are being limited and as a consequence road work in certain parts of the country has been seriously impaired. It was suggested recently, as pointed out here by H. C. McVey, the local dealer in Oakland and National automobiles, that alien enemies and prisoners of war be required to provide the labor for public improvements, but the Ohio plan is even more extensive in application.

Los Angeles now is seeking special privilege for carrying out what is said to be necessary public improvement. Construction of public highways is practically negligible and maintenance and extensions are limited. It is recognized as a fact that delays in maintenance result in increased expense when repairs finally are made. According to Mr. McVey's information, the Ohio proposition is to enlist man power to the greatest possible degree; that measures be adopted requiring not only that every ablebodied man between the ages of 16 and 60 be self-supporting and engaged in useful employment, but that a minimum of such effort and employment be required of every such ablebodied man; that measures be adopted making possible the assignment to essential work of such vagrants, loafers or others who may not be expending the minimum or necessary amount of effort to carry on the nation's work.

A Veteran.

GEORGES CARPENTIER HAS HUSKY WALLOP YET.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

NEW YORK, May 31.—That Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight, has not lost his punching or boxing skill as a result of his three years' service in the army was conclusively demonstrated recently at the expense of an American boxer who took ring liberties with the French pugilist. It was Sergt. Ray Williams of the American army who tried to rough it with Carpentier in the first round of a boxing exhibition at St. Aignan, Loir-et-Cher. As a result Williams was knocked out in the second round and the memory of that right swing to the chin will linger in Sergt. Williams's memory for years to come.

A crowd of more than 10,000 witnessed the athletic sports at St. Aignan. Gen. Cottez of the French army presided, with Brig.-Gens. Alexander and Volruth of the American army assisting. After Anderson had won the hundred yards in 12 seconds, the 220 in 28 and Steele had broken the tape for the mile race in 5.34 minutes, a four-round, or rather what was to have been a four-round boxing exhibition, was put on with the French champion Georges Carpentier and Sergt. Ray Williams as the contestants.

Cheered by his friends among the spectators, Williams started in with a rush that nearly took the French champion off his feet, he planted some heavy blows to the head and body and Carpentier was surprised; he had expected a mere sparring exhibition. Williams had the best of the first round and was loudly applauded as he went to his corner.

It was plain to all that Carpentier meant business when he stepped out for the second round. He feinted Williams into a knot, jabbed him lightly in the stomach with his left, which caused the American to lower his guard, and crossed his right to the chin and Williams went down and out. The round had lasted ten seconds.

After Williams came to, he shook hands with Carpentier and said: "I got mine, I am satisfied." Later he explained to a friend that he understood now why they spelled it "Georges:" "There are so many of him," he said.

MERCER MAKES A FAST ROAD TRIP.

BIG BEAR TO VICTORVILLE IN NINE MINUTES LESS THAN RECORD.

When H. D. Horsman, motorist, came down from Big Bear Lake last week he brought the limit in fish and what he asserts is a new record. He reported to George R. Bentel that he had driven his Mercer 22-73 from Bartlett's Camp at Big Bear to Victorville in one hour and fifty-nine minutes; the best former time being, he added, two hours and eight minutes.

"It was the first time I ever had been over the road," said Horsman to Bentel, "and lost some time in looking for signs. Also there were some slow cars to be passed and we had to follow one for miles through a canyon.

"There were four in our party, J. L. Oliver, William and Henry Seyfreidt and myself. We had no idea of trying to set a record but things went along so well that I pushed the Mercer a little. I never saw a car go over the road like that one did and at Victorville we gave them the surprise of the year when we told them what we had done."

LOOSE STUD BOLT.

It sometimes happens that in taking off the valve cover plate, one of the studs may slip out and the loss will not be discovered. This leaves an opening into the intake passage and the leak will prevent the suction through the carburetor needed to draw the fuel into the cylinders.

A Correct Answer is the Only Battery Insurance

Guesses at battery condition open the switch for battery trouble. You're running without signals unless you know what's doing inside your battery.

Has enough water been added?

Is your battery properly charged?

Has too much charging caused overheating?

And don't forget to ask about the "Bone Dry" principle. The Still Better Willard is the only battery that uses it and thus gives you absolute assurance that your battery is as new as the day it left the factory.

RUBBER OUTPUT IS GROWING RAPIDLY.

UNITED STATES IS GREATEST RUBBER-USING COUNTRY IN THE WORLD.

"The United States is today the greatest rubber-using country in the world," said President A. Schleicher of the Samson Tire and Rubber Corporation. "A billion dollars of American money has been sent to other parts of the world in the decade ending with 1917 for the purchase of the 700,000 tons of rubber brought into the United States in that period, in part from Brazil, but in recent years chiefly from the Orient. Carefully-compiled figures show that the world's output of 'plantation' rubber has increased from 1000 tons in 1907 to 204,000 tons in 1917. It was only a decade ago that the rubber plantations established in the Orient by European capital about 1900 came into 'bearing' condition, the world's output of plantation rubber having been in 1900 but four tons; in 1905, 145 tons; 1907, 1000 tons, and from that on a very rapid increase, showing for 1917 204,348 tons, according to the latest estimates of the highest world authorities."

TIRE SHIPMENTS ARRIVING FAST.

Although most of the tire shipments from the East have been taking at least forty days, we are now able to get shipments through in about fourteen days, says Frank Price, general manager of Nelson & Price, tire dealers.

Last week we received three carloads of Kelly-Springfield tires shipped from the factory at Akron, O., which came through in fourteen days. This is quite a contrast to the shipping service we had been getting on the last shipments. Whether we will be able to get this kind of service this winter is another thing, and I am going to try and take advantage of good facilities now and do all the shipping I can this summer.

Solving Problems.

EXPERIENCE IS BEST TEACHER.

Car Trouble Quickly Located by Trained Motorist.

Five Conditions Essential to Keep Engine Going.

Main Points Set Down by Automobile Expert.

BY ROBERT GRANGER,
Manager Hamburger's Auto Supply Store.

To quickly diagnose trouble in the power plant of an automobile seems like intuition, but it is not. The person with the widest experience is most apt to locate it quickly. This is merely because he has had a broader view of the subject, and, like an experienced doctor, recognizes the symptoms. The inexperienced person knows only a few symptoms, and when these have been traced he is at the end of his resources. He must learn all the possible causes of the trouble in order to be able to eliminate them in proper sequence.

A decidedly baffling trouble is loss of power. The engine continues to run, but unsatisfactorily. This trouble may be studied under ten separate heads, most of them susceptible to further subdivision. It has been well said that there are only five reasons why an engine should run and several hundred why it should not. This is quite true. The five conditions necessary for an engine to run and keep running, are compression, carburetion, ignition, lubrication and cooling. If these five are reasonably right, the engine must perform. If they are not the engine will lose power or even refuse to run. It is the work of a trained operator to have these conditions right at all times.

Let us consider them more in detail:

COMPRESSION.

An engine develops power in direct proportion to its compression pressure. If compression is weak, power is lost. It may leak through valve plugs, spark plugs, compression cocks, gasket around cylinder head, exhaust or inlet valve, scored cylinder or past the piston rings. Leaks like these cause loss of power, but are seldom severe enough to stop the engine.

Next in our list is carburetion. The slightest change in the mixture weakens the power, providing the mixture was right in the first place. This may be due to derangement of the high speed adjustment, clogging of the fuel line, float or valve trouble, all of which require the attention of one who knows. Perhaps ignition is the most difficult to master. There are so many places where trouble may occur: Weak battery, dirty breaker points, fouled spark plugs, leaky distributor, loose wires, punctured or leaky condenser, all have their part and must be considered while searching for trouble. LUBRICATION is for the purpose of reducing friction. Power is lost rapidly if lubrication is neglected. The pump may fail, the pipes become clogged, the oil may be low, may need changing or may be of poor grade. Then again, it may be spoiled by the gasoline leaking down past the pistons. Any of these will reduce the power.

ENGINE.

Keeping the engine down to its proper working temperature is the function of the cooling system. If the temperature rises too high, the oil burns, friction is increased, and loss of power results. Failure of the water pump, slipping fan belt, scum or sediment in the water jackets, and strangely enough, frozen radiator, are the usual causes of overheating. Some are easily remedied while others require a mechanic's attention.

Assuming that the five conditions above mentioned are reasonably right, the engine will perform. But there are other causes of loss of power. While cooling an engine is good, overcooling is bad. By over-cooling too much heat is lost and so much of the expansion qualities of the burning gas wasted, thus losing power.

As the seventh cause we may consider carbon. This accumulates in the cylinder head because of too much gasoline or too much oil, usually the latter. It makes the engine sluggish, causes leaky valves with loss of compression, sooted spark plugs, causing missing explosions and pre-ignition, with knocking and loss of power.

WATER TROUBLES.

Our ninth trouble is water in the cylinder head. Fortunately a rare trouble. It was formerly only possible if the cylinder head was cracked, allowing the water to leak into the combustion chamber, but with the present type of removal head it may be due to leakage of the gasket. It is extremely dangerous, as it is non-compressible and the force of the fly wheel driving the pistons upward may readily crack the cylinder head, requiring a new head complete.

Under our tenth head we must collect all mechanical defects which cut down power, such as worn bearings, which throw the shafts out of line, dragging breaks, slipping clutch, or other troubles. Here, indeed the experienced mechanic is required.

This list of ten causes of loss of power looks formidable, but the novice need not despair. By studying it over, asking questions of his friends, studying his instruction book, and keeping eyes and ears open he will some day be in the experienced class and be able to find and remedy all his own motor troubles as well as those of his friends.

Barney Oldfield—I have a 1917 Chevrolet and have been having trouble with my lights. They burned out and I bought a new set, which burned out in forty minutes. The battery is not on full charge and I cannot imagine the cause.

H. B., Warrior, Ala.

The burning out is caused by excessive voltage. Have the cutout and current regulator looked over immediately. Do not try to fix any part of the system yourself. Use six-volt bulbs with a six-volt system.

OFFER ARTISTS' PRIZE FOR BEST LIKENESS OF MODEL.

It is said that Leonardo da Vinci spent years in depicting the haunting smile of Mona Lisa, but he finally got an impression that has been handed down through the ages, which is introductory to the fact that those who undertake to reproduce an exact likeness of the new Cole aero eight models need not feel discouraged by early failure. It is announced by the Irving Motor Car Company, distributors of the Cole automobile, that the factory offers a valuable prize for the best reproduction of the likeness of these models. Photographers, artists and artisans in Indianapolis and the Middle West have been trying for months to accomplish the purpose and, having failed in it, the company has extended the offer to those throughout the country.

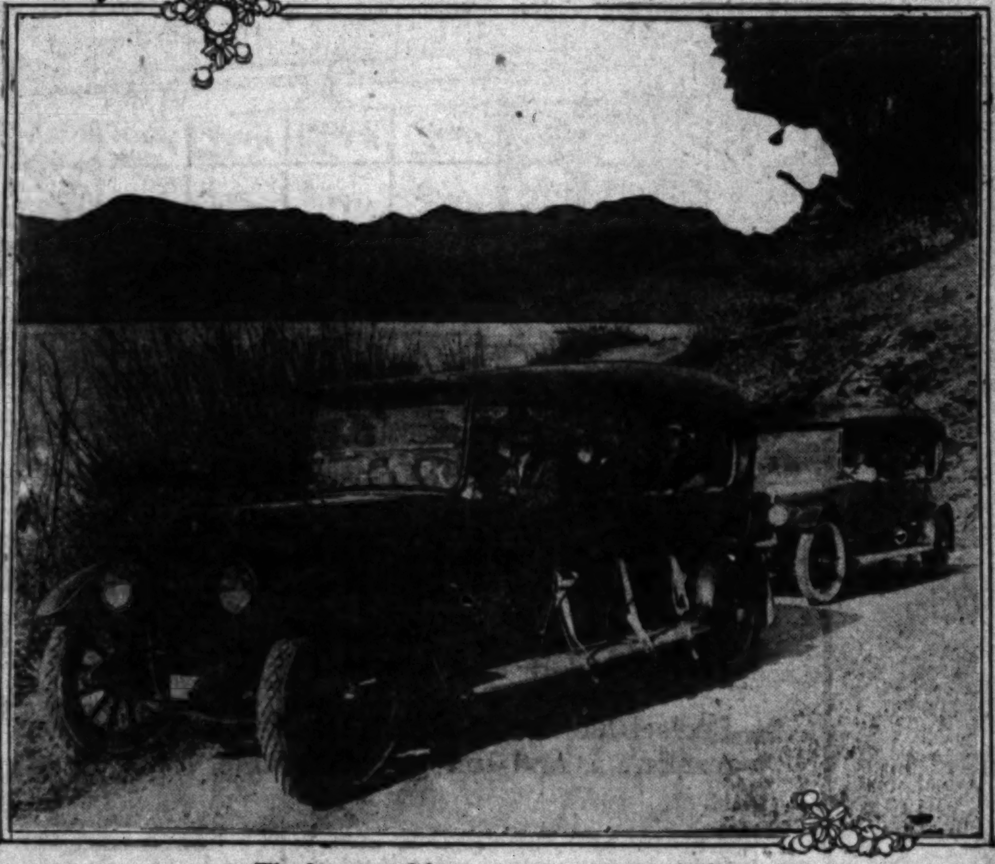
"If there are any aspirants in Los Angeles who would care to compete for this prize, we would be glad to afford them every opportunity to succeed," stated James L. Irving. "In fact, we would be truly glad to see the prize awarded to this city."

MOTOR CARS REPLACE OLD HAY RACKS FOR PICNIC

No more tallyhoes, no more hay racks. Picnics today demand motor cars. Last week 150 pleasure-seekers, with one objective in view went out for a jolly free-for-all good time barbecue. Twenty King eight's, composing the fleet of the Golden State Auto Company were engaged to take the picnickers from their homes to Crater's Camp and back again.

Out of these 150 people, there were scarcely two who had known of this wonderful Southern C garden spot before. A ride by State highway from the hubbub of city fastness of jagged mountain and babbling brooks, where abounds.

"We had a real old-fashioned time," says Harry L. manager of the Golden Company, when speaking of fair, and I was really know that there was ful picnic ground so close Angeles."



The latest and best way to go on a picnic.

This is only a small portion of the big crowd which went out for a party in a fleet of King eights owned by the Golden State Auto Tours.

FINDS SEDAN THE THING IN EMERGENCY.

DISCOVERS MERITS OF THE ENCLOSED CAR FOR LONG TRIPS.

Another booster for the enclosed type of car for touring purposes was discovered this last week when R. W. Browning returned from a long trip covering all the northern part of the State, including the Yosemite in his Stearns-Knight sedan.

Mr. Browning has used his sedan simply for town car comfort and always made his long trips in a touring car, and when at the last minute he found his touring car was not in shape to make the trip, it was hard for Lynn C. Buxton to convince him that the sedan would be equally as satisfactory. Upon his return however, Mr. Browning had entirely changed his views on the subject and now believes that for almost any purpose the sedan is more comfortable than the touring car.

An Unusual Six
Built Extra Strong—$1350

THE latest Mitchells have been built to meet export requirements. Many of them go to foreign countries where roads are rough and difficult. So these new cars are unique in their sturdiness and strength.

To build these cars, many experts in endurance have been added to the Mitchell staff. They have studied every part, fixing new tests and new standards. To guard against any possible faults, they have doubled the inspections.

On American roads these new-grade cars should render lifetime service.

Exquisite Designing

The latest Mitchell bodies are built in their own new body plant. A famous designer has been placed in charge.

These models are distinguished. They are long and low and roomy. In any crowd of fine cars they will show distinction.

Yet both sizes of Mitchells sell at prices which are uniquely low. Nowhere else in this class do such prices buy so much.

The reason is efficiency methods. Mitchell cars are built complete under scientific methods. Years have been spent in the Mitchell plant to eliminate all waste.

Come and see what extra values these models have produced. You will be surprised.

SHIP PARTS IN TRUNKS.

Transportation Problem is Made Easier.

Difficulties are Overcome by Auto Makers.

Steady Supply of Materials Maintained.

Transportation difficulties have been felt very keenly by the automobile industry, not only in connection with the shipment of completed cars, but with obtaining parts and supplies. Dealers in fineries, buying their wares in all quarters of the world have been accustomed to make shipments of fine and rare laces, embroideries and art goods in trunks and samples. This method seems rather far removed from metal automobile parts yet it is being resorted to by at least one automobile factory in the effort to maintain a regular schedule of production.

PARTS.

The Franklin Automobile Company, manufacturers of the Franklin air cooled car, almost every day receives trunks and suit cases filled with parts which were made in places many miles distant from the factory at Syracuse, N. Y., according to information received by Ralph Hamlin, the Southern California distributor of the Franklin. It is absolutely essential that the automobile manufacturer use whatever methods he can to maintain a steady supply of materials.

CAMSHAFTS.

An example cited by Mr. Hamlin is that of the manner in which a supply of camshafts is maintained in the Franklin factory. These shafts are made in Muskegon, Mich., two nights and a day's journey from Syracuse. For many weeks, however, twice weekly, express shipments of these parts have been directed by special messengers, who keep in close touch with the packages. Because of the fact, express embargoes are laid without advance notice, it has happened that the messengers have had to transfer the shipments from one line to another. If they were not in attendance at least one day would be lost at each transfer point with the result interrupted production would most likely ensue.

PARCEL POST.

Shipments by special delivery parcel post are also much used and large quantities of heavy materials are received in that way. One manufacturer of parts was at first much surprised to receive from the Franklin factory an order for 3500 pounds or more of malleable iron castings to be delivered by parcel post special delivery. He telegraphed promptly to ask if a mistake had not been made. By this time, however, this has become somewhat a common practice and one spark-plug manufacturer now sends 2000 spark plugs every week in parcel post quantities.

AUTO CLUB SIGNS TO GUIDE CARS ON BIG ECONOMY RUN.

WITH 300 signs to post along the route, the Automobile Club of Southern California's advance car will leave Wednesday morning to placard the course of the Camp Curry economy run to the Yosemite Valley. When the fleet of motorists sets out upon the economy tour at 5 o'clock, Friday morning, they will find it practically impossible to lose the road, since the Auto Club will have placed a large guide sign for nearly every mile of the distance.

Don Doig, head of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, will be in charge of the car and the placing of the signs. With him will be Henry Stone of the same organization, a civil engineer, who assisted in the choice of the economy run course several weeks ago.

The total mileage of the jaunt figures up at 378.1 miles, 205.1 miles of this distance being over paved highways and the remaining 173 over dirt road, reported by Auto Club scouts to be in fine shape for most of the way.

It was deemed advisable to route the run through Bouquet Canyon instead of over the steep grades of the Ridge Route, which includes several bad detours at present. If the road between Tulare and Goshen is in shape, the party will take this cut-off instead of going through Visalia, thereby reducing the total mileage nine miles.

Ready to post the road to the Yosemite.

This is the Hupmobile scout car of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which will signpost the route of the Yosemite economy run this week. Secretary Standish Mitchell of the club going over the plans with Don Doig, who will be in charge of the signposting. Henry Stone in the background.

SERVICE STATIONS ARE VERY HELPFUL.

ANXIOUS MOTORISTS CAN GET THEIR BATTERIES EXAMINED.

One of the great helps to the touring motorist nowadays is the service station organization of the large storage battery companies. The Willard Storage Battery Company alone has over 1100 service stations over the country, all of which are equipped to give expert battery service at all times. A. J. Tobey, the local Willard representative, will be glad to furnish a list of the Willard service stations in the United States and Canada to anyone who asks for it. The service station is located at Pico and Hope streets, which is convenient for all motorists in Los Angeles.

Progress.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS IN OVERHEAD VALVE ENGINE

"THE overhead-valve engine of today is a far cry from the engine of the same type which first appeared on the market. The clicking noise of the valve mechanism was unmuffled and consequently audible at times, especially when the valves became worn and out of adjustment. All this has been changed," said O. R. Fuller of the White Auto Company, distributor of the Stephens Salient Six.

"The perfected overhead-valve engine is as quiet as any other type. In the Stephens the only audible sound is the whirr of the fan for the valve mechanism is completely inclosed in a sound-proof housing that effectively silences the click of the valve action. Moreover, the adjustment of the valves is made so easy that there is no tendency to neglect them, insuring the original degree of quiet during the lifetime of the engine. The only tool needed is a screw driver and the adjustment can be made when the engine is running.

EASY ADJUSTMENT.

"The easy adjustment of the Stephens Salient Six valve action is made possible by the unique construction o fthe rocker arm, which has a ball and socket mounting, with the ball screwed into the cylinder head, above the rocker arm. Screwing the ball down brings every part of the valve mechanism into closer adjustment and keeps it as quiet as when new.

"Add to the quietness of the perfected overhead-valve engine the fact that it extracts from 10 to 15 per cent. more power from a given quantity of gasoline than any other type, and that it gives greater pep, quicker acceleration, and more satisfaction in driving, and it becomes apparent why it should be the favorite of experienced automobile owners.

"The Stephens Salient Six engine has an additional advantage in that it is especially constructed to burn low-grade gasoline, the intake manifold being located inside the cylinder head, where it is constantly surrounded by heat, and combined with the exhaust to contain a "hot spot" directly in the path of the incoming gases, cracking up the fuel and vaporizing it completely. With the present poor grades of fuel, this is a matter of first consideration, and accounts in a large measure for the increasing popularity of Stephens cars."

OPENS HERE AGAIN IN TIRE TRADE.

The many friends of John G. Boss, one of the best-known tire men in the city, will be glad to know that after an absence from business for a year he has returned to the tire trade again and has opened up a store and vulcanizing plant at Seventh and Los Angeles streets.

After deciding to open up again in the tire business, Mr. Boss looked over the field carefully for a line of tires that he might have complete confidence in and finally choose the Racine Multi-Mile cord and the Racine Country Road tire as the ones best adapted to meet the requirements of his trade and which are distributed here by the Osler-Racine Rubber Company.

MAY PROVE BIG PRODUCTION PERIOD.

The month of May proved one of the biggest production periods in the history of the Chevrolet Motor Company of California. The great Oakland plants of the concern turned out more than 1200 complete Chevrolet "4-90" touring cars and roadsters, as well as a number of FA passenger cars and light delivery vehicles. The truck axle department was also busy, most of its production being absorbed by eastern Chevrolet connections.

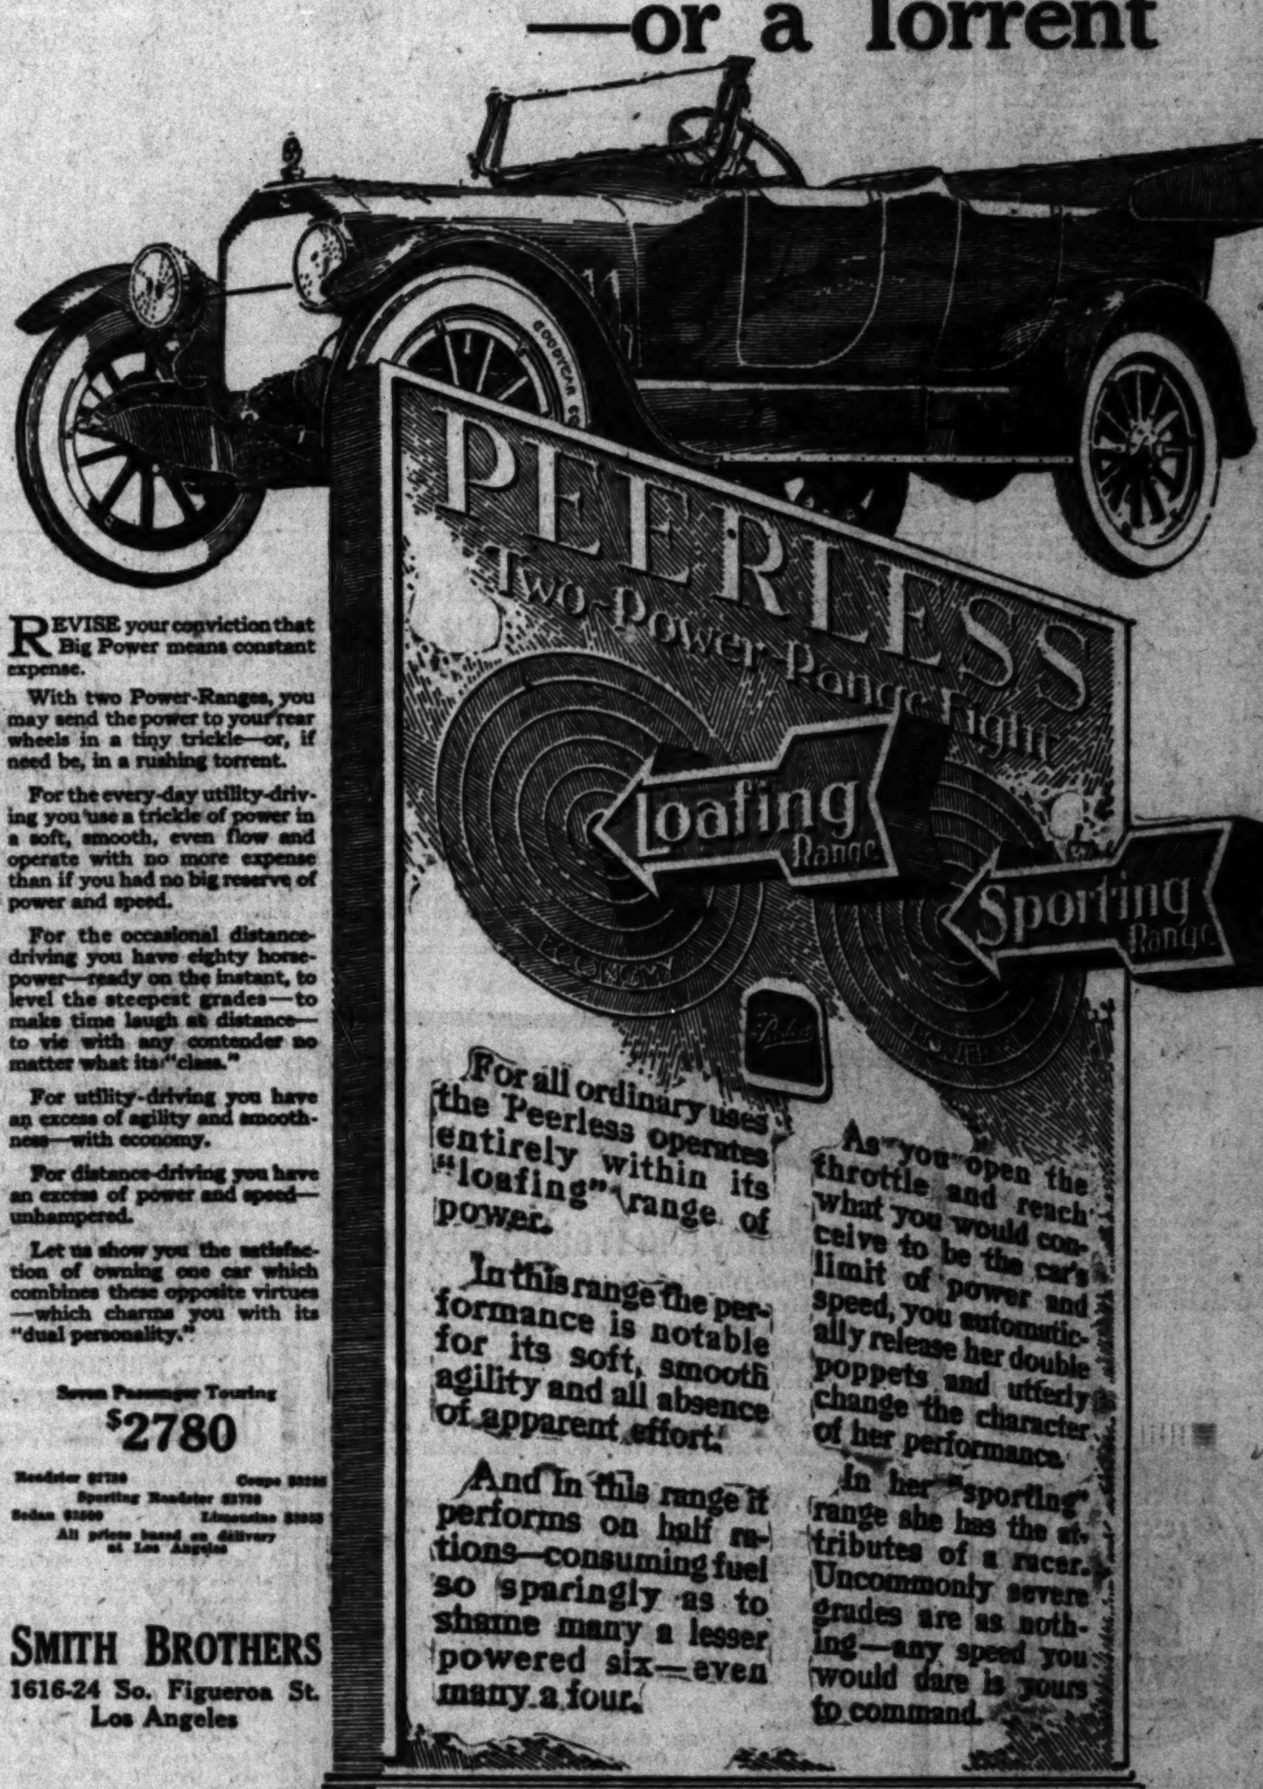
A Trickle of Power
—or a Torrent



REVISE your conviction that Big Power means constant expense.

With two Power-Ranges, you may send the power to your rear wheels in a tiny trickle—or, if need be, in a rushing torrent.

For the every-day utility-driving you use a trickle of power in a soft, smooth, even flow and operate with no more expense than if you had no big reserve of power and speed.

For the occasional distance-driving you have eighty horsepower—ready on the instant, to level the steepest grades—to make time laugh at distance—to vie with any contender no matter what its "class."

For utility-driving you have an excess of agility and smoothness—with economy.

For distance-driving you have an excess of power and speed—unhampered.

Let us show you the satisfaction of owning one car which combines these opposite virtues—which charms you with its "dual personality."

For all ordinary uses the Peerless operates entirely within its "loafing" range of power.

In this range the performance is notable for its soft, smooth agility and all absence of apparent effort.

And in this range it performs on half rations—consuming fuel so sparingly as to shame many a lesser powered six—even many a four.

As you open the throttle and reach what you would conceive to be the car's limit of power and speed, you automatically release her double poppets and utterly change the character of her performance.

In her "sporting" range she has the attributes of a racer. Uncommonly severe grades are as nothing—any speed you would dare is yours to command.

TIRE HOOVERIZING A VERY GOOD IDEA.

Hooverizing on tires as well as all other things is the keynote at this time and hour. We have been in the habit of buying new things without regard to the old, which could have been made almost as good as new for the time spent in inquiring. Edward Harris of the Tire Construction Company, Olive at Pico streets, says: "At least $700,000 will be spent here by motorists this year to have their tread worn, rim cut and down and out tires reclaimed." Individuals and corporations are doing this now more than ever before. Our records show an average of 4000 miles additional in having the old tire repaired in the modern way of repairing.

NORWALK TIRES

As you ride in a Norwalk-equipped car, planing over the boulevard or bounding over rough country roads, you can feel the very wizardry of these casings. Boulevards seem more velvety; the ill-smoothed contour of the rugged highway seems less noticeable. Norwalks form an effective barrier against road vibration and assist in producing luxurious riding comfort.

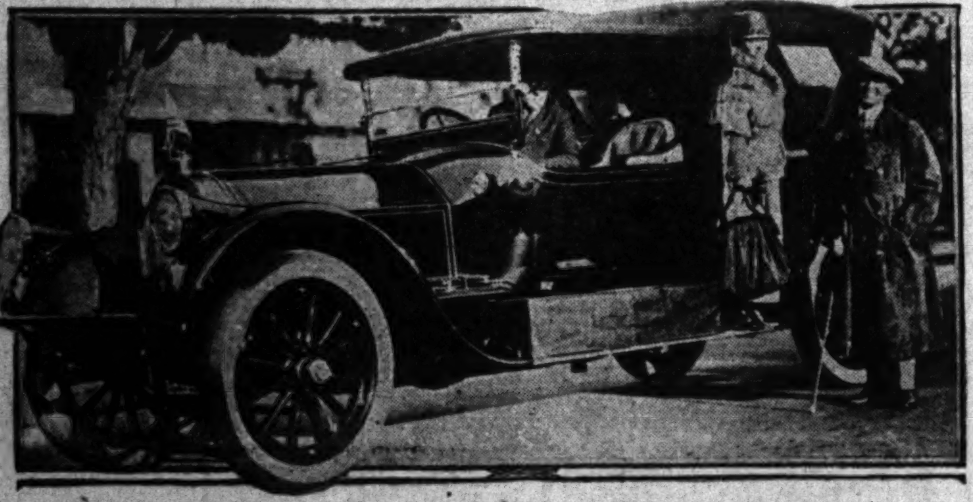
Southern California Wonderland is Discovered by Los Angeles Motorists.



On a long trip in pursuit of health.
We have here Mr. and Mrs. Garland A. Buckingham in the big Pierce-Arrow they have purchased. Mr. Buckingham's health failed and they are to make a 10,000-mile trip to try and regain it.

ANGELENOS LEAVE ON TEN-THOUSAND-MILE AUTO TRIP.

MR. AND MRS. GARLAND A. BUCKINGHAM, No. 1919 South Harvard boulevard, left a few days ago on a 10,000-mile automobile tour, which will take them away a number of months and lead into by-paths where motors have not heretofore gone. Their objective is Lake Louise, up in Canada, but they will visit many other northern resorts, and may even cross the Dominion to the Atlantic. They drove via Lake Tahoe and will go up along the Oregon and Washington coast.

It is primarily a health journey for Mr. Buckingham, who has been ill a long time. Two years ago he was injured by a fall from a horse and he had not fully recovered when he entered the officers' training camp in San Francisco, and as a result he was discharged. Then came a nervous breakdown and now his right arm is paralyzed and practically useless. His weight dropped from the normal 180 pounds to a bare 100, but his spirits remain high and his physicians believe the trip will bring about full recovery. A Pierce-Arrow touring car was bought especially for this journey. He already had a roadster and a town car of this make.

Mr. Buckingham is heavily interested in the automobile manufacturing industry. He and Mrs. Buckingham reside alternately in their mansions in this city and Pasadena, and Mr. Buckingham spends much of his time at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. On their return, he announced just before leaving, he will take up Red Cross work in a large way and devote all his time to it until the war is ended. He intimated that considerable of his immense income will also be placed at the disposal of this great organization of mercy, for which he desires to do big things. Mrs. Buckingham is in sympathy with this purpose and will work with him.

TIMELY ADVICE FOR OWNERS OF FORDS.

Ford owners should be very careful in removing the cylinder-head, not to dent or otherwise injure the large gasket. After this gasket has been removed, both sides should be carefully cleaned and then painted with a solution of gum shellac dissolved in alcohol, just before it is returned to its place. In replacing the cylinder-head, the bolts should be firmly tightened and the engine should be run until the metal is thoroughly warmed up and then the bolts can be given another tightening all around.

SCOUTS FIND BEAUTY SPOT.

"Lost Mountain" Discovered by Persistent Autoists.

Beautiful Laguna Park at Gate of Desert.

Real Treat is Reward for Roundabout Journey.

Laguna Mountain, where is it? Somewhere in San Diego county, was about the most inclusive information that could be gained in Los Angeles until Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., the Chandler distributors, recently dispatched one of their touring cars, in charge of E. H. Philbrook and Roy H. Compton, in search of the lost mountain—lost because of lack of definite location, although it appeared on some maps. Efforts to obtain definite instructions, on how to get there were futile here, so further inquiries were made at San Diego.

Several in San Diego had heard of Laguna Mountain Park, but no, they never had been there, although they understood it was a very pretty place—lakes, tall pines, beautiful vistas and all that sort of thing. As to the roads, the only procurable advice was to go to Descanso and somebody there could tell where next to go.

So the Chandler explorers set forth and when near the end of a five hours' drive they arrived and found Laguna Mountain Park to be everything that had been said about it and much more. The "somebody" in Descanso, who gave directions, said he had driven a buggy up to the summit and he guessed the scouts could make it in about an hour. He must have been an ardent Chandler enthusiast, but even as it was he overestimated the ability of the car and passengers. It required about two and one-half hours to get to the lake at the end of the road from Descanso, and there was no loafing along the way, either.

THE PARK.

The park itself, seventy-two miles from San Diego and 210 miles from Los Angeles, is truly a beauty spot. It covers the entire top of Laguna Mountain and is known officially as Laguna Recreation Area of the Cleveland National Forest, Descanso district. The country resembles somewhat the Big Bear region, but is not quite so rugged. It will prove ideal to those motorists who desire to go somewhere that is different and where they can be aloof from the crowd. The ranger told the Chandler party they were the first motorists from Los Angeles to visit the place since the road has been made. The fact that there is a good road, free from dangerous driving, is one of the chief assets of Laguna Mountain.

STATELY PINES.

Tall, stately pine trees, and, more unusual than anything else, thousands of maple trees are just now bursting into full leaf. Wild pigeons, that rarest of birds, were seen in flocks by the visitors. Great white-headed eagles soared aloft overhead and one inquisitive old fellow flapped his wings almost in the faces of the motorists, as if challenging their right to penetrate his domain. Fifteen hundred feet from the roadside the mountain drops in a sheer precipice 3000 feet to the Imperial desert. Vegetation ceases abruptly at the brink, and, standing at Monument Rock, one may look on a clear day across the tops of intervening mountain ridges and see the Salton Sea, the smoke from the towns of Imperial and Brawley. Southward are Mexico's mountains and to the west the blue Pacific may be seen.

Two selections of roads are offered when leaving San Diego. The Chandler scout car traveled both of them and the members of the party report there is little preference. One is via Broadway, east through National City to Lemon Grove and Helix, where a cutoff can be taken north to the State highway near Grossmont, which lays some claim to fame as the homesite of Mme. Schumann-Heink.

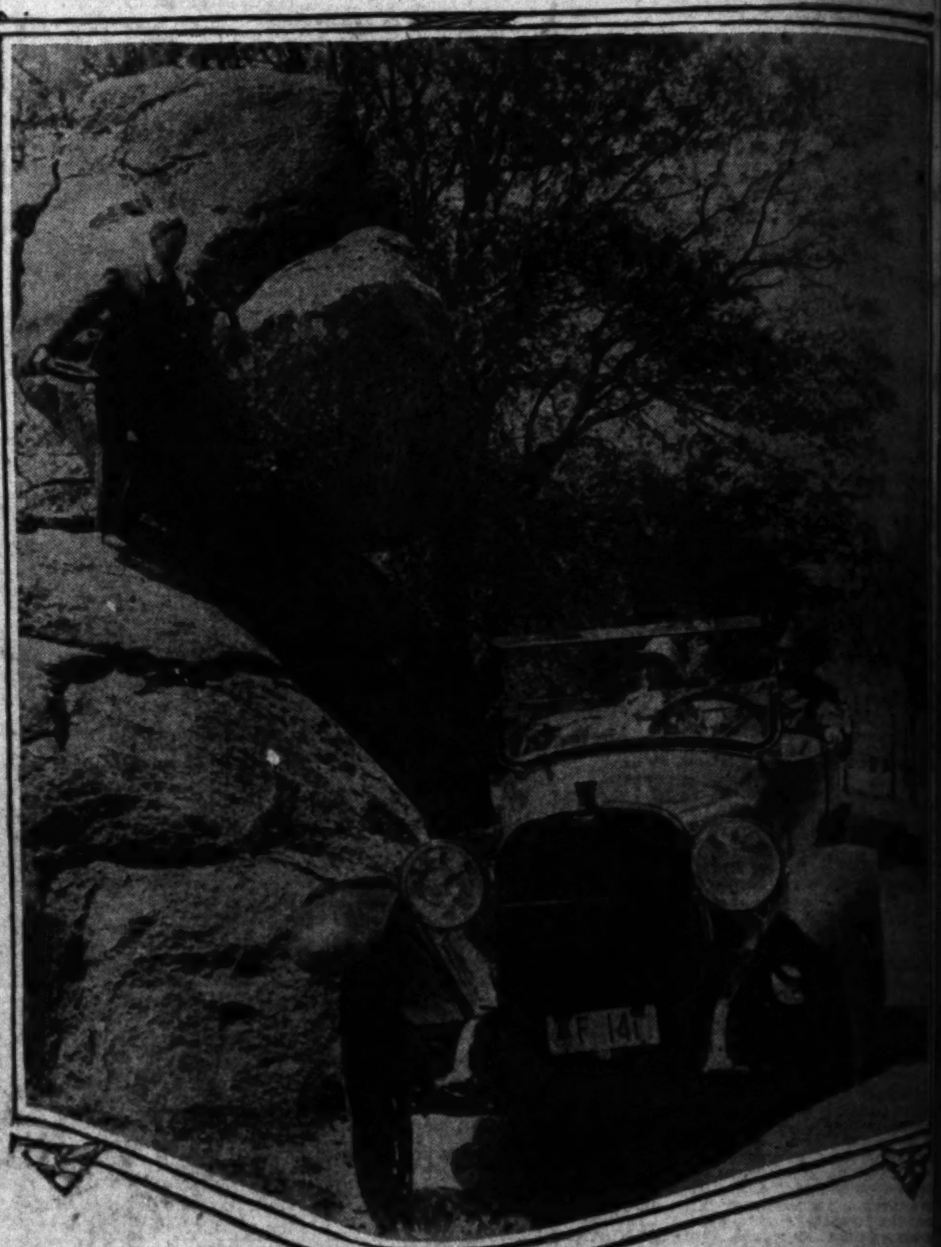
The other is out of the city, north on Fifth street to University avenue, thence east, following the "best temporary route" signs of the Auto Club. It might be remarked that the "best temporary route" in San Diego county can be depended upon to be bad enough. If there is any worse stretch of rough and dusty road any place in the country it deserves a prize. This part of the road leads through La Mesa, and if the residents of that town are asked which is the "best" route they will confess ignorance and say all of them are bad enough.

The State highway is under construction. Sections of it have been paved and covered to await the curing process. It is necessary to drive across barley fields west of El Cajon, but from that point through Bostonia and for several miles beyond the pavement is down, but unsurfaced. Approaching Alpine the going is the worst of the entire trip. Be careful and do not attempt much speed through the ruts, as they are deep and deceptive. At the base are many sharp rocks and some of these project menacingly in a way that means disaster to the crankcase if they are struck.

NEAR WILLOWS.

Near Willows is a landing field where the student aviators from North Island return to the ground when on practice flights. When the scout Chandler passed, four airplanes were circling over the field at the same time. The landing is in a valley entirely surrounded by mountains and it requires some skill to bring the plane to earth and leave again without mishap. The Viegas grade is in excellent condition and cars that are not addicted to overheating will make it with ease, the Chandler taking the entire climb on high gear. The new highway will not cover this grade, as it runs about four miles to the eastward and follows a new route entirely removed from the rock-strewn hills.

As Descanso are the last signs of habitation. A county road is encountered that is in very good condition and it leads to Summit. A huge signboard at Summit marks the confines of the Cleveland National Forest. There is but a single road and it goes only to one place, the small, spring-fed lake that nestles on the very top of a mountain at an elevation of 6000 feet. O. W. Rutherford is the ranger in charge of this part of the Descanso district and he will issue the necessary fire permit.



Up where automobiles are strangers.
This is the Chandler six which was about the first car to penetrate into the wonderland only a few miles from San Diego, but which has only recently been opened.

AUTO-DEVICE INVENTOR IS ANGEL CITY BOOSTER.

THE Holley vapor manifold for Ford cars, manufactured by the Holley Carburetor Company of Detroit and distributed in this State by the California Sales Company, is the result of winter visits that have been made to Los Angeles and Southern California by George Holley, stated an official of the distributing company.

"There is probably no greater booster for Los Angeles in this country than Holley. The inventor of the well-known carburetor which bears his name and which is made by the largest concern of its kind in the world, he was naturally attracted by the manifold devices on the market here and which are used for the purpose of getting the best result from fuel and particularly distillate," he said.

"The heat is obtained from the exhaust gases, a portion of which are circulated through a jacket around the intake manifold proper, this jacket being carried down around the lower bend, where the fuel tends to collect in the standard unjacketed Ford manifold. In the cold manifold some of the fuel particles which are finely subdivided when sprayed from the carburetor, are deposited on the wall and in drops run down and accumulate in the bend, just forward of the carburetor.

"This results in a lean mixture being used in the engine until sufficient fuel has gathered at this point to be picked up by the incoming air and carried up into the engine. This over-rich mixture will deposit some liquid fuel in the cylinders, resulting in carbonizing of the engine and the dilution of the oil in the crankcase, as well as faulty operation. The heat supplied by the Holley vapor manifold at the bend in the intake where the particles collect, immediately vaporizes these and aside from getting 100 per cent. fuel results eliminates all chance of cylinder scoring."

GATHER BEST IDEAS TO TURN OUT PERFECT CAR.

NOW that the motor car has been made thoroughly practical for every business use, automotive engineers are concerned in making many refinements in design and construction. The Peerless car is particularly noteworthy in this respect. Their engineers have worked tirelessly to get the proper weight distribution and balance of materials with greater strength and lightness. They have borrowed from all engineering principles to accomplish their purpose, according to Stanley W. Smith of Smith Bros., Peerless distributors.

A notable feature in the construction of the chassis is its bridge design. Feeling that the same principles apply, those of great strength and flexibility, they are using the same bracing. Formerly the frame depended for its rigidity upon deep channel-shaped side members. To give these the necessary strength they had to be of fairly heavy construction. This extra weight was felt to be unnecessary by the Peerless engineers, and they have been successful in greatly reducing the weight of the frame side members by using a principle familiar to bridge design, the truss.

This construction permits far greater strength with greatly reduced weight, for the truss-rods furnish exceptionally strong bracing throughout. The frame of the motor car when in action is subjected to about the same strain as a bridge, as it is virtually a bridge between the front and back wheels. It must carry all of the weight of the body and pas- road action. The constant play on the frame of usual design is very likely to cause crystallization of steel, which is not true in the truss design. There is no new principle involved in sengers and at the same time be both rigid and flexible to the uneven this type of bracing, as it has been used for a great number of years in bridge building. Its application, however, to the frame of the automobile was first adopted by the Peerless Motor Car Company to accomplish greater strength with considerably lessened weight.

SNAPPY YACHTING EVENTS PROMISED FOR NEWPORT.

THE next race scheduled by the Newport Harbor Yacht Club will be a handicap motor boat race on Sunday, June 16, at 10 o'clock a.m. The course runs from Newport Beach (Balboa pier) to Huntington Beach and return—a distance of sixteen miles. The race is open to all classes and entrants will be required to fill out entry blanks giving full details and measurements of their boats, so that time allowances can be computed and announced before the day of the race. Blanks can be obtained by addressing Leon S. Heseman, secretary, Riverside, Cal.

The associated chambers of commerce of Orange county have made to the Newport Harbor Yacht Club a deed of gift—donating a handsome trophy to be competed for in an annual series of three yacht races to take place off the ocean front of the beach towns of Orange county during the months of July and August. The regatta committee of the club is to arrange and announce details and specific dates not less than thirty days prior to each race. Not more than one race shall be held off any particular beach in the same year. It is believed that the first race will take place at Newport Beach next month, and the donors of the trophy will be the guests of the club on that occasion.

At the last meeting of directors of the Newport Harbor Yacht Club a letter was received from the boys of the Riverside Polytechnic High School stating that they had challenged every high school in Southern California to a sailing contest between small boats on Newport Bay, to take place in August of this year. The directors at once authorized the secretary to communicate with the boys of the challenged schools and inform them that the club would assist them in purchasing or building a small sailing yacht to be used in this race—by subscribing a sum of $10 toward the cost of each boat, providing the full amount should be subscribed (not over $200) within thirty days. It has since been learned that boats suitable for this race can be had for about $100 each, but the club offer holds good, and the secretary will be glad to hear from any high school boys who have pluck enough to accept the Riverside challenge.

TINY SCREEN STAR FINDS WAY TO SAVE HER TIRES.

ONE of the newest devotees of Palmer tubes is little Virginia Lee Corbin, the juvenile Fox star, who achieved national fame by her acting in "Jack and the Beanstalk" on the screen. In her five years of earthly existence little Virginia has shown herself to be an unusually talented little lady. In addition to her ability as a Thespian she also has shown good judgment in the selection of her automobile and accessories. It is remarkable that one so young has such good taste. She has had her car painted and upholstered after color schemes that best suit her complexion.

Now that the summer is here she plans to take many trips when she is not "working." Realizing that many a short jaunt is spoiled by tire trouble she has equipped her car with Palmer cord tires.

Little Virginia said, in talking to H. M. Haldeman, president of the Pacific Pipe and Supply Company: "My car is so big and I am so tiny that I cannot always see everything in the road before me, and I sometimes run over sticks and boards and get punctures in my tires. In order to prevent a lot of these happenings I was told that Palmer cord tubes should be used. Either I am not running over boards as much as before or the tubes are really all that is claimed for them, because since I have used them I have had no tire trouble of any form, and it certainly makes me feel fine to know that I am not going to be bothered with costly blowouts either. My advice to eevryone is to use Palmer cord tubes."

ANGLER REPORTS VIOLATION OF LAW ON BIG BEAR LAKE.

The following communition, received from a La Habra business man, is deemed worthy of publication:

"Sporting Editor, Los Angeles Times.

"Dear sir: Last Saturday and Sunday myself and a party of friends went to Big Bear Lake on a week-end fishing trip. We had excellent success, but, to our disgust, found one party who makes a business of taking people out fishing and who is a hog and curse to the game. This man catches two or three limits a day and further violates the law by selling them. I am a sportsman and obey the law. I think that it should be seen to that this kind of business ends. I hate to see a man go out and catch thirty beauties and sell them for $4, $10 or $12 for the three limits."

Rolling Along.

COMFORT IS LARGE ITEM.

Summer Tour Should be Planned Very Carefully.

Disposition of Party Members Important Factor.

Be Certain that Brakes are in Good Shape.

Many things enter into the pleasure of summer touring. The disposition of the various members of the party is an important factor. To begin with the passengers must know that they are going to have a good time. Be prepared for a few discomforts, start with a determination to get the most pleasure possible out of the trip.

But one thing that can make or spoil the tour is the car itself. Any tour can be ruined by a car that requires constant attention and keeps the occupants continually in fear of troubles.

"In arranging for a summer tour the first thing, of course," said J. E. Brown, manager for Don Lee in Los Angeles, "is to plan the trip. California abounds in beautiful places within easy reach. Tours of from two days' duration to a month can be arranged. It is possible to travel every day for a month and see a continually changing country. The roads are good, and, as a whole, our mountain highways are above the average.

"But for any tour the car is the thing that really makes the tour a success. Cadillac owners tour extensively every summer, and, on their return, Cadillac owners all have the same story, that they never really knew the joys of a good car before taking the long tour. To be an ideal car for touring means a combination of qualities.

"Under all conditions, safety is the first thought and your car should have good brakes, axles must be strong to carry the load and withstand the strain imposed by driving on rough roads, wheels should be strong and well secured, your car should have a good cooling system, it should be easy to steer and have easy-acting brakes and clutch. The Cadillac is, I believe, a leader when it comes to these qualifications. Extra large brake drums, heavy wheels and axles, a fine cooling system and ease of operation are all well-known Cadillac characteristics."

BRONZE BUSHINGS PREVENT RATTLING.

"As soon as a motor truck is put into service, wear begins. And as the wear increases, rattle commences," observed A. L. Jones, manager of the Edward R. Bacon Company, Pacific Coast distributors of Sterling motor trucks, in commenting upon the noise that was being made by a motor truck that was standing at the curb with the engine running.

"In order that the Sterling may successfully fight the wear and tear all the spring bearings are bushed with bronze—in fact, each and every wearing part throughout a Sterling motor truck is bronze bushed—this is one of the reasons for the comparatively quiet running of the Sterling.

DICK HOLLINGSWORTH PUTS OVER GOOD ONE.

DRIVES TOURING CAR UP THE STEPS OF GLOBE COURTHOUSE.

"Chevrolet Dick" Hollingsworth made the natives of Arizona sit up and take notice last week when he picked out the steps of the Globe Courthouse as a demonstrating field and drove a "490" touring car up the steep flight. Previous to the stunt it had generally been pronounced impossible.

The Courthouse steps represent a concrete grade of 37 per cent. Many machines had tried to get up them, but in every instance failure was the result. All this was explained to Hollingsworth, but his faith in the product he is selling overcame all skepticism.

A big crowd of motor enthusiasts gathered to watch the trial, most of them figuring on giving "Chevrolet Dick" the laugh. In this they were disappointed, for the "490" made a regular "joke" of the incline, going over without a falter, and with pep to spare. Not only that, but the power used was so skillfully applied that the wheels did not even spin, and the tires were as perfect at the finish as at the start.

WELL-KNOWN FIRM CHANGES ITS NAME.

WILLIAM L. HUGHSON COMPANY IS TO SUCCEED THE PACIFIC KISSELKAR BRANCH.

One of the surprises along Automobile Row this past week was the announcement of the changing of the name of the Pacific KisselKar Branch to that of the William L. Hughson Company.

Hughson is one of the oldest and best-known automobile men in the West, and the best-known western automobile man in the East, numbering among his close friends the heads of the various automobile manufacturers, having been engaged in the automobile industry in San Francisco as the head of his company for the last fifteen years.

The name of the Pacific KisselKar Branch was adopted in 1913, succeeding the Standard Motor Car Company, when this company took on the Kissel line. Since 1913 this company has increased its business until today seven branches are located up and down the Coast, from the Canadian line to the Mexican border.

This change in the firm name does not, in any way, alter the personnel of the company, its policies, the exchange of stock, or the discontinuance of any of the lines that we handle, but purely and simply that it will hereafter be known as the William L. Hughson Company.

ENCLOSED TYPE IS BECOMING POPULAR.

In this land of sunshine, so different from any other section of the country, a great majority of motorists have their tops up constantly summer and winter, and there are many who say they have never had their tops down.

This condition has given rise to the big demand this year for the enclosed type of car, says W. D. Dunham, the Ford agent on West Seventh street, for this type of car permits the opening up of the side windows, giving practically the same result as a touring car.

WATCH OUT FOR CREEPING RIM.

IF SHOULDERS BECOME WORN ON DEMOUNTABLES TROUBLE MAY RESULT.

Few owners realize that a rim with its tire can creep around the wheel if the shoulders on the wheel which hold the demountable rim are the least bit worn, says B. F. Wade of the Wade Tire and Rubber Company, distributors for the all-red Tyrian tire.

This occurred recently with one of our customers, and was noticed only because the valve stem came through the wheel hole at an acute angle. This was caused by the rim and tire creeping around, thus tending to pull the valve stem out of its place.

If the valve stem is held firmly by means of a cap, then the strain falls on the lower portion of the stem and the portion of the inner tube surrounding it. In the case mentioned the pull was so great the valve stem was cut almost in two.

CANADA CONTINUES TO DEMAND AUTOS.

Agent of the Damon Specialty Company, manufacturer of Nonelio polishes for automobiles, located in Calgary and Edmonton, Can., write that there has been no let-up in the demand for automobiles in that section, although every one there is lending their efforts to win the war.

W. H. Damon, now in the northern part of the State with a crew of salesmen, writes that as long as he has been a resident of the Pacific Coast, he has never seen general business conditions as good as now. "Lack of late rains in some quarters has hurt some, but this is offset in other ways. The Coast is prospering, I believe as it never has before," he says.

PETE DALEY'S HOMER WINS.

Poles One Over in Last Half of Seventh Inning.

Vernon Victor by Score of Four to Three.

Sacramento Ties Things up in the Third.

Again did Bill Essick win by a home-run swat. This time a mighty pole by Pete Daley in the last half of the seventh inning did the work. The final score was Vernon 4, Sacramento 3. It all happened in this way: After Mitchell had singled to left and Alcock flied to Willie, Chadbourne singled to left field and stole second. Daley then hit the ball to the center-field fence for a homer, scoring Chadbourne before him. A wag sitting in one of the boxes declared that Pete's great-great-grandchildren would hear of this historical wallop.

Borton then singled infield, but was out stealing second, Easterly to Rodgers. Two runs, three hits. Vernon started the run getting in the first inning. After Mitchell had singled infield and Alcock popped to Downey, Chadbourne singled to right and Mitchell took third on the throw. Wolter, however, threw the ball past Pinelli and Mitchell scored, Chet taking second. Daley grounded to Griggs, Chet taking third. Borton walked, but was caught off first. He reached second, however, on Downey's error, Chadbourne scoring on the play. Moore flied to Eldred. Two runs, two hits, two errors.

Sacramento tied the score in the third on Rodgers's walk, singles by Pinelli and West, Willie's out to Moore, Downey's single, scoring Rodgers. Wolter's sacrifice fly to Chadbourne, Pinelli scoring and Eldred's pop to Wisterzil. The visitors made their last run in the eighth on Willie's fly to Chadbourne, Downey's double, Wolter's single, Eldred's sacrifice fly and Griggs's out to Chadbourne. They were easy pickings after that. The score:

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

STAGG FIELD (Chicago) June 8.—Howard Drew, erstwhile University of Southern California sprinter and now representing Drake University, won the 100-yard dash in today's western conference meet in the snappy time of 9 2-5s. Getting off to a perfect start, Drew defeated Jackson Scholz, the Missouri flyer, by a scant yard.

Ideal weather conditions favored the running off of the championships on Stagg Field. The track was in perfect condition, and the time in most of the events far above standard. Drew cleaned up in the 220 as well as the 100, covering the longer sprint in 22 2-5s.

It was Michigan's first appearance in the western classic since 1906.

The summaries:

HUGE PURSES PUT UP FOR TROTTERS.

The Southeastern Fair Association will give over $30,000 in purses for its Grand Circuit meeting, which will be held at Atlanta, Ga., October 14 to 19. Of the eighteen races on the programme, thirteen will be of the late closing variety. Early closing events with $2500 purses are offered for the 2:07 and 2:14 trotters; 2:04 and 2:11 pacers, while $500 will be added to a race for two-year-old trotters. Lakewood Park is one of the fastest course in the country, as was shown by the exhibition of Lee Axworthy in 1:59¾ a few days after it was completed in 1916, as well as the mile in two minutes which Miss Harris M. paced over it last October in her race with Hal Boy.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Philadelphia ended the five-game winning streak of Chicago by defeating the locals 3 to 2 in ten innings. Hits by Oldring, Walker and Burns scored the winning run off Danforth, who succeeded Williams after the eighth inning. Gregg pitched throughout for the visitors, allowing six hits. Eddie Collins had eight putouts, which is believed to be a record for a second baseman. He twice made running catches of line drives that prevented hits. The score:

BIG LEAGUE BATTING FIGURES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 8.—Driving out home runs is becoming a habit with "Babe" Ruth, the Boston pitcher, who is leading the American League in batting. Ruth signalized his return to the game after a brief illness by collecting four homers in four days while playing an outfield position. As he failed to hit any other hits, however, his average fell off, but he still is showing the way with .371, according to unofficial averages released today. He has a record of seven home runs this season. The figures include games of Wednesday.

Sisler of St. Louis continued to show the way to the base stealers with twenty and McInnis of Boston and Shean, his teammate, remain tied in sacrifice hitting with fifteen. Chapman of Cleveland leads in scoring, having crossed the plate thirty times. St. Louis leads in team batters with .274. The leading batters for twenty-five or more games:

Ruth, Boston, .371; Walker, Philadelphia, .367; Baker, New York, .350; Burns, Philadelphia, .344; Sisler, St. Louis, .340; Eddie Collins, Chicago, .337; Hooper, Boston, .327; Tobin, St. Louis, .322; Gandil, Chicago, .320; McMullin, Chicago, .312; Felsch, Chicago, .308.

Cracking out a dozen hits in six games boosted Fred Merkle, the Chicago first baseman, from fifth to second place in the list of National League hitters. He is batting .376, twenty-six points above his average a week ago. Larry Doyle, because of his continued absence from the game, remains at the top with .426. The averages include games of Wednesday.

Carey of Pittsburgh, who is leading the base stealers, has twenty thefts to his credit. Rousch of Cincinnati has taken the lead in sacrifice hitting with fourteen. Wickland of Boston and Cruise of St. Louis top the home run hitters with three each. Benny Kauff of New York is leading in scoring, having registered thirty-two in forty games. Chicago drove New York out of first place in team hitting with .282. The leading batters for fifteen or more games:

Doyle, New York, .426; Merkle, Chicago, .376; Smith, Boston, .370; Wickland, Boston, .348; Daubert, Brooklyn, .343; Kauff, New York, .341; Mann, Chicago, .346; Paskert, Chicago, .321; Hollocher, Chicago, .320; Lee Magee, Cincinnati, .320.

HICKEY SAYS HIS MEN ARE JUMPING.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION PLAYERS HURRYING TO STEEL LEAGUES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, June 7.—American Association ball players are beginning to get the steel league fever, and President Tom Hickey is up in arms as a result. According to Hickey, four players of the league have quit to work for the Bethlehem Steel Company, which also boasts a six-club league, made up almost entirely of major and minor league players. Hickey also declares three other players, all members of the Minneapolis club, are about to make the jump.

Employees of the Bethlehem company are for the most part exempt from the draft, being classed as occupying positions necessary to winning the war. That, combined with Provost-Marshal-General Crowder's recent "work or fight" edict, may have caused the wholesale quitting of the American Association players. Joe Jackson of the White Sox left his club to work for a subsidiary of the steel company and was declared exempt from draft after being placed in class 1. A later report had it that his draft board had appealed the case. President Hickey declares he will take up the matter with the government direct, and with the Bethlehem company.

RED FABER NOW A CHIEF YEOMAN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

GREAT LAKES (Ill.) June 7.—Urban (Red) Faber of the Chicago White Sox is through with professional baseball until the war ends. The man who pitched the Sox to the world championship, enlisted today as a chief yeoman and will report to the detention camp next week. He will be sent through the regular training routine just the same as the most humble rookie and at the conclusion, if he has his way, will be sent out to sea to whiff the Hun. Faber is not a stranger to the mysteries of the high seas, as he was a member of the Sox-Giants party that toured the world in 1913.

Ben Dyer, utility infielder of the Detroit Tigers, for the last two seasons, has enlisted as a third-class yeoman. He will enter the officers' school when his detention period ends.

NASH TRUCKS

QUICK AND ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION

Nash Trucks for Continuous Service

Trucks that give continuous service—that haul their loads day after day with no time off—are solving the transportation problem of business in these days of congested traffic.

Powerful and dependable, Nash trucks have many superior mechanical features which enable them to give just this kind of service to any business. They are built to have a long and satisfactory life in the severest truck work.

Emphasizing the soundness of Nash truck construction, is the M & S automatic locking differential. The Nash truck's driving wheels cannot spin. They always drive together. This saves tires and fuel. It lets Nash trucks get through where others without this important feature cannot go.

Another example is the exceptionally strong internal gear drive rear axle. This axle is much simpler and lighter than others. It also delivers a greater amount of power to the driving wheels, especially at low engine speeds.

There are many other features of Nash truck construction which fit these trucks unusually well to give you a continuous truck service at lowest cost. Our transportation expert will be glad to tell you about them in detail

VALUE CARS AT VOLUME PRICES

The Supply of Super-Sixes is Running Low

Our Allotment Has Been Reduced—The Sales Demand Increases

It is well for all who plan buying Hudsons to know these facts:

It never was so difficult to plan for the future.

The newspapers have told you how automobile production has been reduced and how further curtailment is planned.

Our schedule of Hudsons for the future has again been cut down, the second revision since January.

When the factory had an opportunity during the winter months to build cars in excess of the demand, freight conditions made it impossible to get necessary shipments through to us. Now the production is reduced and will become still lower.

Present deliveries are just about enough to meet present needs.

As the season advances an acute shortage seems inevitable.

Then people will offer premiums for prompt deliveries of good cars.

It will come early to the Super-Six because of its popularity.

More than 53,000 users already know its reliability.

These are times when proved cars are in greatest demand. Men want cars they know they can rely upon.

That is why Super-Six sales are so great.

It is why you should buy now if you plan buying at all.

If the car you now have is not fully dependable, you should change it without delay.

The production for the future may make it impossible if you wait.

Undesirables.

JUDGE HAIGHT of the Federal District Court of Newark rendered an important decision recently in a case where a naturalized native of Germany was accused of disloyalty. He held that the accused had proved by recent actions that, when he took the oath of allegience to this country, it was with a mental reservation, and that a naturalization secured through fraud is not a legal one. This decision is the first of its kind ever rendered in a Federal court in America. It clearly establishes a precedent for depriving any disloyal person of alien birth of his citizenship papers. A certificate of citizenship in the American republic is not irrevocable. A foreigner who takes the oath of allegience and later violates that oath loses henceforth the right to American citizenship. If this rule is generally followed it will be a severe blow to candidates in certain Congressional districts who are depending upon the pro-German vote to elect them. More than half the pro-German votes are cast by naturalized Germans.

Sea Lords and Landlords.

AS THE war progresses the futility of any nation or concourse of nations seeking to rule the world without dominating the sea is more fully established. Germany and Austria have won successes on the eastern front more pronounced than their own strategists expected at the beginning of the war. They have extended their battle lines over vast areas but they are no nearer to victory or world domination than when the war started. In fact, the limits of their operations are narrowly inscribed and the food problem continues to be a growing menace. Through control of the seas the Allies have been able to replace all loss of material in France and Belgium, and they are in a fair way to make up for the loss of man power occasioned by Russia's collapse. It is one of the paradoxes of civilization that the landlords of the nations are the lords of the sea.

Sour Grapes, Perhaps.

CHAIRMAN NEWTON of the New Jersey State Board of Health should be regarded as a public benefactor. He has prepared a column of statistics to substantiate his theory that appendicitis is prevalent among athletes, especially football players, and that it is caused by feeding them too much meat. He asserts that, among non-meat eaters appendicitis is practically unknown. It is a comfort, at least during these days of vegetable steaks and tubular oysters, to know that one is immune from appendicitis. If some scientist will only discover that poverty is a germ propagated by milling wheat, war diets may yet become popular.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

By Mabel Herbert Urner.

ANOTHER crash, and a glint of lightning swept the black rain-beaten lawn. Helen, standing by the window, watched the dark shrubbery bow to the pelting downpour.

"You can't go out in this," insisted Carrie. "Might as well make up your mind to stay all night."

"Looks that way now," admitted Warren. "Coming down in sheets."

"Is that 8:20 the last train?" asked Helen, reluctant to stay. "I thought there was one at 10 o'clock?"

"Been taken off," Lawrence informed her. "Now you settle down right here—go in with me in the morning."

"But we're not fixed to stay," demurred Helen.

"What of it? Guess Carrie can give you a nightie." Then with a laugh "Warren'll need a shoe-horn to get into my pajamas."

As again a blinding flash lit the flooded lawn, Helen turned resignedly from the window. They could not get to the station in this storm, and it was now a quarter of eight.

"Now that'll do, Bobbie. Put your airplane away," admonished his mother. "Aunt Helen's tired of playing with you."

But Bobbie, resenting the approach of his bedtime, clamored to have his airplane wound up once more.

In setting it off, he jabbed it against Helen's skirt, and the whirring wheels caught and tore the sheer georgette.

"Now see what you've done!" Lawrence started angrily toward his small son.

"He didn't mean to do it," defended Carrie, as Bobbie set up a howl. "Come to mother, dearie."

"I say, Helen, that's too bad," apologized Lawrence.

"Oh, that can be mended," longing to shake her spoilt, unruly nephew.

"There's Anna now—ready to take you upstairs," announced Carrie, as the nurse-maid appeared at the door.

Another howl of protest, and he was finally dragged from the room, shrieking and kicking the banisters all the way up.

"Carrie, if you don't lamm that youngster occasionally—you'll have your hands full in a few years," shrugged Warren grimly.

"Bobbie's too nervous—he's too high strung! You can't deal with him like an ordinary child. The doctor says he mustn't be excited."

"Piffle!" was Warren's grunted comment.

"That's just what I say," agreed Lawrence, "but Carrie insists on spoiling him."

"We'll not discuss that now," combated Carrie, haughtily.

"Well, what have you folks decided about next week?" asked Lawrence, tactfully changing the subject. "Going to Atlantic City with us?"

"Far as I know now—but I'll call you up Thursday," promised Warren.

Helen was unresponsively silent. A week-end with Carrie and the children held no allurements. With growing apprehension she listened to their plans.

They would write Thursday night for the rooms. Carrie was most insistent that they go to the Ocean Crest, where a very special rate was made for children and nurse-maids.

"We rather like the Breakcliff," ventured Helen.

"Oh, I hate that house," was Carrie's exasperating comment. "The rooms are so small and the service is abominable."

"Well, if we're to take that 7:40, we'd better turn in," yawned Warren. "You suburbanites are used to being rousted out early—but we're not."

Upstairs Carrie switched on the lights in the guest room, folded up the lace bedspread, and brought in a nightgown and a suit of pale blue pajamas.

"I'm afraid you can't open these windows—it's coming this way," as she drew down the shades over the rain-blurred glass, "but I'll raise the one in the hall—and you can leave your door open."

The room was damp and musty from disuse. Carrie's boasted ability as a housekeeper did not extend to the comfort of her guests. It was only another evidence of her selfishness, reflected Helen.

A few moments later Warren emerged from the bathroom, a grotesque figure in the tight short-legged pajamas, his bare feet, lacking slippers, thrust into his unlaced shoes.

"Jove, didn't think I was that much bigger than Lawrence."

"Why, you're much larger in every way," declared Helen, with a note of pride. "I'm almost lost in this," for her nightgown trailed on the floor. "Dear, do look—if she hasn't given me an old one! Why, the lace is torn!"

"Trust you to roast Carrie," as he kicked off his shoes.

"Well, I can't help seeing things. Last winter when she stayed in town unexpectedly—I got out my best French nightgown and my chiffon negligee. And this is what she's given me—and that old toweling bath robe!"

Forced to dispense with her usual toilet rituals, with a rankling sense of discomfort Helen got into bed. Carrie might at least have inquired if she wanted cold cream. And in the morning—she would have to ask for powder and a button-hook, as the guest-room dresser was barren of even these essentials.

"What the deuce is that?" growled Warren.

"It must be a shutter—the window by the dresser."

"Well, we'll not stand for that banging!" He lurched out of bed. "Keep me awake all night."

"Oh, wait—wait, you'll be drenched," warned Helen, as having turned on the light he threw up the window. The curtains swirling out, even from the bed she could feel the fine damp spray.

"This blooming catch's broken! Get me something to tie it—quick!"

"There isn't a thing—put it down! Oh, you'll be drenched!"

Slamming down the window, he glanced around the room for something to fasten the refractory shutter.

"Why, Warren—what're you doing?" as he grabbed one of her silk stockings that dangled invitingly from the back of a chair.

"Then get me something else! I can't sleep with that racket."

"Wait, I'll ask Carrie—I don't think they're in bed yet."

Her tan pumps serving as bedroom slippers, Helen, throwing the disdained toweling bath robe over her gown, stole down the hall to the front bedroom, where the transom still glowed yellow.

"I'm growing to dislike her more and more," Carrie's voice came [illegible]tinct. "If we could only [illegible] her!"

Helen stopped short. [illegible] banisters, she waited with [illegible]

"No, but he'd be better off—[illegible] drag on him."

"What the devil's keeping you [illegible] bellowed Warren, striding out into the hallway.

"Hello, what's the trouble?"

"A shutter's banging in our [illegible] anything to tie it back?"

"Sure. I'm awfully sorry."

"Wait!" Helen, still clinging to the [illegible]ters controlled her voice to a [illegible]ness. "I want you and Carrie to [illegible] I heard every word! "To celebrate, to celebrate," a poilu near him said,
"What makes you look so glad and gay?" said Tommy on parade.
"Just thinkin' what I'm goin' to see," a Sammy near him said.
For they're hangin' Kaiser Wilhelm so I heard the captain say.
An' we've sure got to see it, for they're hangin' him today.
They have taken all his medals and his uniforms away,
An' they're hangin' Kaiser Wilhelm in the mornin'.

"What makes the Kaiser look so queer?" said Tommy on parade.
"Eet's knowing 'oo 'ee's got to meet," a Poilu near him said.
"What makes 'is face get pale and white?" said Tommy on parade.
"He sees the victims of his subs," a Sammy quickly said.
They are hangin' Kaiser Wilhelm, they are machin' him around.
They have halted Kaiser Wilhelm by his coffin on the ground.
And he'll swing in half a minute for a sneakin' murderin' hound,
O they're hangin' Kaiser Wilhelm in the mornin'.

"His home was just across the Rhine," said Tommy on parade.
"Eez 'ome will be across ze Styx," a Poilu near him said.
"I've drunk his beer a score o' times," said Tommy on parade.
"There ain't no beer where he will go," his Sammy comrade said.
For they're hangin' Kaiser Wilhelm, you must mark him to his place.
For he ravished little Belgium, [illegible] see his brutal face.
He plunged the nations into [illegible] he did disgrace.
So they're hangin' Kaiser [illegible] mornin'.

"What's that so black [illegible] Tommy on parade.
"Eets Wilhelm fightin' [illegible] near him said.
"What's that that [illegible] Tommy on parade.
"It's Wilhelm's soul a goin' [illegible] to him said.
For they're done with [illegible] listen to that [illegible]
The regiment's in [illegible] machin' us away.
O, the boys are all a [illegible] celebrate today
After hangin' Kaiser [illegible]

C. E. [illegible]

[illegible], your Eagle is sure that you [illegible] sympathize with him in his weariness of the war. The poor old Eagle's [illegible] of reading about the slaughter [illegible] the Old World in a maelstrom of [illegible]. This does not mean that the Eagle's [illegible] not loyal to his country and its [illegible]. He's heart and soul in accord with [illegible] of you, his countrymen, and thor[illegible] earnest in the conviction that the [illegible] must be carried on until [illegible] for which it was undertaken [illegible] completely achieved.

[illegible] all his earnestness his old heart [illegible] an occasion comes up per[illegible] to turn aside for a day and [illegible] on some subject not con[illegible] with the great conflict involved [illegible] of Armageddon. Such an op[illegible] about a month ago when he [illegible] Shakespeare. This week he [illegible] chance to rest his sad heart [illegible] with concentration upon the [illegible] on the world in the great [illegible] it to its center. For this [illegible] Eagle is indebted to a reader [illegible] Times Illustrated Magazine who [illegible] the Eagle a criticism of his criti[illegible] Shakespeare. The Eagle desires [illegible] full measure the compliment [illegible] by the writer of the letter. This [illegible] is so thoughtful and learned [illegible] Eagle gives it in full as follows:

[illegible] of Shakespeare.

[illegible] Times Illustrated Magazine [illegible] some luminous and in[illegible] on the subject of Shake[illegible], and on the contrasting [illegible] of some of his critics. With the Eagle's spirit of reverence and gently expressed opinions we are in entire accord, and we think of Shakespeare, in Robert Ingersoll's phrase, as the foremost of the human race. But we would suggest, with equal gentleness, that in excluding all but Sophocles and Goethe from intellectual comparison with Shakespeare, the Eagle might be construed as implying that only in the spheres of drama and philosophy are such lofty heights of genius to be found. We wish to tread softly among these colossal structures of creative mind, and would stand and admire rather than attempt to classify and compare; but if such attempt be made, we would say that the imagination of Shakespeare was the richest beyond all comparison, but that the transcendent genius of Kepler was equally great, though of a different kind. The grand generalizations of the great mathematician who proved the structure of the universe, and those of his successor, Newton, who tabulated the mighty laws which govern its operation, are achievements ranking equally, in our opinion, with the creation of 'Hamlet' or the tragedy of Macbeth. Similarly, for the music-lover, to whom harmony and melody are the profoundest creative expression, a place in this enrollment among the gods must be found for Wagner and for Liszt, and, in the mind of the painter, for Raphael and Da Vinci. The scientist will claim a place for Darwin, and the philosopher for Aristotle. Thus in each great field of creation or of research some towering height of greatness has been reached; there are many shining pinnacles piercing the intellectual sky to an equally dizzy height, and equally dazzling in their brilliance and splendor.

"Frank Vincent Waddy, 750 West Fourth street, Los Angeles."

In one sense the Eagle acknowledges that the writer is fully justified in the criticism he makes. The Eagle's mind when he uttered the scream on Shakespeare, not unnaturally, had his Eagle's eye concentrated on dramatists and their works. In this concentration of mind it did not occur to the Eagle to include in his survey of human genius those minds that ran in different grooves. It was like this. In comparing a lily with a lily or a rose with a rose he did not think to take into his purvey the different tastes of you humans, one of whom may prefer one flower or another. Or rather, to take a more fitting comparison, if he were comparing Mt. Whitney with Mt. Shasta it would not occur to him to compare the Mississippi with the Danube.

The Eagle recognizes the justice of his correspondent in demanding recognition for the great Kepler and his successor, Newton, also for Aristotle and Darwin among scientists, for Raphael and Leonardi da Vinci among painters as well as for Wagner among musicians.

The Eagle recognizes as worthy of admiration many more of you humans in realms of art, of science and of industries, who would exclude from the Pantheon of the ages Praxiteles or Michael Angelo, the sculptors. No, nor the hands that cut the Venus of Milo or those that gave the world The Winged Victory of Samothrace. Then there are among moral philosophers Socrates and Plato. Among epic poets Homer, Dante and Milton. Among lyric songsters David and Horace.

The critic of the Eagle will not claim for comparison with these great geniuses any of the captains of industries as Cartwright, Stephenson, Fulton or Bessemer.

There are others who will claim a place for the great warriors, Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon and Wellington, while still other minds will exalt on a pedestal of glory high as the stars the great orators, Demosthenes, Cicero, Burke and others. The Eagle includes Cicero in his little Pantheon of great ones not from any conviction in the Eagle's mind that he deserves to be in such exalted company, but out of concession to the prejudices of many of you humans. The Eagle's own opinion is that of all the contemptible characters in history this same Marcus Tullius Cicero should occupy a place very low down in the ranks.

Now, to come to the end of the matter, the Eagle still insists upon ranking Shakespeare in a class almost by himself, as did Robert G. Ingersoll. Of all the orations delivered by that eloquent American the Eagle regards that on Shakespeare as preeminently one of the best.

The writer of the communication quoted above speaks of "imagination." Here is the crux of the matter. For is not imagination the flower, and fruit, too, of all the faculties of the human mind? The writer also speaks of Shakespeare as "the creator" of his characters. Because he is the greatest creator of characters the Eagle thinks he is the greatest author. You know the meaning of the word poet. It is from the Greek and means "Maker." Shakespeare's characters stand out with an individuality that makes them living beings. They are so natural, so distinct, no two of them alike—they seem like creations from the Divine Hand. Does not the man who stands nearest to the Almighty merit to take rank above all others of the race? Your Eagle thinks so and therefore will not willingly consent to have anyone exalted to a place by his side.

Petits Cris de l'Aire de l'Aigle.

The Kaiser is surely holding the wolf by the tail.

California is doing many bits to win the war. She is in the market with the first wheat of the season, as she was with the first cantaloupes and the first barley.

Hurrah for the "shouting Methodists." They have a great university in Los Angeles which will be greater as the years go by.

"Cheer soldiers with letters from home." That is mighty fine philosophy.

The Teutons never can whip one side of America. While the men are "over there" fighting the women of America, in pants, are doing farm work to feed the fighters.

The Red Cross is doing noble work "over there" and the people at home are supporting them with both hands.

Seven crops of hay in a season is the way California rewards the farmer.

Gen. Carranza had better loog a liddle out. If he don't Uncle Sam will catch him.

"A rich man's war? Eh! It seems so. The Rockefeller Foundation gave $3,000,000 for Red Cross work. How much has all the I.W.W. given?

The U-boat is a failure. The Teuton drives are failures. The Teuton generals are failures. And the Kaiser is the biggest failure of all.

Yours for great men. Old scratch take the failures.

[illegible]HE [illegible]ANCER

[illegible] appears to be a good deal of [illegible] sympathy on behalf of the [illegible] gentle sex in the matter of [illegible] Land Army. For while Mrs. [illegible], assistant supervisor of agri[illegible] the schools, at the meeting of [illegible], who are mostly women, is [illegible] the work is too hard for [illegible] the scheme hasn't any au[illegible] or financial backing anyway; [illegible] women's clubs, notably [illegible] against letting the [illegible] to heavy masculine tasks, Presi[illegible] has come right out with a [illegible] of the movement, and [illegible] themselves are working [illegible] at Elsinore, putting in their [illegible] hours a day. And they go [illegible], too, and usually have enough [illegible] left to rush wildly into [illegible] and take a half a mile swim [illegible]. These husky buoyant young [illegible], in their khaki uniforms and [illegible] legs, go merrily on, [illegible] for tomato planting and [illegible] of tangible evidence of [illegible] for all to see. And when nice [illegible] with the very best in[illegible] at heart, patter out to [illegible] the girls how mistaken [illegible] to try to work beyond their [illegible] healthy young Amazons [illegible] and go right on driving [illegible] irrigation ditches, hoeing plants, wielding pitch forks, and cast that amiably tolerant glance of contemptuous pity that one reserves for well-meaning futility.

It is not a bit of good telling these girls they can't do the work, that it will ruin their delicate constitutions, that it isn't ladylike anyway, and that the cultured Ebell Club disapproves of their calling. All they do when they hear these things is to twirl a heavy shovel as though it were a two-pound dumb-bell and declare themselves ready to brain a German with it if a nice opportunity offers.

And I am sorry for some of the gallant specimens of masculinity that are so perturbed at the idea of weak women working in the fields if they should have the misfortune to be manhandled by some of these husky maidens—they are so radiant with vitality and exuberant well-being that they yearn for nothing so much as a chance to show their muscular prowess. No slouching drearily home from work at the end of the day, but running leaps into the old Ford that takes them home, and three stairs at a time up to their rooms when they reach it.

The much discussed uniforms are quite boyishly becoming—but it is going to be a hard job to start any gossipful scandals about those young women. I should say their carefully provided chaperons are quite unnecessary. He would be a brave man, indeed, who would dare to try any romantic petting on these sturdy girls. Those thick-booted understandings, those workmanlike trousers, those soldierly khaki coats, those six masculine pockets, those jaunty khaki hats instill solid fear and respect, comradeship perhaps, but sentimentality never! Oh, but it would take concrete nerve to try any pussy-petting on them.

Woman's Legislation.

Which reminds me. Mrs. Hester Griffith is waxing sarcastic because there are sixty-four measures to come before the next State Legislature for the protection of game and only three for the protection of women. But this surely is a respectful compliment to the sex. It has got beyond the point where it needs patronizing protection and whining pity. Why, bless me, here is Mrs. Adelaide Martin of the Southern California University starting a class for policewomen and insisting that in many departments they make the best public protectors! And here is England declining to permit women within military age to leave the country, treating them exactly like essential masculinity and the women themselves urging female conscription! And the once virulently anti London Times writing fulsome editorials on the Women's Army auxiliary corps (fondly known in England as the Waacs) who enlist for war work just like men, submit to all the discipline and are credited by said "Times" with "saving the country."

I see one of the first things our California women propose to do is to reform the jury system. Having served on juries for a few months, they are naturally first class experts on the subject. I daresay the jury system needs reforming all right—it seemed rather sickly during my own brief and exciting experiences—but wouldn't it be just a little more discreet on the part of the ladies to wait until their experience warrants rather more interference. Otherwise the last state of the jury system may be so much worse than the first. Not that we wish to belittle the ladies' powers of reform—but, don't you know, even a doctor takes a four year course before he is allowed to cure all ills.

The Army Parson.

The parson's job in the army is no sinecure; indeed, it is often highly complicated and fraught with multitudinous difficulties. And while we hear very little about the work of the parsons, it is notable that failures with them are sublimely rare, that, in the face of peculiar and ironical conditions, their popularity is almost unbounded.

To begin with the army parson is denied the dignity of his cloth, that uniform of civilian life which aids so much in his prestige. He must wear khaki like all the rest, is on an equality footing with every one from the private to the general. His financial woes are, like the city parson's, insistent and perpetual. Like the country parson, his first duty is to get to know personally every man in the battalion and minister to their spiritual needs, corporate and individual. His duties moreover are all those which do not specifically belong to anybody else. He is at everybody's beck and call; he must wax enthusiastic about the games and sports; if there is a regimental magazine he must edit it, and when the battalion goes "over the top" he must, for his credit's sake, go with it, although he has the choice of remaining behind. He must be equally at home with commanding officers and men; he must be able to translate his theology into every vernacular and, in a crisis, he must be prepared to relinquish often vital points in his doctrines—to stick fast to one label may easily lose him his necessary influence. He must be at once a man's man and a man of God, almost a woman, always a good sport.

His pay and equipment allowances are less than those of an officer, yet he is required to maintain rather more than an officer's prestige. All things are expected of him; few things excused for him. He must show no preferences, he is everybody's friend, everybody's servant.

Yet we are told that thousands more parsons volunteer for this work than can be accepted and that they never give up, ask no special privileges, claim no exemptions.

Why do they do it? God knows!

His Last Act.

When a certain woman was granted a divorce from a German husband, having, obviously, from the evidence, endured all things, the gentleman made a will leaving all his worldly goods to his mother in Germany and committed suicide. The last act of a mean man. Such a fierce yearning for cheap spite that he was willing to sacrifice his own paltry life to achieve it.

This morbid weakness for a theatrical end, just to make other people suffer a hoped-for remorse, is the cheapest kind of heroics. Any fool can do that but it takes a strong character to justify his continued existence.

The entire German nation is busy committing suicide in exactly the same way today

"OVER THERE"

by Achmed Abdullah

HE WAS talking as he crossed the threshold of the library, talking enthusiastically, earnestly, and with sudden, popping bursts of breathless speed, like a man who for many hours has bottled up a portentous secret in his soul and who cannot contain it longer without cracking the vessel. He spoke with just the faintest trace, not unpleasant, of a German accent.

"It is finished!" he said. "I have tried it and retried it. I left no—what you call it?" For a moment his English failed him. "No—Schlupfloch—no loophole, eh? I am efficient, thorough, exact. Failure is not possible!"

The man sitting near the table looked up. He was tall, broad-shouldered, long of reach. With his high color, his jutting, brutal chin, his thin lips, he was the type whom at first glance you took to be either a pugilist or a financier of fame; until you saw his eyes, deep set, cloudy gray, veiled in a mist which came from the soul—when you changed your opinion and decided that he was a seer, an idealist, a prophet, a reformer—but of the militant, aggressive sort.

"How did you try it, Werner?" he asked the German.

"On a cat. Then on a dog. Then, thanks to the help of my good friend, Dr. Lauterbach, on a Bengal tiger in the zoo;" and he sat down across from the other, nervously digging the points of his shoes into the soft Beshire rug. His face was now in the radiance of the green-shaded lamp, showing a high-bridged, predatory nose, dark-blue eyes with a slow, passionate flame eddying up in the pupils, a wide mouth with a ragged mustache whisking the corners of the lips, then brushing up toward the puckered eyes.

"And you say that it works?" came the other's query.

"Yes, Stoddart! It works!" Werner raised his arms toward the ceiling. "It works beautifully—oh—" again he switched excitedly into his native language—"es ist unglaublich—kolossal—grossartig." His enthusiasm danced away in a mad whirligig of passion; foaming, lashing, excessively parlous; then, with an effort, he became quiet. He laughed. It was a strangely vain, a strangely hard laugh. "You should have seen the tiger after I got through with him," he continued. "I gave him the infinitesimal fraction of a drop. In his food. Yes—in his food. I did not even take the trouble to squirt it into his pelt—and a second later—" Again laughter choked him.

"Well—" asked Stoddart impatiently. "What happened a second later?"

Werner threw out an expressive hand. It was hairy, high-veined, powerful.

"You know the words from the Bible?" he replied. "Something about the roaring tiger which shall lay down with the lamb? Vell—that's what happened to the Bengal at the zoo. The tiniest, minutest fraction of a drop. He lapped it up on a pound of raw sirloin. And then—why—that big, striped, man-eating brute lay down and purred like a kitten. I entered the cage—it was at night, you know, and there was nobody there except myself and Dr. Lauterbach—and walked up to the tiger. I flipped his furry ears, and the tiger gave a howl of fear. He slunk into a corner, shaking all over his huge, tawny body. His power of resistance was broken. Utterly broken—like a reed! Stoddart!" he looked up, "It was great!"

"But that proves nothing," came the nervous rejoinder. "An animal is different from a human being. It has different reactions, different nerve control. An animal has no imagination, while a human being—"

"I know all that," Werner cut in, "I am a trained scientist—and a German!"

"Meaning by that?"

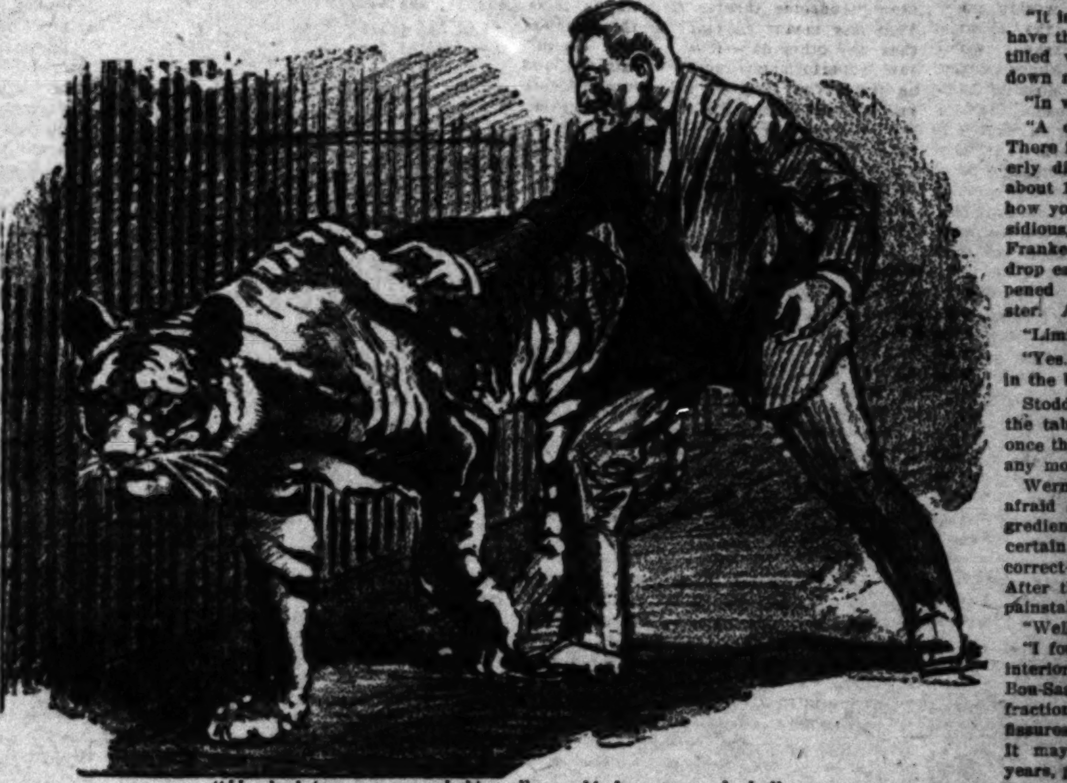
"That I made assurance doubly sure! That I dovetailed everything! That I did away with chance. I—" he coughed discreetly and smiled a crooked smile.

"You tried the stuff on a human being?" Stoddart's voice was hushed.

"Exactly!" Werner leaned back in his chair, his thumbs in the armholes of his vest. He was evidently very pleased with himself.

"But how did you do it. And on whom?"

"A gangster—a very notorious and dangerous criminal."



"He slunk into a corner, shaking all over his huge tawny body."

"But how—Heavens, man!—how did you arrange it?"

"A friend of mine helped me. Fellow at the Tombs, Weissmann by name."

"Another German?" There was a slight flicker of annoyance in Stoddart's rising inflection; and the other grew angry. A slow red mantled his cheeks.

"How can I help myself?" he demanded. "What the devil do you want me to do? There is nobody in sympathy with our cause except a handful of picked Germans and a few men—pacifists—like yourself. And you pacifists, you native-born pacifists, have no influence. You hold yourselves aloof. You are dreamers and not doers. You sit and talk and write—and then dream again. You have the spirit—yes!—but the flesh—the living, throbbing, red-veined flesh? Why, man, give me a German for that? A German-American! We act! We do! We are factors in this country! Too—" again he smiled his crooked smile—"we are citizens. We vote and make others vote. We have influence. And so when I need help I go to a man like Dr. Lauterbach, or my friend at the Tombs. They can pull wires—and don't mind pulling them!"

Stoddart sighed wearily.

"Yes," he said, "you're right, quite right. But—" suddenly his voice stabbed out sharp and challenging—"there will be a change. I, for one—my turn will come! With that stuff of yours, Werner!" And, after a pause, he continued: "What about the gangster—up in the Tombs?"

"Same as with the tiger! Go to the Tombs—look at him—convince yourself if you don't believe me. I gave him a small drop in his coffee—and he—" the German laughed—"why, a second later, he fell on his knees and started singing hymns—sniveling hymns—so help me God! Sat there on his narrow wooden bench, looking vacantly toward the cell corridor, and singing a hymn to himself in nasal voice. Why—it was comical! And tragic! A little drop—and the tiniest fraction of a little drop—and our gangster, our hardened criminal had become as mild as a Salvation Army lass. He'll be harmless hereafter. His power of resistance is broken. He'll not fight again!"

"Good!"

Stoddart rose and walked to the window.

It was a hot August night. All day long the sun had been bearing down like a flood of molten, jagged brass, and now New York was sleeping the sleep of exhaustion. Not a breeze was stirring. The flags were hanging limp and sodden, as if tired. There were many flags—the Stars and Stripes, intertwined here and there with the Tricolor of France; Italy's gay bunting; the grim Red Ensign of the British Empire; the Red, no less grim, of the young Russian republic; the standard of brave Belgium, with its black spelling a nation's grief, its gold a nation's promise, its crimson a nation's hope and faith; the cross of Serbia—a cross indeed, stubbornly borne; the merry sky-blue of Portugal, recasting its former glories in the melting pot of the free nations; the blue-yellow-and-red of Rumania, the great oligarchy of the Balkans, based on the principles of the ancient Florentine republic, a Latin outpost barring the southern way to Hun and Bulgar and Magyar; the Rising Sun of Japan, the hope of Asia—and of Europe in Asia—the flags of the free nations, gallantly battling for freedom.

Once in a while a thin cry drifted up from Madison avenue:

"Extra! Extra! Gen. Pershing—"

News of war! News of the steely shock of battle, the great crimson sacrifice, death—and Stoddart turned away from the window. His face was haggard, drawn, tense. Pain and suffering were hooded under his eyebrows. He seemed like some gaunt prophet of antiquity, for all his modern American clothes.

"War—and massacre—and hatred! The seed of hatred!" He said the words half to himself, the German leaning forward a little in his chair and watching closely. "Oh—this damned seed of hatred—this—" [illegible]

He walked up to the other.

"The stuff!" he demanded [illegible] "Have you got it with you?"

"Yes," Werner put his hand in his [illegible] pocket, and brought forth a fat [illegible] holding about a quart of liquid. It [illegible] dark opalescent green, thick, [illegible]

Stoddart took it and held it up [illegible] light. For a long time he looked at [illegible] a man seeing pictures in a crystal [illegible]

"How much of the stuff did you [illegible]" he asked finally.

"It's all in that flask," the [illegible] plied. "Every drop of it."

"But—it doesn't seem [illegible]"

"It is the quintessence [illegible] have there. This it does [illegible] tilled water as you [illegible] down attar of roses with [illegible]"

"In what proportion?"

"A drop in a five-[illegible] There is enough in that [illegible] erly diluted, to account [illegible] about 100,000 men. But [illegible] how you handle the stuff [illegible] sidious, treacherous—[illegible] Frankenstein. Do not let [illegible] drop escape. Remember [illegible] pened to the tiger—and [illegible] ster. And—the supply is [illegible]"

"Limited?"

"Yes. Limited to what [illegible] in the bottle."

Stoddart leaned across [illegible] the table. "You mean to [illegible] once this is used up you [illegible] any more?"

Werner inclined his head. [illegible] afraid so. You see, the [illegible] gredient is a certain [illegible] certain new element, [illegible] correct—which I discovered [illegible] After thirty-three years of [illegible] painstaking search!"

"Well?"

"I found this element in [illegible] interior of Southern Al[illegible] Bou-Saada, just a tiny bit [illegible] fraction of an ounce, [illegible] fissures of a crumbling [illegible] It may take another [illegible] years, perhaps a century, [illegible] dozen centuries, before [illegible] small quantity is discovered [illegible] haps it will never be found again."

"Perhaps—" Stoddart's voice [illegible] "Perhaps God, in His mercy, [illegible] His foresight, knowing that [illegible] come, fearing that it would [illegible] you to find it—there—in Algeria [illegible] German hid a smile. A [illegible] had always been amused at what [illegible] "the thaumaturgical superstition [illegible] American nation," but he [illegible] politics to agree with the other.

"Yes," he said. "God put it [illegible] sent me to find it, to discover [illegible] and you—"

"And me to do the rest!" The [illegible] words boomed out, with a [illegible] some ancient temple bell. His [illegible] fingers held the flask tight. [illegible] pressed it against his heart. [illegible] He said; and, with a laugh: "You [illegible] you, being a German, have a [illegible] thoroughness and scientific [illegible] —I have taken a leaf from the [illegible] The moment that you told me [illegible] experiments of yours, I went [illegible] prepared the way. I told them [illegible] given up pacifism; that—" he [illegible] laugh—"I had seen the error [illegible] and was willing, eager, ready [illegible] 'bit!'" He spat out the word [illegible] nauseating medicine which [illegible] fused to swallow.

"And the fools believed me. [illegible]

The Topsy Turvy Trotters were booked for a Thursday night at the disproportionately handsome theater in Saranac Lake. That day meant no more to the troupers than any other day—it was just a "stand," just a performance, just an entrance and an exit. What and who the merry villagers might be meant nothing to these peregrinating players. They hove in off a morning train and settled at an economical hotel. The men gathered in the comedian's room to play rhum for a penny a point and the women did their week's washing in the seamed porcelain bowls on their rickety stands.

At the accustomed hour they filed to their dressing-rooms and "made up." Rosie was in unusually effervescent humor that night, having laid away three extra hours at dreamless napping during the afternoon. Her barbed-wire voice penetrated loud and raucously over the partitions of her cubby hole as she slapped on the pink paint and twitted the talent. The overture scraped and whined out its specified number of bars, and the chambermaids in tights who composed the Trotters' chorus legged it out and "went into" an unintelligible opening "number." Rosie bounded up the stairs to the stage, for her first appearance was cued on the departure of the girls. She breezed for the wings and stood supporting herself against the invisible end of a garden scene, ready to leap into action. The switchboard was on her side of the stage, and a change of lights came with the change of speed when the introductory chorus was displaced by the comedy scene, so the theater electrician took his post, hand aloft on a contact handle, on his toes, to pull when needed.

Rosie looked up and "made" the electrician. She threw her hands on high, took two steps forward, assaulted the electrician with a smash that could mean nothing less than agitated affection, and hoarsely whispered:

"Well! If it ain't old Billy Gillen!"

He smiled the smile of the golden teeth and wrung the hand that had belabored him.

"Hello, Rosie, ol' kid," he vociferated. "Gee—I didn' know you was with this bunch o' cats an' dogs. How are you, anyhow?"

"Finer 'n a Liberty bond—got my health an' eighty berries in the Third Av'nue Savin's Bank—can you beat it? An' what are you doin' up here in this flea-bitten fawran country? When I seen you last, wit' the Gay Goddesses Comp'ny, you worked like you was booked for the big time. I offen wondered where you went an' what become o' you. I didn' think, though, I'd fall acrost you in a tank like this, yankin' switches. Give us a tell, Bill—did your knees give out so you couldn' hoof no more, or is they a woman in the case?"

Before Bill could make answer the beefy throng had finished its incantation to the divinities of art, and were trampling through the passage between him and Rosie. He "threw" the lights and Rosie, wriggling through the burlesque commoners like a quarter back with the ball, turned on her property grin and wafted forth to do her bit.

Between the "halves" which correspond to acts in this branch of entertainment Bill Gillen and Rosie visited together and arranged to have a sandwich and a bottle of brew together after the performance, as the gang was not routed to depart the town until nearly noon of the next day. And why should they not have planned for a half hour together? Was it not a reunion after long separation since the days of the Gay Goddesses, an exceptionally brilliant and gratifying engagement of some six seasons agone, played over the high spots that included such desirable bookings as Columbus, O., and even Buffalo, N. Y?

Bill had played "opposite" Rosie through that exalted year. And he had made good as an acrobatic dancer and knockabout comedian. Many predictions of a career for him had been made at that time. Then he had dropped from sight.

After-theater supper in Saranac Lake is negotiated either at one of the resort hotels for the rich or at Daly's lunch wagon on the main street. Bill was for the wagon.

"We eat this a la cart—huh?" Rosie tossed at him.

"Leave the dead rest," said Bill. "That one is out o' the Bouncing Belles."

"That's right—you're wrong; it's outta the Bowery Blondes. The line was mine. Anyways, lead me to the chow an' sing to me while I eat, cause I wanna hear all about you, where you been, what you done an' what took you down the line to a job like that in a jay burg like this."

Bill seated her on one of the high stools. She looked up at the menu (in a lunch wagon one looks up, not down, at a menu, for it is on the wall, not on the table) and he suggested sausage cakes.

"They're the pick o' the bill here," he said. "I know—I'm a native now, an' I know all the inside percentages."

"Sausage cakes," said Rosie to Daly.

"Twice," said Bill to Daly.

"Yeh—Twice, Daly—like vaudeville," said Rosie.

And by that time the ground, spiced mixture was sizzling on the grill.

"The sausage cakes here," said Bill, "is the best I ever laid my tongue to. An' ev'rything is nice an' neat an'—"

"What's all that got to do with what I asked you?" intercepted Rosie. "What I wanna know is the how regardin' your presence in a chin-piece tank town, doin' manual labor on'y fitten for a union guy, not a artist what could shuffle on sof' shoes wit' anybody in the business an' never pull a bum tap. Come over wit' the sad details."

"Oh, this ain' a bad place," said Bill. "Are you gonna have coffee wit' your cakes?"

"Coffee—an' conversation. Quit stallin' an' answer me; what's the reason you choked off your career an' done a strategiculous retreat to these here fourt' line trenches?"

Bill hung his head.

She waited. Then a little frown of anxiety crossed her forehead.

"Bill," she said, under her breath, as she laid her hand on his forearm, "you ain' in trouble? The police ain' got nothin' on you—or anything like that—huh?"

Bill smiled, not a cheery smile, but almost a happy one.

"No," he said. "I never done nothin' to make me hide my jaw. This here sentence didn' come from no judge. But it's for life, at that."

"I—I don' get you."

Bill turned and looked up into her face, a face shining with friendly solicitude and with the remnants of cold cream that had swabbed off the grease paint.

"Don't you know what this town is?" he asked.

"Sure—it's one o' them backwoods burgs what George Cohan kids an' Charles K. Harris takes seriously. Is it any different from the rest o' the one-time-only entries on the route sheet?"

"This here town," said Bill, "is a refuge for—for the stricken."

"The who? What strick you?"

"The—the bug!"

"Potato, lady, speed, or lightning bug?"

"No, not a bug—the bug; the ol' thing—the—the con."

"The con? Is that a cousin to the bull?"

"Not this one. I'm—I'm sick. I got one lung wit' the angels; an the other was wingin' fast. So the docs shot me up here; an' here I am."

Rosie let it strike her, and she recoiled for one jar. Then she let it bite in and make her creepy from ankles to ears. Then she whistled.

"So that's it, huh? Well—is it—are you gonna—is there any out? Or what?"

"Oh, I can hang on for years, it looks like, if I stay up here in the hills an' eat this here ozone. But I got to stay here—here's where I closed my tour an' took the lay-off, indefinite till the undertaker books me for the continuous."

"Well, say—you look O. K.—if you're dyin' I'll say you'd fool anybody."

"Anybody excep' the docs—an' myself. I don' brood over it. You see, aroun' here there's a lot o' others portrayin' the same character. Consumption ain' no novelty aroun' here—our best people is got it. You walk through Saranac Lake in the middle o' the night an' you'll see the aristocracy sleepin' out on their porches, muffled up like papooses."

"H—how'd you ever get a awful dose like this?"

"I don' know—it jus' come, that's all. I got a cold an' it wouldn' get better, so I went to see a doc in Brooklyn to get some pills or somethin'. He slips me a few questions, taps-taps my chest, takes my pulse an' my temp'rature, screws up his face, an' says 'Saranac.' I ask him do I take in tablets or out of a bottle. He says what I take is the New York Central, mighty P.D.Q. I wouldn' believe him. I was gonna punch him in the puss. But he shook his head an' he says I better beat it quick for where I got a chance to string along a while—Brooklyn was no good place for me."

"Brooklyn," said Rosie, "ain' no good place for anybody. But this beats blazes. Gee—to think o' you tearin' off them dances not so long back, climbin' in the business, happy as a blame fool—an' now you're nailed forever in this here backyard—an' for nothin'; for nothin' what you did, for nothin' what was your fault, for—"

And the soft-hearted woman began to snivel, and then broke into sobs as she rocked her head upon her arms, laid flat upon the lunch counter.

"Oh Rosie—don' cry—I'm—I'm all right—I'm great; never felt better in my life, honest I didn'—I'm gettin' a whole lot better—I'm—"

"It's a dirty shame," gulped Rosie. "It ain' square. I know a lot o' people, disgustingly healthy ones, what oughta get consumption or some awful break like that, but they don't; an' here's you, what was always on the level, always right wit' ev'rybody, clean an' decent an' square, an' they got to hang this on you. I call it a rotten outrage, Bill, that's what I call it."

Bill smiled, this time almost amused.

"Rosie, it's great o' you to be so broke up over me," he said, looking at her fondly. "You always had a heart full o' symp'thy for the whole world. Rosie, you're an ace; I always knew it."

"Oh forget that. What good can I do you? Anybody can say 'That's too bad,' an' then go 'way an' forget it; symp'thy is cheap, Bill. But, gee—I wisht I could do somethin'—I wisht there was somethin what could be done."

"I don' need nothin,' Rosie," he reassured her. "I'm gettin' by here. Of course, I got to stay here, an' that cuts off the rest o' the world an' the world's chances. I grabbed this here 'lectrician job an' it's good as long as I wanna work it. It pays me livin' wages—an' I'm livin'—in a way. The only thing I crave, Rosie, is comp'ny. I'm lonesome. You know how show people are. Well, I'm one of 'em an' I got to have 'em. I can't live without 'em. They talk my talk an' they step my pace—it ain' a fast pace, but it's my pace, the only one I can go an' be comf'table. That's all what's wrong back in here—I'm lonely.

EIGHT MILLION SHOTS FOR THE KAISER

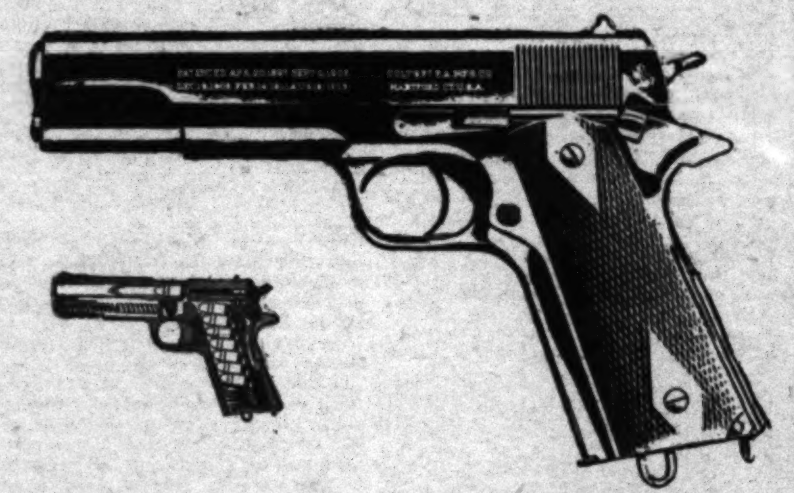
We'll Fire Them with Colt Forty-fives. By Frank G. Carpenter.

Colt Automatics.

ITS MAN-KILLING EFFICIENCY AS SHOWN BY AN EXPERT—A VISIT TO THE GREAT FACTORY WHERE IT IS MADE—ELEVEN HUNDRED MEN EMPLOYED ON ONE PISTOL. NINE HUNDRED TOOLMAKERS REQUIRED. THOUSANDS OF MEN AND WOMEN AT WORK—WHAT THE GIRLS DO—INSPECTING AND TARGETING THE WEAPONS—

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

HARTFORD (Ct.)—I have come to Hartford to tell you about the automatic pistol which is doing such good work in the hands of our boys in the trenches. It is the favorite American weapon, just as the knife is the favorite weapon of the Italian and the hand grenade that of the German. The latter choice is because the German does not know how to shoot.



Colt automatic pistol. One million guns like this have ready eight million shots for the Kaiser.

More than 1,000,000 of these automatics are already in the hands of our soldiers, and each has eight shots for the Kaiser. In all they have 8,000,000 bullets—ready to fire, and hundreds of millions more in reserve in clips for immediate use.

During my stay here I have had a chance to see what these pistols will do. One of the best shots of the United States is Mr. A. J. Geskie of Connecticut, the head of the target division of the Colt Firearms Manufacturing Company. He gave me an exhibition of the pistol, firing it in a half dozen different ways. He started in with an automatic in a leather holster strapped tight to his side, just as it is carried by the soldier while in the trenches. The leather top was fastened, but Mr. Geskie unbuttoned the flap, grabbed out the gun and fired seven shots in the space of three seconds. He next picked up a pistol from the table and fired seven shots in one second, the cartridges going off so fast that I could hardly count the individual sounds. He then shot at a mark forty-five yards away, and sent seven bullets into a bullseye as big around as the bottom of a tin cup. It took him only twelve seconds by my watch to aim and shoot. Later he shot seven shots in six seconds, hitting the bullseye each time.

I am told that Mr. Geskie can take seven cartridges in his left hand and the pistol, loaded with seven more, in his right. He can throw the seven loose cartridges in rapid succession into the air to the height of a two or three story house, and hit an average of five out of seven of them before they come down. In this case most of the cartridges will explode when hit, and those that are struck on the end of the bullet are crushed when they reach the ground. He has a record of having shot 156 cartridges with his pistol in the space of one minute, and has put twenty-one shots into an eighteen-inch "bull" within eight seconds. Any one that knows anything about pistol shooting will tell you that this is "going some."

Invention of Browning.

This pistol is the one adopted by the United States government for the use of the army. It is known as the Colt automatic, caliber .45, government model. It is the invention of J. M. Browning of Ogden, Utah—the same man who invented the Browning machine guns, which are now being used by our army. It is smaller, lighter and more easily handled than other makes of revolvers of the same caliber, which it is rapidly displacing; and it is much more efficient in the hands of the soldiers. The gun weighs just about two and one-half pounds, and the barrel is about five inches long. The length of the barrel and handle is eight and one-half inches, and the handle is so shaped that it contains seven cartridges, which are automatically forced into the gun, one flying out each time that the trigger is pulled. The gas exploding the first cartridge is the motive power which throws the second into position, and the same is done with the other cartridges each time the trigger is pulled. In addition, another cartridge may be put in the barrel, making the capacity of the gun eight cartridges for the first fire.

The chief parts of the pistol are the receiver which holds the cartridges, the barrel and the slide. The gun shoots bullets about 50 per cent. heavier than those used in the rifle, and at an angle of 45 deg. it has a range of more than a mile. On the flat trajectory it will shoot straight for a distance of more than one-third of a mile; and it can be loaded and fired so rapidly that it is invaluable to our men in defense and in going over the top. Indeed, one man has fired 1000 shots with this pistol in thirty-eight minutes. In another test 10,000 shots were fired from one gun without cleaning, and after that a clip of seven cartridges was shot at a target and every ball struck the bullseye.

History of the Colt Family.

These pistols are now being made by the Colt Firearms Manufacturing Company here at Hartford. The same firm has been making firearms for the armies of the United States and other countries for several generations. It was founded by the man who invented the revolver. This was Samuel Colt, the son of a Massachusetts silk manufacturer. Young Colt was sent to Amherst to school, but he grew tired of his books and shipped before the mast in a sailing vessel from Boston to Calcutta. It was while on this trip that he whittled out the first model of the revolver which later became known from one end of the world to the other. Upon his return he tried to interest his father in his invention, but the old man put him to work in the dyeing and bleaching department of the silk mill instead. While there he had to study chemistry, and within the course of a year was able to start out as a lecturer on the wonders of science. He did this at 18 years of age, assuming the title of "Dr. Coult" as his stage name. He made so much out of his lectures that he was able to take out patents for his revolver, and within a few years thereafter he had established a firearms factory at Paterson, N. J., and was making the revolvers which our troops first used in the Mexican War. Later he got other contracts with the United States and foreign powers, and during the Civil War he furnished thousands of pistols and guns for the Union army. In the meantime he had removed his factory from Paterson to Hartford and formed the foundation of one of the largest firearms plants of the United States. It is of this plant I am writing today. It is now making machine guns, Colt automatic revolvers and the Colt automatic pistol invented by Browning. It consists of many great buildings of brick and steel. Its floor space covers acres and the number of men and women employed runs high into the thousands. Included in them is an army of expert mechanics. All are working away night and day making small arms for our soldiers in Europe.

Hard to Get into the Factory.

I wish I could show you one of the big factory rooms where the pistols are made. You will have to have a photographic pass to gain admission and you will be stopped again and again as you walk about from one machine to another. I visited one room, which was as long as a good-sized city block, as wide or wider than Commonwealth avenue, Boston. I figure that it covers something like two acres, and its walls of brick and glass and its saw-toothed glass roof throw a bright light on the maze of special machinery buzzing below.

Standing at one end of the room I looked through a thicket of the flying wheels and moving belts, which, run by electricity, keep the machinery in action. There are wheels overhead and wheels near the machines. At first you can hardly distinguish the machines, and it takes a moment or so for you to see that every belt runs a machine, and that nearly every machine has a man or woman standing before it. There are more than 1000 hands at work in the room, and there are more than that number of these special machines, many of which are operated by women. As you go on you see that the women are doing all kinds of work. Some of them are pounding with hammers, others are using files and others are gauging the parts to see that each is accurate to the splitting of a hair. Many of the women are operating machines, and girls of 18 are managing four different machines at one time putting in and taking out new parts so quickly that not the stroke of a lever nor the bite of a lathe goes to waste.

The company is speeding its work to the utmost, and it does all it can to increase the output of the individual worker. Everything is paid for by the piece, and the laborer who turns out the more work gets the more wages. This is true of both women and men, and the women are paid exactly the same as the men and according to the amount they produce. For a time there was a fear on the part of the girls against speeding up lest the price per piece should be cut, and in the end they should be doing more work for the same money. A gang of about forty women were employed on a certain part of the pistol. Each was turning out about 500 parts per day when the superintendent urged them to increase their output to 1000, saying he would guarantee them the same price per piece. That offer was made two weeks ago, and the girls are now averaging 900 per day and soon each will be making 1000.

There has been a decided [illegible] of the work since we entered the [illegible] that on the part of the men [illegible] themselves. The most of the [illegible] enthusiastic patriots, and the [illegible] cially feel that they are doing [illegible] the war. There are flags in [illegible] which were bought by the [illegible] both men and women are [illegible] ly to the Red Cross and the [illegible]

I have been especially [illegible] work of the women. They [illegible] by side with the men, and still [illegible] little conversation or [illegible] The output fixes the pay and [illegible] and work are money. Some of the [illegible] making from $25 to $35 a week, [illegible] of them making more than men [illegible] job. They like the work, and [illegible] holds of Hartford are having [illegible] women's labor on account of the [illegible] servants leaving and going into [illegible] tions factories. One of the [illegible] of this pistol-making plant [illegible] warning from one of his [illegible] she was going to leave. He asked [illegible] was the matter. She replied [illegible] to work in Colt's factory, where [illegible] give her more wages. He said [illegible] give you a job; and if they do [illegible] But he thereupon raised her [illegible] they were equal to those of the [illegible] pistol plant, and I am told [illegible] the job

The officials say that the [illegible] steadier than the men and [illegible] less time. They are in such [illegible] in certain of the firearm [illegible] region any woman may come [illegible] for a certain number of fixed [illegible] at piece work. All that is required [illegible] she must tell just when she will [illegible] that she be there regularly [illegible] fixed. Some women work from [illegible] o'clock in the morning, and [illegible] teachers add to their income [illegible] two or three hours a day after [illegible] over. I am told that the [illegible] Haven are worried for fear [illegible] work of the teachers in the [illegible] crease their efficiency in the [illegible]

The Colt plant making [illegible] is a nine-hour shop, but the [illegible] urged to work longer and are [illegible] amount they turn out. Some [illegible] stop at 5 o'clock, some at 6 and [illegible] p.m. Many of them lay off the [illegible] pay day, and on Monday it is [illegible] cult to get a full force. The [illegible] more conscientious and they [illegible] time.

Labor Problem.

The army needs more and [illegible] as fast as it can get them, and [illegible] the production depends upon [illegible] more labor. The company is [illegible] machines of all kinds and it [illegible] that it can get to run them. [illegible] chief officials says that there [illegible] floating labor moving about [illegible] States from shop to shop [illegible]

TEN MILLIO

Here A

[illegible] are, I believe, in the English-speaking countries at the present moment, 10,000,000 people who have writ[illegible] are writing, or are contemplating, at [illegible] one photoplay scenario. Everybody [illegible] his or her opinion, several original [illegible] that would make good photoplays. [illegible] are like corns. Everybody's got them! [illegible] it, then, we don't see more original [illegible] on the screen?

[illegible] tried often to find the reason and [illegible] found several solutions. What may [illegible] an original happening to one individ[illegible] may have happened to many before. [illegible] instance, a man may have his first seri[illegible] quarrel with his mother-in-law. That [illegible] be an unexpected happening to him, [illegible] will work the event into a photoplay [illegible]. Well, the scenario editor to whom [illegible] submit the idea may have been the [illegible] of a similar experience and is, per[illegible] paying alimony in consequence, and [illegible] other fellow's plot won't appear very [illegible] to him! Or a noble-minded woman [illegible] have a lovely daughter who was work[illegible] a store or an office and suffered per[illegible] at the hands of a too attentive em[illegible], ultimately leading to the girl's un[illegible]. The mother thinks it over and form[illegible], as she thinks, an original plot. She [illegible] it as a photoplay under the title, [illegible] happened to Lucy" or "Why girls [illegible] home;" little realizing that the idea [illegible] already nicely portrayed in "With[illegible] Law," the plot of which is as old as [illegible] place of business that employed [illegible] help.

[illegible] is an Original Story?

[illegible] all, what is an original story? I [illegible] one, when I hear one or read one. If [illegible] heard it or read it before, it is [illegible] to me. But, for all I know, it may [illegible] chestnut to the policeman at the cor[illegible] who would think I was crazy if I tried [illegible] it on him as a new one, or, per[illegible] let me down lightly by surmising I [illegible] probably a reader of Punch!

[illegible], there are, of course, plenty of orig[illegible] ideas, formulated in many brilliant [illegible]; but, there are few original plots. [illegible] for a photoplay does not have to be [illegible] to be acceptable. That is not to be [illegible]; because dramatists and fiction [illegible] have pretty well exhausted the field. [illegible] an original idea may be embodied in a [illegible] plot that will imbue it with the [illegible] of originality, and will win for [illegible] the reputation of having evolved [illegible] original, and that one original [illegible] may overshadow the whole fabric, as [illegible] so frequently in pleasing photoplay [illegible]

[illegible] are several scenario writers whose [illegible] as well known as the favorite [illegible] and many, no doubt, wonder how [illegible] to evolve so many original [illegible]. Well, you may safely assume they [illegible] a little along those lines and [illegible] their business. Everything is grist [illegible] to their mill. A chance remark [illegible] acquaintance may prove the spark [illegible] a keen imagination. TEN MILLION SCENARIO WRITERS—LISTEN!

Here Are a Few Tips. By Captain Leslie T. Peacocke.

[illegible] are, I believe, in the English-speaking countries at the present moment, 10,000,000 people who have written, [illegible] writing, or are contemplating, at [illegible] photoplay scenario. Everybody [illegible] or her opinion, several original [illegible] would make good photoplays. [illegible] Everybody's got them! [illegible] then, we don't see more original [illegible] screen?

[illegible] often to find the reason and [illegible] several solutions. What may [illegible] original happening to one individual [illegible] happened to many before. [illegible] a man may have his first seri[illegible] with his mother-in-law. That [illegible] unexpected happening to him, [illegible] the event into a photoplay. [illegible] the scenario editor to whom [illegible] the idea may have been the [illegible] a similar experience and is, per[illegible] alimony in consequence, and [illegible] fellow's plot won't appear very [illegible] him! Or a noble-minded woman [illegible] a lovely daughter who was work[illegible] an office and suffered per[illegible] the hands of a too attentive em[illegible] leading to the girl's un[illegible]. The mother thinks it over and forms, she thinks, an original plot. She [illegible] as a photoplay under the title, "[illegible] to Lucy" or "Why girls [illegible]," little realizing that the idea [illegible] nicely portrayed in "With[illegible]," the plot of which is as old as [illegible] of business that employed [illegible].

[illegible] Original Story?

[illegible] all, what is an original story? I [illegible] when I hear one or read one. If [illegible] it or read it before, it is [illegible]. But, for all I know, it may [illegible] to the policeman at the cor[illegible] would think I was crazy if I tried [illegible] on him as a new one, or, per[illegible] down lightly by surmising I [illegible] a reader of Punch!

[illegible] are, of course, plenty of orig[illegible] formulated in many brilliant [illegible], there are few original plots. [illegible] a photoplay does not have to be [illegible] acceptable. That is not to be [illegible] because dramatists and fiction [illegible] pretty well exhausted the field. [illegible] idea may be embodied in a [illegible] plot that will imbue it with the [illegible] of originality, and will win for [illegible] the reputation of having evolved [illegible] original, and that one original [illegible] overshadow the whole fabric, as [illegible] frequently is pleasing photoplay [illegible].

[illegible] several scenario writers whose [illegible] well known as the favorite [illegible] many, no doubt, wonder how [illegible] to evolve so many original [illegible] you may safely assume they [illegible] a little along those lines and [illegible] business. Everything is grist [illegible] their mill. A chance remark [illegible] may prove the spark [illegible] imagination. You may be [illegible] Charlie Chaplin never passes a [illegible] window without taking stock of [illegible], hoping for an original line [illegible]; or that he never sees a [illegible] to lace his shoe without [illegible] thought; and from that [illegible] original idea may spring that [illegible] of laughter from his ad[illegible].

[illegible] take up photoplay writing as [illegible] there is little chance of [illegible] happening's being ignored or [illegible]. It will be either carefully stored [illegible] or committed to the note[illegible] should be carried by every [illegible], then, it is surprising the [illegible] help one will receive [illegible] that one is a scenario [illegible] dabbled a little in the cult [illegible] it is rarely that I walk two [illegible] someone's waylaying me and [illegible] to listen to an "original story" [illegible] my fortune if I will only [illegible] a photoplay!

[illegible] indeed that one single idea or [illegible] will form the basis for a photo[illegible] would, generally, prove too [illegible] the conjunction of two, or more, [illegible] the eye, and from there to the [illegible] a concrete idea that may prove original enough to form the basis for a scenario.

For instance, one morning, a few weeks ago, on perusing my morning Times, I saw a photograph of an unlucky wight being led off, handcuffed to a minion of the law, and close on the page beside it I saw an account of a couple starting on a honeymoon. The two in conjunction formed, to my mind, an ideal combination. Handcuffs and honeymoon! Honeymoon and handcuffs! Could anyone conceive a happier situation! Immediately my mind's eye saw a young bridegroom being arrested on a Pullman, and a flint-hearted detective reaching down from the berth above and handcuffing the bridegroom's wrist to his own, so as to prevent his escape from the moving train.

Sometimes one may come across in a newspaper an unusual happening that would form an ideal plot for a photoplay. Don't touch it. Millions of eyes besides yours will have glimpsed it.

The Poetic Cutter.

It is an awful condition when one's hands are tied and one cannot kick. I had produced from my pen a little story of a dog, for the subtitles of which I employed little two-line verses which helped to carry the story along. When the filming of the production was completed it was turned over to the "cutting room" to be cut and assembled, preparatory to exploitation. The head of that department took it in hand himself and the idea of the poetic subtitles, no doubt, caught his fancy. He immediately sought to improve matters. He was a gesticulating gentleman from Poland and in that romantic land there is undoubtedly a form of poetry that is all its own. However, his grasp of the English language was, necessarily, insecure, and his knowledge of dactyls and spondees and rhythm as taught at Eton and Harvard would never have qualified him for the post of laureate; yet this did not deter him. Not a bit. Here was his chance, and he made the best of it. He inserted a number of lines of his own creation which neither scanned nor rhymed, and the finished product was dispatched to the main offices to be shown to the censor board, the heads of the firm and the editor and members of the scenario department. My name, was placed on the film as author, and I had to sit through the performance suffering and squirming in silence, amidst titters of laughter and remarks, such as, "Some poet, Cap! Some poet!" and I couldn't blame them, for this is an example of what greeted my startled eyes,

"I am a nice little dog, yes I am, and I am
good,
And I wag my tail, yes I wag my tail all right."

I was powerless to protest, because my self-invited co-author was a lifetime friend of the financial head of the firm and to have belittled him would have, probably, lost me my position. I lost my reputation as a poet, but I advanced in my own esteem as a diplomat!

Lost Pearls.

And then, some directors have queer notions. On discussing an allegorical story, which I had evolved, with the gentleman who was deputed to direct the production, he proposed that we show in a cave a number of beautiful oyster shells, of huge proportions, in each of which would be deposited a human infant; and the leading lady, garbed as a sea-nymph, would appear and pluck the babies from the oyster shells and offer them as a sacrifice to the gods. I asked him what was the idea? Why the babies? He said they would represent "Pearls of great price." Well, my mind's eye sensed the result on the screen. Squirming nude infants in papier mache shells would make sorry looking oysters and the priceless pearls idea was difficult to digest. I protested. He insisted. I swore. He urged. I threatened to demolish the manuscript and resign altogether. He told me I was devoid of both soul and imagination. It was only when, at last, I told him it was a fishy proposition, and that we should be dubbed a couple of clams, that he desisted, for the idea of being dubbed a clam is terrifying to a director with a soulful imagination. But it was a hot discussion, and I don't think he has ever forgiven me for having robbed him of his pearls of great price.

Stars, too, are sometimes difficult to please—female stars especially. I have written photoplays for some sweet favorites of the screen who would threaten to overthrow the universe if any other female younger than themselves was injected into a story, and no scenario would be considered any good at all that did not show them in, at least, 75 per cent. of the scenes, 45 per cent. of which must be close-ups of the female stars.

And then, the famous stage favorites of uncertain age who camouflage themselves to a semblage of youth and insist on stories being evolved that will depict them as kittenish schoolgirls.

But, bantering apart, is it not wonderful how these same tried favorites of the speaking stage have injected the spirit of youth to the screen? Attribute it to acting, if you will, yet, nevertheless, the majority of our youngest screen actresses have failed ignobly in the rolls suitable to their years in comparison with their older sisters of advanced experience.

Youngsters Rush in Where Angels—

In writing for the younger stars the scenarioist has to contend with the petulance of youth. There are few things more uncertain than that. Compared with the tolerance of middle age and hard acquired experience it is as shoddy to pure wool. A scenario writer will invariably find experienced actresses or actors grateful for all efforts shown that will help to bring out their best acting qualities, while some pert little miss, lately plucked from a hotel telephone switch or from behind the counter of a department store, will cause an upheaval equal to a railroad strike if presented with a scenario that does not show her in nearly every scene and depicting her displaying emotions that Bernhardt, Duse or Ethel Barrymore would hesitate to portray.

A great number of adaptations have been made from stage plays and operas, of which I have done my quota, but how few, in comparison to those produced from photoplays originally written for the screen, have really proved either artistic or financial successes? That is why I have maintained, and always will, that it is well, and necessary, to encourage the 10,000,000 scenario writers, because the screen is clamoring for originality, and a few select brains cannot long supply the never-ending demand.

You are Surrounded by Plots.

People whom I meet often ask me from where and how the average scenario writer secures his plots and ideas for photoplays. Why, they are all around one, if one will only keep one's eyes and ears open. A bargain counter rush and a fire engine tearing down the street will make a delightful combination for the foundation of an exciting drama, and a fat man asleep in a porch hammock and a small boy with a water-pistol will suggest a comedy situation that will always get a laugh, and plots are easy, once one has established some good situations to embody in the story.

One day, in passing through a market in New York I saw a stout gentleman and his wife halted in front of a stall, on the counter of which cereals and breadstuffs were displayed. On a plate were some broken pieces of cracker, and the gentleman, thinking, no doubt, that they were samples displayed for the public to try, took a piece from the plate and popped it into his mouth. The buxom lady behind the counter made a grab and seized the plate.

"Here! Don't be eatin' that," she said. "It's dog biscuits!"

The gentleman lost no time in disgorging the canine provender, and moved off, muttering, and as he passed me his expression was still distorted, as he listened to his good wife telling him what she believed were the component parts that went to the making of dog biscuits. Well, that was a good comedy situation, and I rightfully considered it a stroke of luck. I, later, saw the episode recorded on the screen, and it brought a good laugh.

Actual happenings make for the best situations, whether they be in drama or comedy. That is why Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are making such a success in their line of work. All their plots are simple and the episodes they portray are such as might easily happen to any married couple, and they are careful not to overdo or overact their parts, and they give to their productions, withal, a human touch. There is nothing that appeals so strongly as that. The human touch! The 10,000,000 scenario writers should bear that in mind.

The Scene is Foreign to the Writer Too.

I have read many photoplays written by some of the 10,000,000 in which the stories were laid in foreign countries—foreign indeed to the writers, who, it was easy to see, had no knowledge of them.

Why they should attempt to write of things, places and peoples of which they know little or nothing is a puzzle to me. And the marvel of it is that sometimes these stories are accepted, paid for and put into production. More often than not, too, these stories are given to directors to produce who are equally ignorant of the localities, peoples and subjects. Well, we see the results on the screen and wonder why such things should be.

Putting Lions Where Lions Don't Grow.

I wrote a photoplay, the scenes of which were laid in India, and a tiger hunt formed part of the exciting episodes. The company possessed a number of wild animals, and the director saw a great chance to cut loose. First thing I knew he had inserted a magnificent lion into the jungle scenes. Now, India was the land of my birth and I subsequently spent some very happy and stirring years there; but in all that land such a thing as a wild lion is unknown. I protested to the director and told him that having a lion take part in the tiger hunt would get me in bad, as my name would be mentioned on the screen as author of the scenario. That didn't worry him a bit.

"Oh, hell!" he said, "We've got a dandy lion, and I'm going to use him." "But," I pleaded, "They don't have lions in India."

"Well, they ought to have," he snorted in reply. "Anyway, they'll have one now. And, what's more, I'm goin' to use every animal we've got!" And he did.

If Col. Roosevelt ever saw that picture I bet it made his mouth water, and made him wish that he was a Maharajah!

Of course, I do not mean to insinuate that directors of moving pictures are ignorant as a class, but, as in all lines of endeavor, square pegs have been sometimes thrust into round holes. Take it, all in all, some of the most brilliant brains in the world have been, and are being, devoted to the direction of film productions. The business is gradually drifting into really artistic and competent hands which will save it from drifting into the fate of Punch and Judy shows and roller skating.

How to Get By.

The thing that mostly worries the 10,000,000 is where and how, they can sell their plots and ideas, and it seems a puzzle to them how some mortals seem to be able to make a living by scenario writing. They all have plots and ideas galore, but how to break into the selling end of the game? That is the vital question!

Well, honest to goodness, that's a hard one to answer. How the majority of successful scenario writers have managed to do so I, honestly, don't know; but it's a safe bet that it has been mainly through perseverance and hard work. Sometimes, of course, luck will prove a timely element.

There is one thing essential in becoming a successful scenario writer. In fact, to become successful in any line of endeavor. Remember how the first book of Caesar starts off with a bang:

"Omnia Gallia in partes tres divisa est."

So, to those of the 10,000,000 who are blest with sufficient gall to bear the process of division, there is reasonable hope for success!

"But didn't Opportunity ever knock at your door?"

"Probably."

"And you didn't answer it?"

"I? Of course not. What do you think the servants are for?"

Many pink flowers may be turned blue by exposing them to the fumes of ammonia for a few minutes, and blue flowers become pink when exposed to acids.

Was Not Two-faced.

PERSONAL beauty came up for discussion at a social gathering, when a little incident along that line was recalled by Senator William H. Thompson of Kansas.

One afternoon Smith and Jones were comparing war-garden statistics over the backyard fence, when a new resident, who had recently moved into the neighborhood, chanced to pass by at a distance.

"There goes that man Brown," remarked Smith, with an indicative nod of his head toward the stranger. "What do you think of him by this time?"

"I don't know," replied Jones. "I haven't had occasion to give him much thought."

A Tender Conscience.

FRANCES and Agatha had been very carefully reared. Especially had they been taught that in no circumstances must they tell a lie—not even a "white lie"—or deceive any one.

One day, during a visit made by these little girls to an aunt in the country, they met a large cow in a field they were crossing. Much frightened, the youngsters stopped, not knowing what to do. Finally Frances said:

"Let's go right on, Agatha, and pretend that we are not afraid of it."

THE STRAIN OF THE WOLF.

Intrigues of the Kaiser's Sons. By William Le Queux.

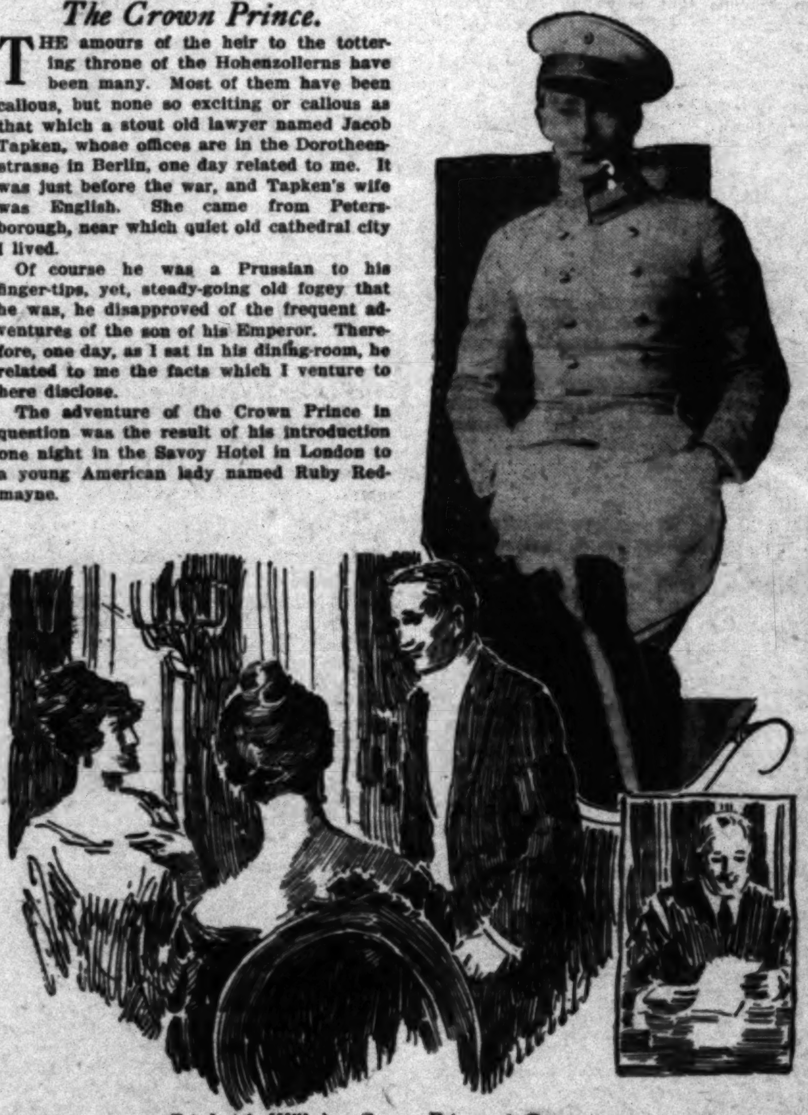
CHAPTER VI.

The Crown Prince.

THE amours of the heir to the tottering throne of the Hohenzollerns have been many. Most of them have been callous, but none so exciting or callous as that which a stout old lawyer named Jacob Tapken, whose offices are in the Dorotheenstrasse in Berlin, one day related to me. It was just before the war, and Tapken's wife was English. She came from Peterborough, near which quiet old cathedral city I lived.

Of course he was a Prussian to his finger-tips, yet, steady-going old fogey that he was, he disapproved of the frequent adventures of the son of his Emperor. Therefore, one day, as I sat in his dining-room, he related to me the facts which I venture to here disclose.

The adventure of the Crown Prince in question was the result of his introduction one night in the Savoy Hotel in London to a young American lady named Ruby Redmayne.



Friederich Wilhelm. Crown Prince of Germany.

It was after supper, when the crowd had left the restaurant to sit upon the white enamelled chairs in the lounge with their coffee and liqueurs, when Mr. Henry Hildebrand—as the Crown Prince called himself in London—was introduced by Count von Fraustadt, of the German Embassy, to the stout old Mrs. Redmayne and her charming daughter Ruby, one of the belles of Philadelphia.

Ruby! The very name glowed red before the eyes of the Crown Prince, and soon he became very friendly, receiving an invitation to call upon them at the Claridge Hotel on the following day.

"We are in London for another six weeks," Mrs. Redmayne said. "Therefore, I hope we may see something of you, Mr. Hildebrand, and of your friend the Count, also."

"I shall indeed be most delighted," replied His Highness, bowing and smiling towards her handsome dark-haired daughter. Presently he saw them into the car awaiting them, and then with Von Fraustadt sauntered along the Strand towards Jermyn street, where he had chambers in a house kept by a discreet old German—the chambers which he always occupied when on his secret visits to London.

"What a handsome girl!" he remarked enthusiastically to his companion, as they strode along. "Who are the Redmaynes?"

"The old man is a wealthy ironmaster in Philadelphia," was the Count's reply. "They spent last season here, and had a house in Grosvenor Square, where they entertained a great deal. I frequently went there with the Ambassador.

"I should think that Ruby has a good many admirers—eh?" remarked His Highness reflectively.

"Yes. I hear that she is likely to be engaged to young Gerry Byrne, the eldest son of Lord Calbourne," was the German diplomat's reply.

"Lucky beggar!" grunted His Imperial Highness, who, at that time, was passing as Mr. Henry Hildebrand, son of old Heinrich Hildebrand, the Hamburg shipowner. Sometimes the Crown Prince was known as Muller, sometimes as Munster, but when in London he was frequently known as Hildebrand, and under that name was a member of two rather exclusive night clubs in the West End.

The Chorus Girls.

Back in his cosy chambers he found two fair-haired girls lounging in easy chairs lazily smoking cigarettes and awaiting him. One was "Daisy" and the other "Peggy," both members of the "beauty" chorus of a popular revue.

"I say, Harry!" cried the elder girl, Daisy, with a decidedly Cockney twang. "It is really too bad of you. Last night you asked us out to supper tonight. We came along after the show, as you arranged, and we've been here over an hour!"

"I'm sorry!" laughed the imperial idler, "I quite forgot all about it. Why didn't you remind me, Karl?" he asked, turning to the Count.

"I quite forgot it, too," declared the other.

"Never mind, girls," laughed the man they knew as Mr. Hildebrand. "Ulrich!" he called to his man. "Bring us a bottle of wine."

Soon a magnum of champagne was opened, and the quartette wished each other every happiness over the edge of their wine-glasses, while His Highness afterwards crossed to the piano and began to play one of the latest songs from the revue in which the girls were engaged, all joining heartily in the chorus. Passers-by in Jermyn street paused to listen to the sounds of revelry, none dreaming that the possessor of that high-pitched male voice was the heir of the Hohenzollerns. The Crown Prince's conduct in London was always free and easy. His greatest delight was to visit the very lowest haunts, and even to smoke opium in an establishment kept by a Chinese in Limehouse.

Next day, however, he put on his best behavior when on calling at Claridge's, he was shown up to the private sitting-room, a handsome apartment in white and old rose, where Mrs. Redmayne and the handsome Ruby awaited him.

As he drew himself up and bowed both mother and daughter were struck by his smart military appearance, though he was, of course, in plain clothes. Indeed, so much so that the stout mother, in the course of conversation over the tea cups, said:

"I suppose, Mr. Hildebrand, you have done your military service in Germany—eh?"

"Part of it," was the Crown Prince's reply. "Only part. I have to return soon to complete it," he added meaningly. "But I much regret to leave England. I have grown so fond of it."

The truth was that His Highness hated and despised the English. It was only the freedom of London, where he could go about unrecognized and indulge in all his inclinations, that appealed to him.

"We, too, are very fond of London," declared Ruby. "We haven't taken a house this season because father unfortunately could not come over with us. Mother is, however, arranging to take over the base of Lord Calbourne's house in Park Lane."

Calbourne? Willie pricked up his ears. That was the name of the father Byrne, who had been named by the count as the man to whom be engaged!

"I don't know Lord Calbourne," ness said. "I've heard he is a ing man. He has a son who is fellow, I believe."

At this Ruby blushed slightly changed glances with her mother upon the latter said:

"Yes. We know them both They were frequently our visitors son, and they both came for the a place we rented up in A Gerry, Lord Calbourne's son, is boy. You will no doubt meet him

The Crown Prince reflected. In centered mind there had already characteristic scheme. The fact had fallen violently in love with some American girl, just as he in love with a hundred other women to his wife's sorrow and despair.

To him it was quite evident mother and daughter admired bourne's son and heir. It was owing to his wealth, for it was in London that the Calbourne heavily mortgaged owing to his recent losses on the turf. There arose within Willie's mind an of jealousy and resentment. As he at tea, careful to preserve that polish which makes him so attractive fair sex, he became more and

"No," he declared emphatically. "That is quite true. He has none. Woe-betide the woman who falls beneath his mesmeric influence."

"I cannot make it out how women can be so easily misled, just because he is heir to the throne," declared the smart American girl. "I know that I should not."

Willie smiled within himself. He saw that by his boldness and tact he had dispelled any suspicion that might have arisen with her.

Friederich Wilhelm and the Crown Princess.

BY THE INDISPOSITION OF THE KAISERIN, THE CROWN PRINCESS HAS BEEN TEMPORARILY ELEVATED TO HER PLACE AT COURT, THUS SATISFYING THE LIFELONG AMBITION OF HER SCHEMING RUSSIAN MOTHER.

"But," she went on a few seconds later, "both mother and myself agreed that the photograph closely resembled you."

"Well, if it does," he laughed, "I do not feel at all flattered!"

The ordeal was a severe one, for the girl with the magazine in her hand was glancing at the photograph and then at his face, comparing them.

"There is a great likeness about the eyes—an amazing likeness," she declared. "Has no one in Germany ever remarked upon it?"

"Well—yes, my dear Ruby, they have," he admitted. "One or two people who know His Highness the Crown Prince intimately have declared that I look a little like him.

Just at that moment Mrs. Redmayne swept into the room, ready dressed for the motor run.

"I've just been showing Mr. Hildebrand the photograph of the Crown Prince, mother. He says that some people in Germany have told him of the likeness. So we are not alone in pointing it out!"

"Oh, dear no," laughed the imperial humorist. "But I repeat that I am not in the least flattered by the slight resemblance I may bear to his Imperial Highness."

"I should think not!" said Ruby's mother, quickly. "He is a fellow of the worst type—a bad son, a bad husband, and a bad companion. We in America dislike the very name of the Crown Prince."

"I am not in the least surprised," replied His Highness quite coolly. "In Germany the mass of the people heartily detest him. More than once there have been hostile demonstrations against him, notably about three months ago in Cologne. His father the Emperor has now exiled him to Danzig."

"Yes. That is what the writer of this article says," Mrs. Redmayne replied, and then both mother and daughter passed out, utterly unconscious that they had been actually criticising the Kaiser's son in his own presence.

The situation had, for a few moments, been rather a critical one, but now, as he followed the ladies to the lift, he grinned sardonically at the result of his astuteness.

Like Napoleon, whom the Crown Prince regards with such intense admiration, His Highness never fails to make friends with those whom he intends shall be his victims. Indeed the many men and women whom he has treated so heartlessly and even sent to their deaths during his career have each and every one believed him to be their friend. Dozens of stories could be related of his callous and crafty plots against those marked down as his victims, either because they stood in the pathway of his pleasures, or because they had possessed themselves of knowledge which might prove dangerous to him.

In pursuance of his usual policy he had become on quite friendly terms with Lord Calbourne's son. Indeed that same night Gerry called by appointment at His Highness's chambers, and they both dined together at Romduo's, a favorite haunt of Willie's when in London. Afterwards they went to the theater together, and to a night club later on.

Gerry, quite unconscious of Hildebrand's secret meetings with Ruby, voted his German friend a very good fellow. All Germans were, before the war, received in London society with open arms. They were believed to be, as they assured us they were, "our dear good friends."

The Kaiser's son was extremely careful in all his movements, and took every precaution to prevent Gerry from learning anything concerning his frequent meetings with Ruby. Indeed, for a fortnight, young Byrne had been away on a visit to Yorkshire, an engagement which it was imperative for him to keep, and during that time the Crown Prince had been daily with his enchantress.

In the course of the nightly perigrinations of His Highness and Gerry, the former had again met the two revue girls, Daisy and Peggy. Willie invited them again to his rooms at a time when he knew Gerry would call, and in due course the peer's son was introduced.

That evening the girls played their parts in the beauty chorus, and after the theater rejoined the two men, when all four went to supper at a gay little restaurant in Soho, and afterwards danced at a so-called night club of which "Mr. Hildebrand" was a member.

The girl Daisy, discovering that Gerry was the son of a lord, at once made up to him, and herself suggested a trip to Maidenhead on the following Sunday.

"If Hildebrand will go and take Peggy, I'll come," was his reply, as they walked arm-in-arm from the room where they had been dancing amid a gay Bohemian crowd.

"Look here, Harry!" exclaimed the girl, when she at last found the Crown Prince, "Gerry's taking me to Maidenhead on Sunday. You are to come with Peggy."

"Right ho!" laughed His Highness, who was in rather a stupid mood, having indulged very freely in champagne at supper. "We'll motor out to Skindle's. I haven't been there for ages."

And so it was arranged.

When Sunday came, however, and the party met at Jermyn street they found "Harry" in bed feeling very queer, and Ulrich his valet was much worried about him and suggesting the calling of a doctor.

"Oh! don't worry, Gerry!" said the Crown Prince, "I'll be all right. Take Daisy down want the car if I feel better, so Ulrich will to Skindle's and have a jolly day. I may ring up for another for you.'

Gerry adopted the suggestion and left with Daisy, while her friend Peggy, having smoked a cigarette with the "invalid," left to spend her Sunday with one of her many male admirers.

The Scurvy Trick.

As soon as she had gone His Highness got up quickly, and sitting down wrote a letter which he gave the faithful Ulrich to copy. It read as follows:

"Dear Miss Redmayne: Being a friend of yours, and an ex-servant, I know of your friendship with Mr. Byrne, and there are rumors that you will probably marry him. I therefore write to say that if you will go today to Skindle's Hotel you will see for yourself how Mr. Byrne spends his Sundays, and the kind of female company he keeps.—A Friend."

This letter Ulrich copied in a small but distinctively foreign hand and addressed it to Miss Redmayne at Claridge's.

"Look here, Ulrich," exclaimed his master. "I want you to go to the boy messenger office at Charing Cross at 12 o'clock and send it by hand."

"Yes, Your Highness," replied the man who knew so many of the Crown Prince's most innermost secrets.

Then Willie dressed and went round to Claridge's where he found Ruby alone.

"What are you doing today?" he asked her when he sat down.

"I really don't know. Mother was discussing our plans ten minutes ago."

"I wonder where Gerry is?" he asked quite casually.

"I don't know. He rang me up last night and told me he could not take me out, as he had to go somewhere with a man, but that he would be round tonight."

With that he allowed the subject to drop, and sat chatting with the girl until about 12:30 o'clock when the waiter entered with a note saying that it had been sent by messenger.

He watched Ruby's face change as she read it.

"Monstrous!" she cried, starting up in anger. "I won't believe it!"

"What?" asked His Highness innocently.

Without replying, however, she excused herself for a few moments and flew to her mother in one of the adjoining rooms.

When the girl returned there were signs of tears in her eyes, and he inquired whether she had received any bad news.

"What I have just learnt is very disconcerting, Harry," she replied, in a weak, nervous voice. "Will you please excuse us. My mother and I have to go out to make a call."

"Certainly, Ruby. But I hope the news is

GEN. PERSHING'S offer of the American soldiers to the French commander-in-chief recalls the identical order to Rochambeau which read: "The troops which His Majesty is sending to America are auxiliary to those of the United States, his Allies, and are placed under the orders of Gen. Washington, to whom the honors of a marshal of France will be rendered." The orders stated further that in case of an equality of rank and service, an American officer would take command.

The troops of the king were to yield the right side to the Allies, to add black to their cockades, black being the color of the United States, and they were forbidden to take so much as a bit of wood, a sheaf of straw, a cabbage, or any kind of vegetables except by agreement and payment. "All faults of unruliness, disobedience, ill-will, brutal and sonorous drunkenness . . . will be punished with strokes of the flat of the sword."

Ternay, the admiral, with his fleet, was not placed under Washington as was Rochambeau with the army, but the fleet was to be used whenever it could co-operate usefully. Comte de Rochambeau was older than Washington by seven years, being 55. He was ill and starting on a journey for rest at his castle when his post horses were taken from the carriage on news of the heavy task newly put upon him of transporting an army to America.

His voyage with the troops on slow transports took seventy days, longer than Columbus's first trip; he had to avoid the English fleet and fight in an unknown country. He was first disappointed in the number of the ships and had to pack his men into the "sabots," a humorous name for small wooden boats, more like a "shoe" from a modern view than they could have been in that age. Perhaps such vessels are to be in style again.

The preparations were interesting indeed. Ambassador Jusserand has given us many spicy items from the diaries, kept in great numbers by the young French nobles who so enthusiastically poured across to fight for the Americans. Franklin was in Paris, as well as many others who knew America. Rochambeau jotted down all the data he could gather including such memoranda as this: "To take with us a quantity of flints, much flour and biscuits, bricks to be used as ballast, and then for ovens; to try to bring with us all we want and not have to ask from the Americans who are themselves in want."

Their Impression of Us.

A printing press for proclamations, siege artillery, ammunition, and extra clothing were packed into the crowded ships, but all horses had to be left behind, Rochambeau himself giving up two beloved battle chargers whom he mourned as animals that could never be replaced. Only the most robust men were to be allowed passage, and all the soldiers found the small sum given them for extra purchases had been too large when it came to stowing away. On board ship the boys amused themselves with fishing, certain "flying fishes" having proved to be delicious when fried in fresh butter.

Many of this force of 6000 men were ill of scurvy when they arrived, but they were delighted to be on firm ground once more and were charmed with the novelties of the country and with their impressions of the Americans. Coming from a highly sophisticated civilization, the simpler manners of America seemed refreshing and quaint to the foreigners; the wildness of the country and new methods of fighting seemed equally strange to men accustomed to military movements in Flanders and by the Rhine, thickly populated countries possessing fine highways and perfect means of communication.

Difficulties and privations were met with cheerfulness and even relish. The high-born nobles who had come to march through the forests of this country were aristocrats but were good soldiers. Vicomte de Noailles and Comte de Custine got off their horses and led their regiments on foot from Providence southward; in eleven days the army made 220 miles in very hot weather. The French army united with Washington's at White Plains.

The two armies presented a great contrast but each was both surprised and pleased with the other. The French troops were brilliantly dressed, even for those days of brightly-colored uniforms. Pink and white, blue and green, were very conspicuous and gay, the long coats set jauntily, the three-cornered hats and quick maneuvers all impressed the ragged Americans, who in their turn astonished the French by their endurance in marching and by their good order, and ability to bear heat and hardships. Snakes were new to the French, as were the impassable roads.

A great deal was written in the French notebooks about American cooking, the habit of drinking tea, an insipid substitute at first for the French wines. However, as the troops speedily won American hearts, the farmers soon treated them to fresh cider, to eggnog, and in Virginia they learned to drink what was called "grog," which was rum mixed with water.

The French all remarked the American custom of serving "lamb, chickens, beef, vegetables, pudding and pie" in one course, instead of the judicious division of viands as in France. They were not fond of having coffee served during the meal instead of at the end. Abbe Robin wrote: "The people are satisfied to broil their meat and cook their corn-cake in the ashes." One officer characterized this bread as hard on the outside and dough in the middle and complained that the corn spirits was as bad as the bread.

Feather beds were disliked by the visitors who complained, too, of the novel custom of the Americans in drinking toasts, described as a very disagreeable and barbarous custom by which one person invites another to drink a glass of wine with him, "whereupon you look your enemy in the face and mournfully pour a glassful, which you drink together." Certain instances where distinguished guests were too well entertained with wine were explained by the fact that the unfortunate ones were overcome by tobacco from the pipes offered them.

However, it is remarkable that the French behavior aroused no criticism from even the most severe of the Puritans. The discipline of the French officers was very strict, and their own conduct was so correct that one of them wrote home of life in Newport that courtiers accustomed to amusements had attended no suppers, no theaters, no balls, and had nevertheless borne such privations without a murmur.

The French Soldiers Well Behaved.

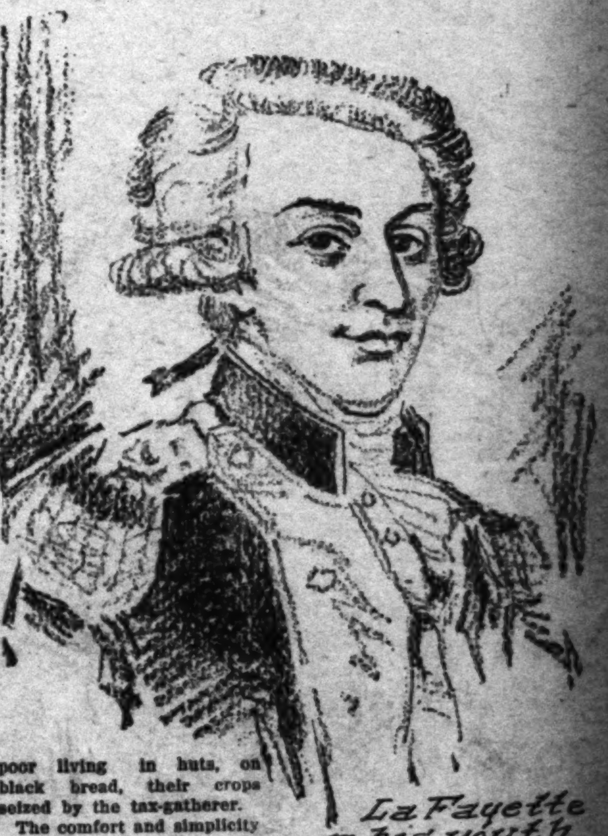
"The French soldiers were models of propriety. They paid for what they got, they respected the chicken-roosts, they were polite to the women." Rochambeau says that Indian visitors who came to his camp looked at the cannon, at the French taking their finished military exercises without a blink, but were astounded to perceive ripe apples hanging untouched upon the trees under which the soldiers had long been encamped.

This personal popularity, so similar to that enthusiasm for the doughboys now in France, had not been expected. One observer speaks of the two Allies as so different in manners, morals and language that the perfect harmony between them was maintained only by the great influence of Rochambeau and Washington. As to language, a means of communication was found then which will not be the resort of our soldiers of today. Ezra Stiles, president of Yale, records in his journal, "Dined at the General de Rochambeau's in a splendid manner. I conversed with the general in Latin. He speaks it tolerably."

Latin was quite generally used at first among the officers who were mostly older men, but the young fellows knew enough as said one "to drink excellent tea with the best of cream, and to say to the young lady serving it that she was pretty."

The previous dislike between the two nationalities, soon wiped away by the better acquaintance, seems to have been based on a dislike of the French Canadian, the enemy in the Indian wars. "The Americans believed that the French starved on bad food, believed in a bad religion, and had bad morals." The impression was that a Frenchman did eat roast beef, did not read the Scriptures, nor keep the Sabbath, nor regard other men's wives with Puritanical vigor." American forefathers were essentially English in thought, and were unacquainted with French thought and with French literature. The knowledge of the two peoples of each other was very vague and was now to be enthusiastically improved.

The capture of hearts not hitherto friendly to the French emphasizes as nothing else could the good-will and charm of the visitors. They were delighted with the wholesomeness of American society, with the rarity of poverty. "In America," said Lafayette, "there are no poor nor even what we call peasantry. Each individual has his own honest property." These aristocrats were all accustomed to seeing the French poor living in huts, on black bread, their crops seized by the tax-gatherer.



La Fayette in his youth,

The comfort and simplicity of American homes was compared to society in Geneva and Holland, "where one meets decency and gayety together."

The American Girl.

Many notes were put in the journals on the freshness and prettiness of the American girl, and on the dress of American women, which was found very good. In general the American woman, brought up so differently from the seclusion of the French woman, was extremely interesting to the foreigners. One was quite shocked at finding Samuel Adams, 60 years of age, tete-a-tete with a young girl of 15 who was making tea for him, but the visitors for the most part sensibly understood the greater freedom of American girls.

American manners seemed quite cold and formal to the French. The gloom of the New England Sabbath struck them as if a plague or epidemic had broken out. One bold spirit sent a plea to Madison to "make happy days of Sundays in order that the men wearied of reading the Bible to their children would not assemble around the bowl."

The French arrived in 1780 and by the next year the most critical time of the Revolution was at hand. The year 1780 had been a failure for the patriot cause, but now three circumstances combined to bring about an extraordinary triumph. Affairs were so desperate that at the Hartford conference elaborate plans were formed, by which France was to be asked for more troops, more money, and a larger fleet. The great question of where the blow should be struck was a vital one, Washington believing that New York must be relieved and Rochambeau taking the stand that if the conquest of the South was completed by Cornwallis all would be over.

Three Important Moves.

The southern campaign was decided upon and the march secretly begun. Three lucky stars fought for the Americans: First, although the French and Spanish finances were about to break down, Rochambeau was more firmly active and concerned than ever; Count de Grasse stretched his instructions to do the patriots a great service, and the narrow margin of time [illegible] cient for the good work. [illegible] six weeks of his time, saying [illegible] be able to come from the West [illegible] he and Solano, with the Spanish [illegible] bent upon the capture of [illegible]

De Grasse wrote that without [illegible] the ministers of France or Spain [illegible] make this hurried side trip, but that he hoped for the best use of this precious time, and he warned that he must be back at a set date. He brought 3000 men, over twenty-five war vessels, and heavy siege machinery absolutely necessary in the final operations at Yorktown, besides 1,200,000 livres in specie.

The nervous strain of trying to match together the three movements was felt by Washington; when Rochambeau arrived on the scene he saw Washington waving his hat and handkerchief in great joy, and presently the great American, "usually so cool and composed, fell into his arms." The wonderful news was that De Grasse had arrived and had closed the Chesapeake, [illegible] wallis was hemmed in and [illegible] rescued by the English fleet.

Terrible anxiety [illegible] discovered that the French [illegible] left the Chesapeake open, but [illegible] the admiral returned, having [illegible] attack the English fleet [illegible] sighted. He had lost no ship [illegible] men wounded, but had [illegible] sel of seventy-four guns [illegible] ers, some of which had to [illegible] York. In the meantime [illegible] fleet under Barras had [illegible] Barras, dashing south from [illegible] great distance from the [illegible] siege machinery also.

interesting names not so familiar as that of Lafayette are those of young Mirabeau, brother of the famous orator, known as Mirabeau-tonneau for his portly size; young Talleyrand, brother of the future statesman; Bougainville, Custine, Berthier, La Perouse, "young Saint Simon, not yet a pacifist, and not yet a Saint-Simonian." All of these and many other names were to become brilliant. Among the many young gallants destined for the revolutionary scaffold were the Duke de Lauzun, a rakish Don Juan of many adventures; Prince de Broglie, who was guillotined just before Robespierre was overthrown and the reign of terror ended, and Comte de Custine, one of the first victims, who was then a general of France and taken from the head of his army for execution.

The fortunes of these young soldiers from the finest families of France make a long and interesting story. The French Revolution began six years after the American closed and naturally the ardent lovers of liberty fought for their principles in the home country as zealously as in America. Everyone knows the story of how Lafayette sent the key of the Bastile to Washington and that it is to be seen now at Mt. Vernon. The Duke of Lauzun after many honors and perils escaped after his condemnation and came to enjoy liberty in the country where he had helped to fight for it. Berthier had a conspicuous future and with Lafayette survived to enjoy great honor as Napoleon's chief of staff, accumulating an enormous fortune, becoming a marshal of the Empire, but committing suicide, it is said, in perplexity of mind over the escape of Napoleon from Elba. Comte de Segur also found fortune under Napoleon, and has left fascinating memoirs of his stay in America.

Lafayette has his own peculiar place in American hearts. Without remarkable military ability, his popularity is not due to any great feats of service in battle but to the years of unflagging devoted enthusiasm for the American cause which he espoused as a mere youth. He came to America in disguise, without the consent of his government or family, leaving his bride and brilliant position to serve on two conditions, that he have no pay and be accepted as a volunteer. Congress gave him the honorary appointment as major-general and Washington was to have sole charge of placing him in a command. He was given a division but never had many troops.

He was granted a leave of six months to visit France—it is said that Washington could replace him as a major-general without difficulty but that nowhere could he find so competent and devoted a champion of America at the court of Louis XVI. On his return he was entrusted with the defense of Virginia, where he showed his zeal by borrowing money to provide his men with necessities and where he closed his military career in this country by the honorable part he took in the battle of Yorktown.

Frenchman Who Planned Washington.

A Frenchman to whom all America owes another immense debt was the great engineer and architect who drew the plans and laid out the most beautiful city of America. When the site of Washington was chosen, L'Enfant at once saw the importance of building for the future, of constructing a capital worthy of "a vast empire," on such a scale that there would be room for that "aggrandizement and embellishment" which later wealth would permit.

L'Enfant was an extremely interesting character. After serving in our armies, he had remained in the United States, and had been consulted on many questions of art, from pencil portraits for which he had become famous during the war, to marble palaces, from processions, jewels, or fortresses to the chief city of the nation. He had a very haughty, proud temper and was difficult to work with. Washington, regretting his "untoward" disposition, recognized that there was no one better qualified and set him to work at once.

L'Enfant was so enthusiastic that he rode over the site in a rain, and chose many of the beautiful, imposing localities. In spite of the mist and of the woods and underbrush covering the hills where the Indians had met to sit around their council fires, his dream portrayed "the picturesque outline of one of the finest cities that exists; steeples and pinnacles rise above the verdure of the trees lining the avenue within the unaltered frame of the blue hills of Maryland and Virginia."

The unique capital, unlike any of the other monotonous modern cities of the country, rose from the wilderness just as L'Enfant conceived it. He it was who rejected the rectangular uniform system, who outlined the broad avenues, the garden and park spaces, who chose the sites for the Capitol and the White House, who planned so well that in 1902 the Park Commission, including such men as Augustus Saint-Gaudens, found that all departures from the L'Enfant plan were to be regretted and would be remedied at heavy expense.

L'Enfant, in his delight at being chosen for the great plan, had asked for no remuneration; he failed to copyright his plan, and in the end fell into such abject poverty that the modest sums voted him by Congress were seized by his creditors. He hung about Washington for years, lamenting the slightest alteration in his plans. It should be said that Washington was at last obliged to dismiss him in 1792 because the architect was so jealous of his plans and so opposed to speculators that he would not announce in advance where streets and lots would be placed and actually tore down the houses of persons who built accidentally on spots that belonged to a highway in the plan.

A Tribute to France.

The romantic ties between France and America are indeed more numerous and delightful than we realize except by taking a look backward. Americans who have forgotten the great services of De Grasse or of L'Enfant, nevertheless, join heartily in deep tributes to France. "There are necessary nations, necessary to the delight and variety and wholesomeness of the world, and England and France are of these." England is built in the imagination of all men "as a land of variety, of humor and romance, of fancy and hard knocks, of broad laughter and chivalry, a place of which Falstaff was as true and no truer a native than Sidney, who went without the cup of water, and who wrote of that 'sweet enemy France.'"

To America, France has never been an enemy, and her friendship has been a rich treasure. "More precious than gold are the traditions of France—the art treasures, the storied cities, the immemorial uninterrupted culture, the skill and taste which these cannot fail to breed."

From her glorious past comes the prestige of France. "But land, money, tradition, prestige would be things of naught if the people had lost their soul. When a belated echo of the familiar cry of decadence reaches us now, how faint and strange and silly it sounds! For the one great asset of the French people is their indomitable vitality. In the twentieth century, as never before, the French are among the pioneers. It is not only on farces and fashions that they imprint their stamp, but on new industries and new sciences, like automobiling, submarine navigation, aeronautics, radioactivity, or new forms of social thought."

"I do not see France as a goddess, austere and remote. I see her intensely human, scarred with innumerable battles . . . but fighting on, undismayed. An old nation? A wounded nation? Perhaps; but her mighty heart is throbbing with unconquerable life."

It is impossible to overestimate the help that France gave to America; the immensity of it is perhaps glimpsed in the words of Rochambeau to De Grasse: "Gen. Washington has but a handful of men. . . . This country has been driven to bay, and all its resources are giving out at once. The Continental money has been annihilated." The crisis was so grave that the naval superiority and financial help brought by France saved the day, just as American resources will now change the balance for France.

Efforts not only of our government and armies but such splendid offerings as that of the food ship to be sent from Los Angeles show that in very truth every American hath two countries, his own and France.

Moving a Well.

A well situated on the bluffs that had been sliding toward the Missouri Pacific tracks in the lower yards near Atchison, Kan., has, at last accounts, moved twenty feet with the slide since the beginning of the movement, but remains in good condition and is being used regularly.

The change of location has not, it appears, harmed the rock walls of the well, or diminished the supply of water. The well is now, it is reported, about sixty feet from the railway tracks, which are well toward the bottom of the bluff.

It has been explained that the river bluff at the Kerford quarry, in this neighborhood, rests on a stratum of soapstone, which forms an incline of about 45 deg., and that the slide is caused by heavy rains soaking through the soil and striking the soapstone surface, which becomes very slippery when damp and permits the bluff to slide toward the Missouri River. In other words, the situation of the well is due more to defective drainage by the hillside than to the encroachment of the Missouri River.

Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado, can boast of the ruins of a building which scientists have proved is more than 1000 years old.

THE TREE WHICH MAY WIN THE WAR.

Pacific Coast Has It. By Francis J. Dickie.

NEVER before in the history of the Pacific Coast has one of its products been so in demand as the present time. It would seem a ridiculous thing to say that in the wilderness forested depths of British Columbia, Oregon and Washington the present great war may be won in Europe. Yet military experts have been for some time now voicing and repeating that the war may go to the powers able in the near future to command the greatest fleet of airplanes; to the powers whose flying machines are the strongest, swiftest, most numerous and enduring. And the necessary basic materials to make this fleet lie today in British Columbia, Oregon and Washington; for there are hundreds of thousands of acres where grows the Picea sitchensis, the most sought after, the highest priced and prized wood today in the world, for the Picea sitchensis is the joy of airplane builders; it is the one and only wood that through its wonderful combination of qualities is fit to stand the rigid demands made by airplane construction.

Few will recognize the tree by its long and strange sounding scientific name; but for a generation it has been logged in the above mentioned places under the various names of silver spruce, sitka, tidewater and giant spruce, and as such sold for around $15 a thousand feet in recent times. Only in the last few months has it come into such tremendous demand; and in 1915 in British Columbia alone $12,000,000 worth of it was logged for ordinary commercial purposes.

It Has Had Many Uses.

It has always been in great favor with the makers of boxes, particularly for those to carry fruit, as it was odorless, resinless and tasteless. It was used largely also for building the big doors on freight sheds, docks, garages, etc., where a combination of lightness and strength was needed. For ordinary building purposes it was used for framing, sheathing, joists, subflooring, shelves, etc. For thirty years practically all the oars used by the British navy have been made out of it.

But now through it being so essential to the manufacture of the man-made machine birds, it has probably forever passed out from the ranks of ordinary commercial woods. The accompanying photograph of a few of these monarchs tells better than words why the silver spruce is best suited to airplane demands. Note, in spite the great tallness of the trees, how little, almost imperceptible is the taper of the trunk, a thing uncommon in trees, and particularly among coniferous ones. Through this can be obtained the enormous length of straight board needed in the wing-beams and other portions of an airplane. These are from sixteen to thirty-five feet long. Added to this the wood is very free from imperfections, is tough combined with lightness, weighing twenty-five pounds to cubic foot. It is long in the fiber, even grained, the heart and sapwood are the same. In is nonresinous, odorless, tasteless, does not warp or split; is white in color, and easily worked.

The tree grows to a height of from 150 to 200 feet, and is from forty-eight inches in diameter to fifteen feet. The best grade grows in Northern British Columbia and on Queen Charlotte Islands, the only part of Canada where it is found. The timber here is the best in the whole world. Oregon and Washington timber is also good and at present in demand.

In spite of the vast strides made in improving flying machines it was only recently that the immense superiority of the spruce was realized. Then came the demand. Hundreds of cruisers were sent out to look over limits. The Imperial Munitions Board of Canada, which purchases tions, food and all supplies for the Canada, established a special branch with headquarters at cently, and sent out a demand for 000 feet. For four months now feet a week has left the Pacific of Prince Rupert for the factories in ern Canada by two special trains. ary the force of men was largely and hundreds of donkey engines, logging railroads are now in Northern ish Columbia and on Queen lands rushing logging contracts. tion with the spruce, the British government acted quickly to prevent iteering by passing a special order-in- as soon as this timber came in such demand. Most Expensive Wood in World.

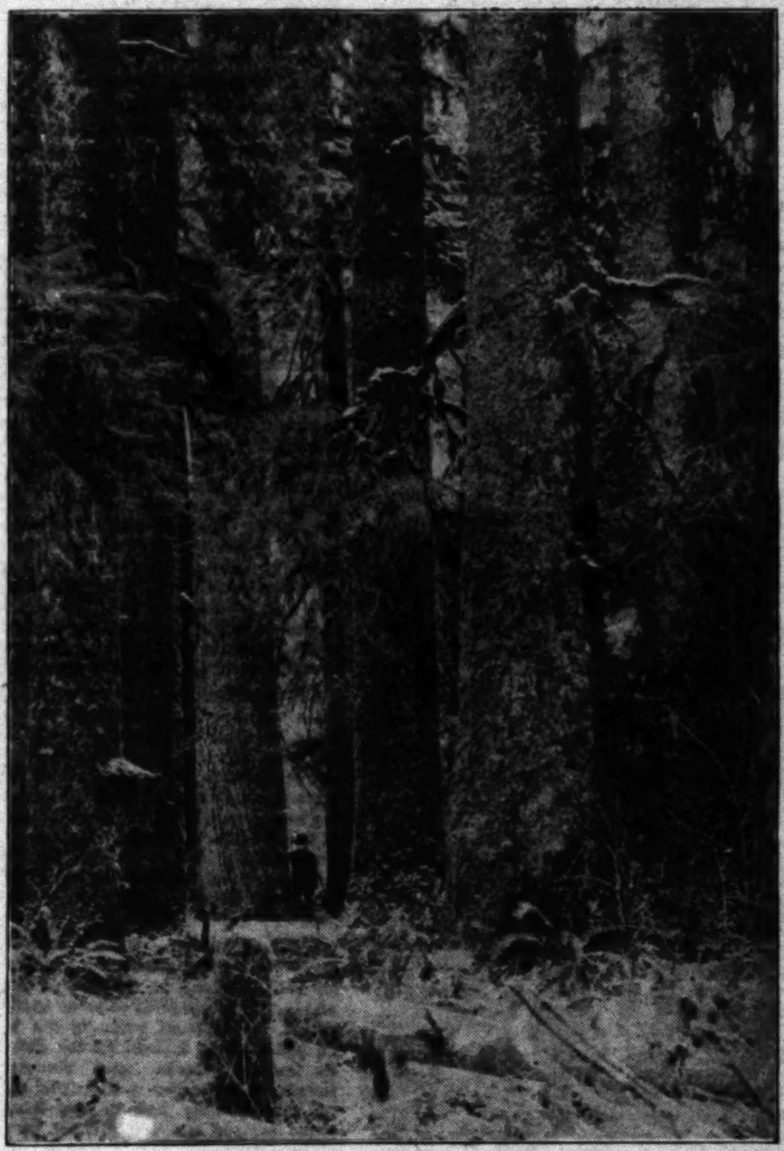
The spruce is now the highest most sought wood in the world. great deal of waste, at least from plane manufacturer's point of view, about 20 per cent. of a log on the used. The side boards are not Out of every 2500 feet only 350 this most desired timber stands rigid tests. The Canadian Munitions is paying $125 a thousand feet. as 1916 this wood was selling for sand. In 1915 the output was this price. In addition to cutting the heavy transportation cost Canadian airplane factories, the some cases being moved 3500 miles, cost is over $100 per thousand. the immense amount logged for the part used, the wood by the time it is into the airplane is worth more than foot. Yet it takes only 125 feet on the erage for an airplane. How vast the Canada and the United States are ing to put out may be grasped from ing this figure with the present let in Washington, Oregon and British lumbia which combined total over 000 feet.

But it seems like a very good here on our Pacific Coast, in almost haustible quantities, are thousands thousands of these so needed spruce which worked into flying machines ply the Allies with a fleet that is swifter, more enduring and those of the enemy.



One of the hopes of the Allies—the Pacific war tree.

"I couldn' ask a girl what don' have to bury herself up here to give up the whole world for me," he said, "even if I knew one what would."

"Am I on? Or is this so sudden you wanna give it a think?"

"If a angel come outta the sky, Rosie, an' offered you the star part in a revue booked over the Milky Way into heaven, would you think it over?" asked Bill.

"Say—this is gonna be better than what I figgered, even," said Rosie. "I see now that you was miscast when you was hoofin' —you oughta played juv'nile leads, like Faversham an' a lot o' other hams. You make love somethin' swell."

"You made the love," said Bill. "You made it for me. I only tried to come in on the cue. I ain' no lead in this team, Rosie, kid. If you'll let me play straight for you, though, we'll put this act over."

"Settled," said Rosie. "I'll go along wit' the troupe in the mornin' till they can switch in a new soubrette. Then I'll close an' [illegible]e back here—back to Saranac."

A Rooster Which was a Hero.

Naturalists tell us that, for the most animals lose the "heroic" qualities speed, vigilance, and courage which species possess in a wild state—when are domesticated. This is because qualities are not needed in the latter This is especially noted in domestic which rarely attain any considerable of flight; and accordingly we are at an exceptional case like the following would appear therefrom that gamecocks kind of fowl least weakened and rated by taming, may do good service farm.

[illegible] he pressed it to his lips. A sweet aroma seemed to drift through the glass—

Like an immense, khaki-colored snake with innumerable bobbing, broad-hatted heads, the Seventy-first New York came swinging down Fifth avenue.

Men of all races and all creeds. Sons of the Crucible. Americans.

On they came: men from the lower east and the upper west sides, Jew sweatshop workers from Spring street, Sicilians and Calabrians from below Washington square. Knickerbockers from lower Fifth, Armenians and Syrians and Greeks from Rector and West, Czechs and Slovaks from Avenue A. Brasses and fifes and drums brayed and shrieked and thumped their separate notes, blending with the hollow tramp-tramp-tramp of drilled feet, and the low dramatic rumbling of a gun detachment—and still they marched on, steadily, between the packed crowds which lined the sidewalks from Central Park to Washington Arch.

A month earlier their thoughts had been of their daily life, the round of toil and leisure, of pleasure and sorrow. Then war had flared. The fear of it, and the glory of it; and they had left warehouse and loft, counting-house and brownstone front, department store and machineshop, garage and railway yard, and here they were, here they came—on!

They came because of the flag which fluttered ahead of the column, coquettishly, like a veil about a woman's head in a spring breeze—because of the bit of starred and striped silk which stands for homes and hearths and parents; the things one curses and cheats—but which one dies for at times.

Stoddart watched them from the steps of the Travelers' Bureau where he had bought his berth for Chicago. He had tried to break through, to cross Fifth avenue and gain Madison; but the crowds had made it impossible. So he stood there and watched, his face flushed, his eyes contracted, his soul congested with anger, pitying the soldiers who marched past, and the people, men, women and children, who packed the sidewalks and cheered. Pitying them—hating them—and, if he had owned up to the naked truth in his own heart, envying them a little.

For there was high elation and joy on every face; joy breaking through tears, like a burst of sun through gloomy clouds—and what right had they to feel joy since their brothers and sons and husbands were filing past them, bound for "over there," to be killed, wounded, maimed, brutalized—to eat filth and drink filth and think filth and breathe filth—to make war, in other words—to be sacrificed on the blood-stained altar of patriotism?

Patriotism!

At the martial word, the brass-buttoned, gallooned thought, his rage flashed up in dirty-gray streaks. Patriotism! It spelled courage. It spelled the braving of death. It spelled the supreme atonement.

And what then?

What was there to courage?

He laughed a sickly, pale laugh. Why, courage was only a bombastic, exaggerated avidity after epic effect. Courage was a liar's credo, a fool's talisman, a rogue's reason.

The crowds were getting ever more dense, and he stared at them, utterly fascinated, for they held both his fear and his promise. He listened and watched intently. Each sound of drum and fife flicked his nerves like whips of knotted steel. Each shining rifle barrel was a potential threat to all he believed in, to all the ideals and hopes which throbbed in his lonely heart.

He raised his right hand and put it over his breast pocket. The glass flask which Werner had given him was reposing there. It was the remedy against all this—the supreme remedy—and end to war and suffering and useless, damnable sacrifice—

A bugle call! And another company defiled past.

On and on they wound, a coiling line of khaki, sharp against the black-and-white background of the throng on the sidewalks; the drums and fifes beating out an arrogant, challenging clamor, and more guns rumbling along, sinister, threatening, immensely powerful—and the crowds cheering, cheering!

A little old woman in black, with tight white curls escaping from beneath her straw bonnet, had mounted the stone steps beside Stoddart. She was pressing a handkerchief to her eyes.

Instinctively he turned to her.

"Madame," he commenced haltingly.

He did not know what he was going to say, how he was going to put it. Doubtless she had a son marching past in the drab, endless column, a son going out to fight, to murder or to get murdered.

"Madam, I am sorry—"

The words sounded wooden, clumsy, futile; but she did not seem to hear him. Her small, lean body was shaking convulsively; her wizened fingers opened and shut like the sticks of a fan; her worn shoes tapped the stones, as in an agony of feeling; and again pity surged over Stoddart—pity for her, and hatred for the marching soldiers.

"Madam. I—I—" his voice was raucous. He felt curiously embarrassed. He wanted to touch the lean, heaving shoulder, to caress the sunken, gray cheeks of the old woman. He wanted to tell her that he understood, that he knew the grief that was searing her soul, and that he would change it—change it all. He would bring peace to the world. He would—

"Madam—please—"

She did not seem to hear him, did not seem to notice him. She stared into the khaki-clad files, as if searching—searching—and then once more staccato cheering burst up from the crowd, cheering and continuous clapping of hands that sounded like rattling musketry fire.

The Seventy-first had sent along their last man, and a company of engineers, United States regulars, were now tramping down the avenue. Came again the crisp summons of the fifes, the throaty, full-hearted blare of the brasses, the dull rattle and thump of the drums—and again a flag was borne by.

Something seemed to spring to the minds of the throng from the bit of red-white-and-blue bunting; something poignant and sharp and sad—and yet very sweet. Only a flag. But to them it spelled the great heart of their country, America—infinite traditions, infinite love, infinite romance, infinite justice—and Stoddart sucked in his breath noisily.

"Fools! Fools! Cursed, purblind fools!" he stammered under his breath. He stared with smarting eyes. A young girl had broken through the packed mass of onlookers, had dodged skillfully around a policeman who was trying to bar her way, had run up to the marching, tramping file.

She threw her arms around the neck of a big, tanned private.

"Johnny! Johnny!" her voice came terribly distinct; and the soldier put her aside very gently. He marched on, steadily, eyes to the front, while Stoddart, watching, mumbling to himself, clenched his fists until the knuckles stretched white. He had a strange sensation as if something were pulling at his heart-strings, trying to twist and snap them. Subconsciously he felt that an odd thing was about to occur, and he watched the soldiers and the crowd more intensely than ever. The next moment he knew that, whatever was going to happen, would happen within himself — yes — within himself — and he braced his muscles instinctively againts the coming shock.

He did not know what it was, what it might be. It was something sweet—something glorious and fine. But he was afraid of it. He fought it back with a physical effort.

Again he looked.

Others were imitating the example which the young girl had set. They were running up to the soldiers, kissing them, decorating their rifle barrels, their uniforms, their campaign hats with roses, pressing gifts into their hands. There was a confused babel of voices. People all around him were trying to make themselves heard.

Strangers were talking to each other, shaking each other's hands. A white-haired old gentleman, immaculate in frock coat and silk hat for all the brazen August heat, the ribbon of the Congressional medal of honor in his buttonhole, was holding forth to an Italian laborer. He was speaking rather pompously, didactically—something about freedom and civilization and democracy in the train of our field-kitchens"—but the Italian seemed to understand.

He smiled up at the other with a flash of white, even teeth. "Sur-a da Mike!" came his metallic reply, "me da Yankee boy—" and he added something which Stoddart did not catch, and which caused the people about to break into yet louder cheers.

"Over there! Over there!"

brayed the brasses. The soldiers took up tune and words; and by ones and twos, by hundreds, then by thousands, the people who lined the sidewalks joined in until the song was like a rolling sea.

"Over there! Over there!"

They were going over there to fight, to suffer, to attain. They were going over there to die, if need be, because of an ideal—ideal of justice, of fairness, of decency, of humanity. They were going over there, a picked vanguard of 100,000 Americans, to strike a blow for freedom, for civilization, for democracy. They were going over there in their loose-jointed, slangy, businesslike American fashion, sure of the outcome.

Over there!

The words rose to Stoddart's brain, reminding him somehow of an old forgotten reproach.

Reproach?

And why should be reproach himself? For what? What had he done? Or—what had he left undone?

A shrill laugh pursed his lips. He would do what he had set out to do. There was the flat flask in his pocket. There were the meat vats in Chicago, waiting—no, he would not fail! There was his duty to humanity, shining in the distance like a holy Grail.

"Oh, Mary, Mother o' God!" The words came from his elbow. He looked. It was the old woman who was mumbling to herself, the tears running down her haggard cheeks; and Stoddart said to himself that it was because of this old woman, because of all the mothers and wives and daughters and sisters, that he was going to do what he had decided.

"Madam," he said, "please—" He was silent again. What could he say to her? How could he console her?

She was still shaking like a leaf. Still her feet were tapping the stones, nervously, unceasingly; and then, quite suddenly, Stoddart realized that it was not fear and agony which caused her feet to move up and down, up and down, tapping the stones. She tapped rhythmically. She was keeping time to the syncopated swing of the marching song—

"Over there! Over there!"

A thump-thump of the drum—and down came her little foot, heel first, toes following suit a second later—and, the very next moment, Stoddart rolled a curse over his tongue. He bunched his muscles. He tried to hold his body rigid.

For instinctively, unconsciously, his own foot had commenced to tap the rhythm of the marching song—as if his feet were trying to carry him on, into the ranks of the khaki-clad fighting men, to go—over there.

He must get away. At once. To his apartment in Madison avenue. The train was due to leave in an hour, and Werner would be waiting for him.

But he could not move. The crowd was about him in a solid mass, cheering, shouting, clapping their hands, ringing out the martial chorus:

"Over there! Over there!"

Once more the old gentleman in frock coat and silk hat was speaking to his neighbor, the Italian laborer:

"It was 'Marching Through Georgia' when I tramped down the avenue with the Zouaves, in 1861. Now it's 'Over there,'" and the Italian laughed and shrugged his expressive shoulders.

"Mak-a no diff' da tune," he said with superb Latin logic. "Is-a da spirito—da cuore—da wot you call it, meester—da heart—that mak-a count, eh?"

"Faith—an' it's yerself 'll be sayin' the thrue words," cut in the old, white-haired woman, leaning from her vantage point and clutching Stoddart's arm for support. "It was me father—peace on his sowl—marched wid the lads fifty-foive years ago and died at the Wilderness. It was me husband marched wid the lads ag'in the Spanish—marched and died! An' now it's me son—me Jerry"—her last words were swallowed in the swelling song that rose from the hot asphalt.

"Over there! Over there!"

and the old woman joined in the refrain, with a high, cracked voice, the Italian joined in with a magnificent full-throated tenor, the old gentleman joined in, with waving arms, face purple with excitement, eyes gleaming, silk hat pushed back on his forehead:

"Over there!"

And then, quite suddenly, something like a globe of colored glass seemed to crack and burst in Stoddart's brain. He tried to control himself. Couldn't.

His breath came in short staccato sobs. He labored under an excitement which played on every quivering nerve of his body, which made the marrow of his bones feel like hot liquid tea, which drummed on the base of his skull with a continuous sharp, joyous rhythm—and the rhythm was the rhythm of the song:

"Over there! Over there!"

He never knew what happened to him.

THE SMALL TRADER IN CENTRAL AMERICA

He's Up Against Big Problems. By L. Loyd Logan.

IN ALMOST every section of the United States are addresses made to Boards of Trade, magazine articles written, as well as newspaper editorials inciting men to wake up, take a live interest in the commercial possibilities in the countries of South and Central America, to send their salesmen, or business diplomat, for first-hand information. For that reason my personal, practical experience may be of dollar and cents value to those interested.

For the past ten years I have been in the import and export business, or "trading" with Jamaica, Grand Cayman, Central America and Mexico. I assume to speak with authority as there is not, I believe, a commercial experience that I have not encountered.

I have been asked a great number of times, why so many companies that spent money in the Latin-American republics failed. My purpose in this article is to explain more fully the reason, namely the need of big capital to establish successfully a money-making business with Central American countries, I mean to say that 90 per cent. of the small corporations or companies that I have known, have found after a few months experience that so much more money was required than they expected that they withdrew rather than invest more cash at such a risk.

It is foolish for a man, or two or three men, to attempt the importing or "trading" business with Latin America with as small an amount as $50,000 or $100,000, if he entertains the idea that he is on the way to be a millionaire.

The people that he will do business with know him better than he knows himself, they know his ideas and just what his next move will be. They have been knowing him for the past fifty years. They will know his successor for the next fifty. They know that the importer, or "trader" if you insist, is there to try to make money out of them. It has been their life study to deal with "Gringoes." The percentage in their favor, judging from the records, is about 90 per cent.

During my time as manager of the Gulf Import and Export Company, Inc., of Tampa we handled principally rough and dressed pine lumber, down selling same in small towns and harbors, and bringing back bananas, plantains, hides, chicle, coffee and cocoanuts.

Guarding Against Being Becalmed.

We owned four sailing vessels, two of which carried large lifeboats which were equipped with gasoline engines and which could be launched at sea in a calm and were large enough to tow the vessel until the wind was favorable. Calms on the Gulf of Mexico often cover only a space of possibly forty square miles. A vessel without some auxiliary power will lie for days waiting for breeze, this idleness is very expensive, especially when a cargo of fruit is on board, which may spoil. We saved this needless waste of time and money as our lifeboats could tow us out of the calm in a few hours. Also they were used to save tow bills in the harbors and more than paid for themselves the first few months.

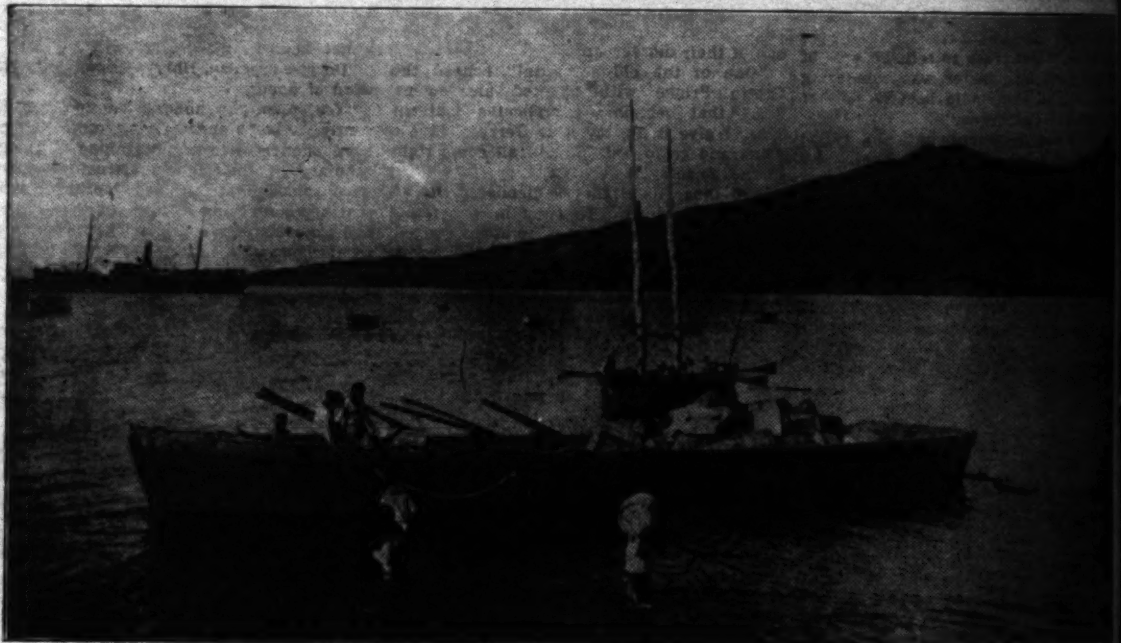
The captains of our boats, with one exception, were all Grand Caymandars, British subjects or Honduranians, Spanish Honduras. These people are born mariners and good sailors of smaller craft, such as our bottoms, the largest of which was ninety tons, net registered. They are people of very little education. The remark has many times been made that it seemed unbelievable that they could take a ship to sea and make observations with the same degree of accuracy as the master of a large battleship. However it is beyond dispute, as these craft leave Tampa and Key West every week.

Must be on Terms With Natives.

These captains were at once our absolute necessity and our greatest trouble. If we secured American captains whom we had known for years to be thoroughly proficient, they were unable to trade with the natives. This might seem strange at first thought. Yet, it is a consistent truth in every locality. Large wholesalers of San Francisco employ Chinese salesmen for that city. Manufacturers who sell the East Side trade in New York have Jews working that district. So it is the world over.

The great disadvantage of this arrangement, however, was that our captains were either related to, or lifelong friends of, almost every man with whom they dealt, both in selling lumber or in buying fruit. The captains were honest after their code. But a man several thousand miles away from his employer and trading with a relative, is certainly quite apt to have a tendency to give that relative the benefit of the odd cent.

It is a law, my attorneys tell me an unwritten law, that all freights or paraphernalia carried in the captain's cabin belong to the captain. That is, the profits made on such articles are for his personal account. On nearly every trip our captains would take down five or six revolvers on orders for their friends, making from $10 to $15 on each, which was theirs without dispute.



Unloading freight under difficulties off a Central American port.

Captain Does a Little Trading Too.

Suppose that we dismissed them or refused to tolerate this. We would merely have had to hire more like them and maybe worse. On arrival of the vessels here they would invariably have to have a new coil of rope, some paint, some calking paraphernalia, or something. This in addition to the regular bills each year when we hauled the vessels out and fitted them out [illegible]; to my certain knowledge a good portion of this rope, paint and so on, found its way to small vessels coasting on the Central American Caribbean. However, not one cent of the money for same came back to the company.

We tried eliminating the captains from everything excepting the navigation of the craft, we personally assuming the business negotiations. We would write to people we knew in the lumber business asking them for orders, and on receipt of such orders we would send in our statement, which was generally about seventy-five or eighty sols. A sol varies in relation to United States gold, but is usually about 40 cents. We would pay for the lumber from $13 to $15 here, which would show a good profit for the freighting down. We would also mention to our man that we wanted 100,000 cocoanuts, and to have them ready and we would pay him cash. The price we usually paid was about $13 to $15 per thousand. As they would be sold f.o.b. Tampa for shipment to Kansas City, Baltimore or New York from $23 to $25, it would seem, on paper, that everything was in order for a profitable trip. However, work as hard as we would and try to protect ourselves on every side, there would not be one in ten of these voyages without irregularities.

Always a Hitch.

For instance, even though we had inspected our lumber very carefully our customer would claim that it did not come up to standard. If it happened that another boat was in the harbor similar to ours probably he would reject the load entirely, saying that it did not grade and that he would not take it at all, or perhaps he would offer us say fifty to sixty sols, he having figured to a nicety just how much it would cost in port charges, loss of time and so on, to shift the boat to some other town.

Then again if he had the cocoanuts all ready as he promised he might tell us that he had found that he could not buy them as cheaply as he thought and that they would be five or ten sols more. Suppose that we had instructed the captain to accept nothing but the original price and not to pay more for the nuts or fruit. In this case he would have to cable us for instructions. It is a point to remember that he has, in all probability, been dealing with his brother-in-law, all this time. The cost of cabling would be terrific and it would take sometimes as long as five days for us to get him an answer, as there would probably be no telegraph office where he was and he would have to go twenty-five or thirty miles to send the wire and then instruct that the answer be mailed to him. Even then what could we do except wire him to use his own judgment. Suppose that we refuse to sell this man at all. There was no assurance that another customer would be better.

The idea of having one of our own men in Honduras to look out after our interests was also tried out. The expense was of course rather heavy, as this commanded a good salary. It was our idea to ship a cargo of lumber down and if the customer refused it, to turn the lumber over to our agent, knowing that the customer would come to our price as soon as he ran low in his stock. Also the agent could be assembling our cargo of cocoanuts and bananas so that there would be no delay to the vessel. In theory this was all quite feasible, but in practice not quite so attractive.

For instance we always traded in the smaller towns, making such places as the trust steamers could not touch on account of lack of water or because they were not of sufficient importance. However, the total lumber consumption of a small place is only a few cargoes a year and the profits on the lumber and the return cargoes would not keep up the expense of our agency.

Can't Buck the Trust.

Naturally the business question would be—why didn't we attempt the larger ports in competition with the trust. The answer is just this—the competition was too keen. This phase of the question was my personal experience in another company. The trust company's agents always have plenty of ready money. They have been substantially established for a very long time. The natives realize this, and that the distant future offers them the same reliable market.

Suppose that a barge of bananas [illegible] down the river, and we went to the [illegible] telling him that one of our boats [illegible] and that we would give him a good [illegible] for all his stems, even better than the [illegible] agent had promised him when he [illegible] ing at his plantation. He would have [illegible] fuse because he would know that [illegible] were other days to come when we [illegible] not be there, but the trust would [illegible] and in those future days if he wanted [illegible] advance, or if he happened to come [illegible] the river with his competitors to [illegible] fruits he would pay dearly for the [illegible] lars extra he would have received [illegible] This is of course a flexible fact, some [illegible] ness can be done in the larger ports, [illegible] result of experience is that it is [illegible] to attempt it.

In our company there were [illegible] wealthy people. At one time it was [illegible] sidered that we should buy a large [illegible] tion to raise our own bananas, and [illegible] concession from the government for [illegible] the cocoanut islands and pick our [illegible] cocoanuts. Had we done so, the question of getting the money out of the [illegible] would have confronted us.

Naturally the distribution would have to be through a great many cities. When [illegible] shipped say ten cars for Birmingham, Louisville, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Chicago, and so on, it would not be a very difficult matter for the trust to find out where our [illegible] were going while the fruit was being loaded on the cars. Even should we take [illegible] precaution, going to the extreme of [illegible] verting the cars after they had left the loading point, immediately on arrival [illegible] their destination the trust broker [illegible] wire them and it would be a very easy [illegible] ter for them to wire him that they were [illegible] signing him a few cars and instructing [illegible] him to sell at a price less than ours.

This is a serious state of affairs when [illegible] appreciate that bananas are very perishable. Again presuming that our company would not be of sufficient importance for the trust to go to all of this trouble: the [illegible] sold a certain wholesale produce dealer [illegible] Louisville a couple of cars at the same [illegible] as our competitors, they having the bananas in Louisville on that day. He would [illegible] dearly for leaving them for us, because [illegible] is in the banana business, and his business is to get bananas and sell them, and there would be times in the future when [illegible] would not have the bananas and the [illegible] would. Then, the trust broker would [illegible] member that deal with us and possibly [illegible] der only enough stems for his competitor [illegible] and there would be days when he would be out. This deal or deals of this kind are done every day.

One word of interest concerning the trust and their belongings. In Central America there is a narrow-gauge railroad uniting Puerto Barrios with [illegible] bad," he said. "I will call again this evening." And rising, he grasped her hand and looking straight into her tearful eyes, left the room.

Outside in Brook street he smiled to himself. The test had succeeded. The girl still loved Gerry Byrne!

As soon as he had gone Mrs. Redmayne ordered a car and within half an hour she and her daughter were on their way to Maidenhead, at the same time full of wonder as to which of the foreign men-servants whom they had employed in London had rendered Ruby that service.

"I believe it must be all a hoax, mother—at least I hope so," the girl declared. "Gerry is true to me. Only the day before yesterday he was asking me whether our engagement should not be announced."

"I quite agree, dear. I'm dead sure Gerry would never do anything like what is hinted in that letter." But truth to tell the wife of the Philadelphia ironmaster was wondering whether after all she would become mother of "young Lady Calbourne."

"We shall see for ourselves," she added after a pause, as the car took them away westward.

They did see. What they witnessed at Skindle's caused Mrs. Redmayne to boil over with dismay and rage, while her daughter turned away downcast and disillusioned. Gerry, who had always declared his deep love for her, was disporting himself amid that crowd of up-river enthusiasts with a fair-haired girl in white who sat out at a table on the lawn smoking cigarettes with her companion, both hugely enjoying themselves. The fascinating Daisy knew that Gerry was heir to a peerage and intended to keep him as, what is known in the argot of the theater dressing-room as "her best boy."

Unseen, both mother and daughter watched the pair for a full quarter of an hour.

Ruby, with her American spirit, announced her intention to meet them face to face at once, but her mother urged a more conciliatory policy, for she feared a fracas, and also dreaded lest the young couple should be forever estranged.

"But I want to show him that I am fully aware of his disgraceful conduct, mother!" cried the girl, choking with sobs.

"You can do that quite well tonight, dear. Do not create a vulgar scene before all these people," urged the ironmaster's wife. "When he calls, as he most certainly will after bringing that hussy back to London, then we can speak to him."

For a time Ruby refused to listen to reason, but at last her mother's counsel prevailed, and both motored back to London boiling over with anger.

About 7 o'clock, according to appointment, Gerry entered His Highness's chambers in order to see if he was his old self. "I've had a topping day," he said. "And I've just got rid of the bird. How are you?"

"Oh! I'm much better," was Mr. Hildebrand's reply. "I shall have some food served at the Piccadilly, and then go round to Claridge's. Will you come too?"

"Right ho!" laughed the vivacious young Englishman, entirely unsuspicious of the double trick which the man he believed to be his friend had played upon him.

They had dinner in the restaurant of the Piccadilly Hotel, and about 9 o'clock alighted from a taxi at Claridge's, Willie filled with jealousy and eager to gloat over the result of his day's handiwork.

The waiter showed them into Mrs. Redmayne's sitting-room, where, on the table, stood a great bowl of red roses.

The room was empty. Mother and daughter were not prepared for the arrival of both men together. They had only expected the peer's son whom they had, in secret, watched at Skindle's.

Suddenly Ruby, in her straightforward, open American manner, appeared and, having greeted His Highness merrily, bowed very coldly to Gerry.

He stood astonished.

"Why, what's up, Ruby?" he asked. "You aren't very nice to me this evening."

"No, I'm not!" she snapped. "You've been down to Maidenhead today—and mother and I have been down there also."

Gerry Byrne bit his lip.

He stammered a few words, whereupon Ruby, unable to control herself longer, turned upon him in fury.

"Look here, Gerry!" exclaimed His Highness, in a distressed manner. "I'll go, I [illegible] stammered a few words, whereupon [illegible], unable to control herself longer, [illegible] upon him in fury.

"Look here, Gerry!" exclaimed His Highness in a distressed manner. "I'll go, I think. This is an affair which only concerns you two—and not a third party."

And, rising, he went forth, laughing in triumph at the success of his deceitful scheme.

But he had in his mind a still further plot—one that only a Hohenzollern could devise. And he was not slow in putting it into practical form.

Just before midnight Gerry came to Jermyn street to confide in his friend. He told him of the terrible anger of Mrs. Redmayne and Ruby, and in a state of great excitement asked:

"Now, who do you think gave me away?"

"My dear fellow, how can one tell?" asked His Highness as he lit a fresh cigarette with that gay air of nonchalance which he always assumed when passing off his own treachery. "Probably some girl who is jealous of the delightful Daisy—eh? She may have heard the rumors that you are to be engaged to Ruby, and saw an opportunity to get even with her friend—perhaps a dressing-room friend at the theater."

"Yes. But Ruby received a letter from one of their old servants."

"One of the old servants!" echoed the Crown Prince with affected amazement. "Ah! that certainly complicates matters. Well, I give it up, my dear Gerry. Have a drink and go to bed. It will all come right in the morning."

And thus His Highness dismissed the affair most cleverly. The plot he had found was progressing exactly as he had arranged. Truly the mind of no prince in all Europe is more shrewd or astute than that of the Crown Prince. He can be poisonously suave to a woman, yet at the same time behind his smile is a spirit cool and remorseless—the calculating spirit of the Hohenzollerns.

By the unusual beauty of Ruby Redmayne he had become attracted and he had from his first introduction to her marked her down as a victim. It is curious that men of the type of the Kaiser's eldest son possess a kind of uncanny mesmerism over women of all ages, so that hardly any resist their amorous advances.

Next day Willie received a message which caused him considerable dismay. He hurried round to Claridge's and bade farewell to mother and daughter, stating that his father wished to see him in Hamburg for a few days, and that he would return to London as quickly as possible.

Truth to tell, news had reached the Emperor's ears that his son was absent from Danzig, whither he had been exiled, and Willie saw that he must show up in that town at the very earliest moment. Therefore, he left Charing Cross that afternoon direct for Germany.

A fortnight later, however, he was back again in Jermyn street with the faithful Ulrich, only to find that Mrs. Redmayne and her daughter had gone down to Eastbourne, and were at the Grand. That same day Mr. Hildebrand arrived at their hotel, much to the surprise and pleasure of both the ironmaster's wife and Ruby.

After dinner that evening he strolled with the girl along the lonely road which ascends to Beachy Head, telling her a fairy tale about his visit to Germany. Suddenly he asked:

"Well—what about Gerry? Have you seen him lately?"

"He was down here on Sunday," she replied. "He and his fatner are coming down in a day or two."

"Then you have forgiven him—eh?" he asked.

"Yes—we are engaged," she answered slowly.

"Engaged, Ruby?" he ejaculated, halting. "Why, I thought you loved me!" He had taken her hand, and as they stood together upon the wide open downs in the falling light he looked straight and reproachfully into her big luminous eyes.

"Ah! forgive me, Harry," she cried in an agonized voice. "I do love you. You know I do, or I should never—"

"Then why marry Gerry Byrne?" he demanded in a hard voice.

"Because—well, because of mother. She has pressed me so constantly to forgive him, until last week I yielded. We are to be married on the twentieth of next month!"

"But this cannot be!" His Highness exclaimed. "You love me, Ruby! You can't deny it."

"I don't deny it," replied the girl, bursting into tears while he pressed her to his breast and smothered her face with his false kisses. She, in her innocence, believed him to be in earnest. She never dreamed that the man who had so persistently pursued her and made love to her was the most notorious prince in all Europe.

"You know I love you, my darling," he whispered to her. "Remember the many happy hours we have spent together. If I did not love you I should not return to your side as I have done. You believe me, I hope—and you will trust me—eh?"

"Yes," she whispered. "I do trust you. Ah, if I could escape from this marriage and be yours!"

"You are mine—and you will always remain mine!" he cried, his eyes glowing with passion as once again he pressed his lips to hers.

They sat upon the high grass upon that great cliff overlooking the channel where the twilight was rapidly fading into night, and there they discussed many things.

"You love Gerry a little, darling. Now, confess it!" said the Crown Prince, as he held the American girl in his arms.

"Perhaps—just a little. Or I could never marry him. Indeed now I—I fear lest he should ever know what has transpired between us."

"How can he ever know?" asked the man she knew as Hildebrand. "Don't be foolish; I shall keep your secret always."

"Do you promise, Harry—promise on your word of honor."

"Yes, upon my honor," he declared fervently. Alas! she did not know that the word "honor" was not contained in the vocabulary of the Hohenzollerns. She was unconscious that he was fooling her, or that her confession of love for Gerry Byrne had aroused within her companion a fierce resentment and a deep determination for revenge.

The Prince Is Jealous.

"If you marry him, as it seems you must, Ruby, you and I will always remain friends in secret—shall we not?"

She hesitated. He was actually asking her to promise to betray her husband!

Her hesitation further angered him. But with that cool manner which was one of his characteristics he did not pursue the subject further.

A few days later, when Gerry arrived in Eastbourne, he watched the pair closely and came to the conclusion that her feelings for the man she was to marry were far more affectionate than she had admitted.

His Highness quickly realized that the girl for whom he had conceived such a wild affection was fast slipping out of his control. Day after day he watched, while the fire of jealousy became the more fiercely kindled.

The engagement was announced, the illustrated papers published portraits of the pair; Mrs. Redmayne beamed with triumph, and old Mr. Redmayne was on his way to London for the wedding.

Ruby was naturally constantly in Gerry's company. Finding himself neglected His Highness made a lame excuse, and after a final secret meeting with Ruby, at which he repeated his protestations of love, he again left for Germany.

The wedding duly took place, and was declared to be one of the smartest functions of the year. Willie, in command of his Death's Head Hussars at Danzig, read an account of it in an English paper, and smiled sardonically.

Ruby Redmayne had cheated him.

For two months he waited in patience. Then again he paid a secret visit to London. Byrne and his young wife were, he found, at Lord Calbourne's place, Calbourne Castle, in Cheshire. Therefore he went to Chester and from there wrote her a letter which he contrived to have delivered into her hand, asking her to meet him on the following evening at a spot he indicated on the edge of a wood, not far from the castle. The letter was of so urgent a character that even against her will she felt herself bound to see him.

Therefore they met. The interview was a dramatic one. He threw his arms about her, but she disengaged herself, telling him that she had decided to sever their relations now that she was another man's wife.

This direct expression of her intentions he first treated as a joke, but when she repeated her decision he grew furious.

"I'll tell you quite frankly, Mr. Hildebrand, I do not intend to see you ever again," she said quite calmly, as they stood against a stile that gave entry to the wood. "I am so very happy with Gerry that I fear he might discover something."

"Are you?" he sneered. "How very pleasant to know that. Well—I am afraid your idyllic bliss will not be of very long duration."

"Why?" asked the young bride quickly.

"Because when Gerry knows the truth he will realize the kind of girl he has married. You have loved him all along, and have only been playing with my affections."

"How dare you say such a thing," she cried angrily.

"Till today we have been friends—intimate friends—Mrs. Byrne. But tonight we are enemies. You don't know me."

"Yes, I do," she answered. "You begrudge me my married happiness!"

But he only laughed and quite coolly said:

"When your husband knows that you have been the intimate friend of the Crown Prince of Prussia before your marriage and that we have met since you became his wife your life is hardly likely to be as happy as you anticipate!"

"What!" she gasped astonished. "Then you are the Crown Prince!"

"I have the honor to be that much-maligned individual," he replied, laughing.

She uttered a low cry of dismay.

"And—and you will tell Gerry!"

"I said that we are enemies," he responded coldly. "So that is my intention."

"You—you dare not!" she cried, and, turning, she covered her face with her hands and in tears walked away.

He did not follow her.

Walking back to Chester he sat down and wrote a letter—a scurrilous letter such as the worst of men would not stoop to write. The venom of hatred was in his veins, and he told Gerry that his wife had met him in secret that very night.

"Show her this letter, and ask her to deny it!" were the final words in English. Then he signed himself: "Wilhelm—Kronprinz des Deutschen Reiches und Kronprinz von Preussen."

. . . .

A great sensation was caused in society when on the following day young Mrs. Byrne was missing, and readers will recollect two days later her body was found among the weeds in the secluded lake in Calbourne Park.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide, but the cause of the tragedy was a complete mystery to all, save to her sorrowing husband, and to the Crown Prince of Germany, who, indeed, is remorseless in his dealings with those women who fall beneath his evil spell.

What a Rail Must Stand.

By way of giving some idea of the strain to which a steel rail is subjected a well-known railway man offers in illustration the case of the "Cannon-Ball Express," drawn by two engines.

The largest of these engines weighs 100 tons; seventy-seven tons of weight are carried on the six driving wheels, which means about thirteen tons to a wheel. That means that thirteen tons of weight falls for a flying instant upon a rail surface perhaps no more than an inch square, and then moves rapidly forward. It is like a succession of whirling blows from a thirteen-ton hammer.

If the train is going at the rate of thirty miles an hour, an imaginary square inch has only one-five-hundred-and-twenty-eighth part of a second in which to receive the blow, wince under it, distribute the terrible force of it through its elastic elements to the surrounding mass of the rail, brace itself to help distribute stresses that are being taken by the adjacent surfaces, and passed back and forth in all sorts of ways through the mass of the rail, and then to receive the blow of the next driving-wheel.

If the train is going at the rate of sixty miles an hour, instead of thirty, the rail has to receive, withstand, and pass on all this stress in one-ten-hundred-and-fifty-sixth part of a second.

But this is not all that happens to the rail. We have taken account of the compression strains only. There is another set of strains; for these big driving wheels are pulling the train. They have caught hold of the rails just as your hands grip the rope in a tug of war, and they take a fresh hold every fraction of a second. The tendency is to pull the top off the rail, for rail and wheel to stick together, top and web and flange, in every single and separate molecule with all the tenacity of which steel is capable.

But still we have stated only one-half of the tension strain. The strain is reversing all the time; for while the huge drivers are pulling one part of the rail toward them, they are pushing another part away from them. This plucking and spurning, hauling and kicking, tension and compression goes on continuously. Complete reversal from compression to tension and back again takes place with every half-turn of a driving-wheel, and at a frightfully rapid rate. The marvel is that the rail is not ground to powder.

Over There.

He never knew why he did it. But, suddenly, it seemed supremely right, supremely fine. Suddenly, it seemed like God's voice, crying to him through the wilderness—and Stoddart jumped down from the stone steps.

He gripped the Italian's hand. He shook it with all his strength.

"Americans," he said, "Americans—all—we fight—for liberty—for democracy."

His words were inarticulate, choked. His passion was too great. But the Italian understood.

"You bet-a your life, meester," he replied. "Fight—as-a da Italians fight-a on da Carso! Ah, per la Madonna!" and in the exuberance of good-fellowship he gave Stoddart a tremendous slap across the chest.

There was a muffled tinkle of glass, Stoddart gave a cry.

The flask! The flask with the thick green opalescent liquid which broke the power of resistance and changed fighters into cowards and patriots into knaves—the fear-drug which could never be replaced!

"I hope the bottle is broken!" was his first thought.

Then he reconsidered. A great fear came over him. He remembered what the German had told him. The stuff was a powerful quintessence, enough, when diluted, to account for 100,000 men.

Gingerly he put his hand in his pocket, and he gave a sigh of relief when he found that the bottle was safe, uncracked. But—what should he do? The crowd was pressing on. Somebody might bump against him, smash the bottle, and—

Should he throw it away? It would be like throwing away dynamite—somebody might pick it up—and here were the soldiers marching past, bound for "Over there," to fight for freedom and democracy.

He made up his mind very suddenly. There was only one way. And the old gentleman, the wizened Irishwoman and the Italian looked on amused when they saw him drawing a flask from his pocket, uncorking it, tipping it to his lips, and swallowing the contents.

"Say, meester," joked the Italian. "Leave-a da drap—I lik-a da Yankee booze."

Stoddart did not hear. He put the empty flask back in his pocket, deciding to dispose of it later on—he would throw it into the furnace, perhaps into the Hudson. He stood quite still—waiting, waiting.

The drug ran through his veins like fire—and he waited, waited—for the effect, the breaking-down of his power of resistance. For the German had told him that failure was out of the question—that the stuff worked.

Had he gained this thing—this precious thing—love of country, love of America, devotion to the principle and the eternal right of democracy, only to lose it a moment later in a sinking avalanche of cowardice and fear? Had he—

He began shivering all over as in an ague. Cold sweat was running down his face. Little black spots swam in front of his eyes. He could feel the sun scorching his head with a thousand little pin-pricks. He became aware, as through a haze, of the Italian's voice, speaking to him again. He became aware that his own lips gave some sort of answer—but he did not even realize what he was saying. His voice seemed to come harsh and grating and meaningless across illimitable distances.

His knees tottered. The crowd which packed the avenue heaved like the bows of a ship. The sun swung to and fro in a blazing yellow pendulum. A flood of red color floated before his eyes.

Then something wrenched and gave. He felt a dull jar on the back of his head—and the next second, a gigantic white light flooded his soul—from far he heard a wonderful harmony with a syncopated staccato rhythm—and it crept into his heart, his hands, his legs, his feet.

And he found himself pushing through the crowd, with hands and elbows—regardless of curses, of protests, of a sly fist tickling his ribs.

He knew that he must cross the avenue, reach Forty-second street—Bryant Park.

A little drab-colored tent was there—he had seen it often; jeered at it often; had hated and cursed it—a little drab-colored tent, with a sergeant of Uncle Sam's regulars marching in front of it.

A recruiting tent.

. . . .

"Gott in Himmel!" was the German's excited greeting as Stoddart returned to his flat in Madison avenue an hour later. "You've missed your train. And every day counts. Well—there's another train tonight. Gets you into Chicago late tomorrow evening."

"I'm not going," smiled Stoddart."

"Not going?"

"At least not going to Chicago."

"Where are you going? Have they moved the meat plant?"

"Not that I know of. Only—" he walked up close to Werner. "I am going East, not West. I am going—over there—across the Atlantic—to France!"

Werner shook his head.

"Ridiculous! You won't have a chance of doping the food over there. Chicago is your place, Stoddart!" He jumped back a step as he saw the light eddying up in the other's eyes, as he heard the ringing, metallic, triumphant voice:

"Food? Food? I am going to fight, man!"

The German seemed turned into stone. He understood at once.

"You—you've double-crossed me, you damned Yankee!" he cried. "You cheated me. You've led me by the nose until I turned the stuff over to you—and now—give it back to me!" he cried. "Damn you—give it back to me!"

Stoddart laughed.

"I can't, Werner!" Again uncontrollable laughter choked him. "You see—I've drunk the stuff—every drop of it!"—and he produced the empty flask and held it against the light.

The German had turned a sickly yellow.

"You—you drank it? This stuff—which was enough for 100,000 men—you—" A great rage rose in his throat and he started for the American with clenched fists. "It's my turn to laugh!" he cried. "My turn! You—you—poltroon—you coward—you—"

Stoddart danced away, evading the other's fists.

"Poltroon—did you call me? Coward?"

"Sure! Coward! Poltroon! White-livered dog! Verdammter Feigling! Did you think I was working for humanity, for world peace, when I gave you that bottle? Humanity? Peace? I was working for the Fatherland—for the success of Germany—

"I used you as a tool—and now—" quite suddenly his voice dropped—"I'm going to kill you—I'm going to strangle you with my bare hands. You've taken my drug—and your power of resistance is broken! Take that!" His hand fell across Stoddart's cheek.

Stoddart's fist smashed him between the eyes and he dropped like a log.

He regained consciousness, five minutes later, to find Stoddart seated calmly at the window, smoking a cigar.

Werner rose slowly. He passed his sleeve across his bleeding forehead.

"But—" he stammered. "It isn't possible. The drug—the stuff—it breeds fear. It breaks down all power of resistance. It turns brave men into cowards. I experimented for over thirty years. Failure is out of the question. I worked efficiently, thoroughly, exactly, I—"

Stoddart smiled. He flicked the ash from his cigar.

"Oh, yes," he drawled. "You worked efficiently, thoroughly like a typical German. You left no loop-hole for chance to slip through. You guarded against all contingencies. Only—"

"Only what?"

"There's an antidote against every poison—and I've found the antidote against that drug of yours."

There was a pause. Then the German's question came slow, hushed.

"Tell me the antidote, what is it?"

"It is—why nothing extraordinary; yet so powerful that it can move mountains; something very commonplace, but now I come to think of it, I believe it's the most precious thing in the world"—he broke off and eyed the German with a puzzled frown. "Why, Werner. I don't know that I can explain it to you. It isn't the sort of thing your German efficiency recognizes. There isn't a word to fit it—"

"But, allmachtiger Gott, what is it?"

Stoddart sprang to his feet, erect, martial, an inspired prophet.

"It's a human nature—soul, Werner!" he shouted. "It's the human heart, craving decency. It's the square deal, fair play, I—I don't know but it's the thing that makes men equal," his voice was touched with awe.

"How can I tell it to you, Werner, a German—efficient? yes; but blind as a bat. But it's there, in every American heart, the antidote to your fear-breeding drug!

"I needn't have swallowed it. Dangerous? Bunk! Not for Americans. Look—" he smashed his fist through the glass of the closed window and the roar of distant cheering, the measured beat of the marching song came to them. "There's your antidote!" he shouted. "Democracy!"

Small American Traders.

thence to San Jose. It is a most attractive trip. No upholstering is used in the railroad coaches but cane, which is at once cooler and most delightful. The road winds in and out the mountains; from the car window you can see a little stream hundreds of feet below. Again, far as the eye can see, possibly its greatest attraction, are the wonderful banana plantations, one of which is the world famous Guatemala plantation belonging to the United Fruit Company. This company has every facility at its command. Its fruit boats not only have a refrigerator plant on board to preserve the great quantities of fruit they handle, but all accommodations are furnished to a high degree of elegance. They import not only to the United States but to European countries.

There are many diversified goals for commerce to seek. Coffee is exported by the millions of pounds yearly, with a value of over $7,000,000. [illegible] a land where trees cost but little and [illegible] extremely easy of growth, both city [illegible] and rural highways should every[illegible] be aligned with suitable species uni[illegible] planted. Southern California is still [illegible] of the ideal in this respect and in no part is the scarcity of trees and evidences of total lack of control so evident as in Los Angeles. What is noticeable, however, is the distasteful, inharmonious jumble of sorts on nearly every street, even on almost every block along many streets.

In another month rose bushes will have passed the early summer period of blooming and they should then have two or three months rest through discontinuance of water supply. Newly planted bushes should not be allowed to become dormant.

—*—

One of the most interesting groups of plants in which one may specialize and collect, is that of the aroids, to which belongs the callas, elephants' ears, Jack-in-the-pulpit, monsteras, philodendrons, also the anthuriums and a host of greenhouse subjects.

—*—

Plants do not eat, but drink only. If we would remember this at all times and see that food is put in solution through an adequate supply of soil most, we will enjoy greater success. Dry fertilizers avail nothing except as a top mulch and as such are highly beneficial during hot weather.

—*—

Plant more budded loquats in the home garden. We have the Advance, Premier, Red June, Victor and several others to choose from, and all are worthy of place, for all bear the double recommendation of being both ornamental evergreens and bearers of delicious fruits.

—*—

The ramie plant is a large stingless nettle, native to tropical Asia, and known to botanists as Boehmeria nivea. It is a large perennial not unknown as a plant worthy of place in the ornamental garden. It is grown in many countries and States (California is of the latter) as a valuable fiber plant

—*—

Plants growing in baskets, vases, pots, boxes, or window boxes need at least twice as much water as those in the garden, for the thirsty air surrounds all the mentioned receptacles and draws moisture from all sides and all parts. The plants also need constant light doses of food.

—*—

Those who wish carnation plants would do well to buy them now, in small size, and grow vigorously throughout the dry season, in expectation of a flower crop during autumn and winter. Carnations are not easy of propagation by the amateur gardener.

—*—

California possesses a native pitcher plant, Darlingtonia Californica, that grows up to 5000 feet elevation among the mountain bogs. It is one of the most curious and interesting as well as the most attractive of all insectivorous plants. Its hooded leaves are somewhat like unto a cobra snake about to strike, though none are deceived thereby.

—*—

A building site may command a truly magnificent command of view in all directions and yet be so void of landscape possibilities and so difficult of approach as to place it beyond consideration, for it could never be made homelike. No "forced" site will satisfy the owner, or observer, who knows.

—*—

For garden planting the pomelo, wrongly called grapefruit, furnishes a striking, spectacular, but useful tree. Its fruits are eaten by large numbers of persons, and as they are of large size, attract much favorable comment from our winter visitors. Each year more persons learn to relish the pomelo as a daily article of food.

—*—

Save the leaves and compost them. A ton of dried leaves contains sixteen pounds of nitrogen, six pounds of phosphoric acid, and six pounds of potash. A ton of straw is just as valuable, possessing a little less nitrogen, the same amount of phosphoric acid and two to five times as much potash.

—*—

Mohammed, the prophet, said: "Honor your uncle, the palm. He was created from the earth left over after Adam's creation. The palm resembles man in its upright position, by its sexes in separate trees, and by necessity of pollinating the female. If its head is cut off it dies, or if its heart is too much exposed. If its leaves are cut off it cannot replace, nor can man after losing his limbs. The palm body is also covered with hair, or fiber."

—*—

Seed saving is a most commendable incidental occupation for the average garden owner. If they cannot be used on the place, give them to someone less fortunate than yourself. The plants are much better for having the seeds taken off, both in vigor and improved appearance. Keep in a cool dry place until needed.

—*—

The more one views and seriously considers acacias the more is he convinced they are but ordinary plants for ordinary use. In large gardens and parks, along streets and highways, we may have many. In small gardens we should have one or none, though of shrubby species more are perhaps admissible for the value of the flower crop.

—*—

In some rural gardens the owners point with pardonable pride to fine stretches of milk-white hedges, composed of the common marguerite or Paris clay, all aglow with such a solid mass of bloom that foliage is scarcely seen. These plants will endure great heat and thirst.

pense. The men will work a while in one factory and then get transportation—free, perhaps—to another factory in another part of the country. The anxiety to get the work done is so great that all sorts of inducements are offered by the private companies manufacturing for the army and men are bribed to leave one plant for another. The man who told me this believes that munition labor should be drafted and kept on the job just as our soldiers are kept on the job in the army. He says it is no worse to draft a man to make a pistol than to draft him to shoot it. In one case he loses only his sweat while in the other he is liable to lose his blood and his life. Moreover, the man in the munitions factory is paid from $5 to $10 a day, while the man in the trenches gets barely $1 and keep.

The work of making an automatic pistol is enormous compared with the size of the weapon. The pistol is so small that you could put it up your sleeve or drop it into your coat pocket. Nevertheless it has fifty-three different parts, ranging in size from pins as fine as a sewing needle to the framework of the handle or receiver, which requires a forging weighing over four pounds. Many of the parts have to pass through a half-dozen processes or more, and in all over 1100 different hands are engaged, in one capacity or another, on each individual pistol. It takes 125 men to make the receiver, seventy to make the slide and thirty to make the barrel. Something like 275 are required on the small parts, and if you take all of the men and women who handle each part of the weapon until it is completed and packed away ready to be shipped to the boys in the trenches the number is, as I have said, over 1100. In this work every one has one part to do, and the processes are so standardized that one man often does the same thing over and over again throughout the day. I saw one boy who spends the whole day drilling holes in the barrels, and near him a girl putting peg after peg into a hole from morning until evening.

Much of the work is less fixed, and much requires judgment, care and considerable skill. Everything has to be gauged, and hundreds of men and women look over the pieces and measure them with gauges to see they they are exactly right. Some of the parts are so small that they are counted by

CARE OF THE BODY.

Tuberculosis.

A FEW years ago the California Medical Association asked the Legislature to appropriate $1,000,000 for the prevention and cure of tuberculosis. It is said that $20,000,000 was expended in the United States in 1914 for the purpose. Much of this money was wasted, for the good effects of the open air treatment are largely negatived by the unnatural and harmful stuffing system that is a part of the treatment.

In his book "Curing Consumption," R. L. Alsaker says:

"Many rich men have given liberally of their wealth to help conquer tuberculosis. So we see in various places buildings where many of the sufferers congregate under one roof. The intention may be the best in the world, but such treatment is certainly a mistake. Tubercular patients should not be herded together. The city of Denver has three of these great institutions, as well as minor ones, and the results are nothing to boast about. I have observed and known many of the patients who have left these institutions. Their story has been quite uniform. They were medicated and overfed; for a time they seemed to thrive and gained weight; then there was a relapse and their last state was worse than the first.

"Keep away from sanatoria where hundreds of tubercular patients are housed under one roof, if you would do the best by yourself. To dwell with hundreds of diseased people has a depressing effect on the body and mind."

Tuberculosis is a disease of "civilization." Indians roving about were practically immune to the disease until the white man and his civilization came among them. Today tuberculosis is doing more to destroy the Indians than any other ill. The same tendencies are reported in other parts of the world. Wherever civilized man and his habits comes in contact with primitive people the latter become tubercular.

The theory that consumption is hereditary is false. Were it true, the human race would have been wiped out long ago. A tendency to tuberculosis may be inherited, not the disease.

Another superstition is that germs are the cause of tuberculosis. If germs cause tuberculosis, how is it that they do not appear until several months after the disease has established itself? These germs are not the cause, but an effect of the disease. Like buzzards, they swoop down on impurity and proceed to clean it up as far as they are able. Germs are no more the cause of disease than maggots are the cause of decay in meat. It has been shown that a third of 1443 cases of tuberculosis observed in one institution failed to show the tubercle bacilli. Consequently, all treatment aimed to kill germs is necessarily ineffective, and usually harmful to the patient.

The germ of tuberculosis is present in advanced cases, but so are other germs. This germ is not the cause, but the effect of the degenerative changes that have already taken place in the body. The bacillus of tuberculosis has no chance of surviving in a strong healthy body. So long as the blood stream remains clean and plenty of oxygen is carried to all parts of the body there will be no tuberculosis.

Another bogie is the infectiousness of tuberculosis, a belief that has caused much unnecessary misery and suffering. A few months ago the California Industrial Accident Commission handed down a decision that tuberculosis is not contagious. Of course it is not. Yet for many years the medical fraternity has been basing its unnecessary and annoying activities on this theory of infectiousness. Dr. William Voorsanger, the chief authority in this case, said: "I do not believe there has ever been a case on record in the last quarter of a century where an employee actually contracted tuberculosis in an institution for the cure of tuberculosis."

Finally, there is the cruel and unnecessary falsehood that tuberculosis is incurable. This has been disproved in thousands of cases treated by natural methods. The consumptive cough is a curative process—an effort of nature to eliminate morbid matter. The first thing done under "regular" medical methods of treatment is to endeavor to suppress nature's effort. Tuberculosis of the lungs, when taken in time, and treated rationally, is one of the easiest of chronic diseases to cure. Dr. C. E. Page writes:

"The records of the dissecting-room prove that in numerous cases lungs, wasted to one-half of their normal size, have been healed, and, after a perfect cicatrization of the tuberculous ulcers, have for years performed all the essential functions of the sound organ. . . . The poet, Goethe, afflicted in his childhood with spitting of blood and other hectic symptoms, thus completely redeemed himself by a judicious system of self-culture. Chateaubriand, a child of consumptive parents, steeled his constitution by traveling and fasting, and reached his eightieth year.

"A paper published in Virchow's Archives maintained that 99 per cent. of the human race, who attain the age of 30, show, on post mortem, lesions of tuberculosis."

Tuberculosis is a disease of digestion—of malnutrition—and diseases of digestion are caused by wrong diet. No person with a thoroughly sound digestion is afflicted with tuberculosis. Usually the disease is brought on by an excess of nutriment over the quantity of oxygen inhaled. Dr. R. T. Trall wrote:

"First in the list of predisposing causes is constipation of the bowels. This is usually more or less connected with a torpid condition of the liver, because the same dietetic or other errors which occasion obstructions in the bowels, occasion, also, the same condition in the large depurating organ called the liver. When constipation of the bowels and liver exists the kidneys and skin are compelled to perform extra duty in the work of eliminating morbid and effete materials from the system, in consequence of which they become finally exhausted and torpid. Then it is that the lungs have to sustain the chief burden of depuration, and the result of this is a disorganization or destruction of their tissue—consumption."

How foolish, then, it is to stuff into these patients suffering with a weak digestion, immense quantities of eggs and milk, highly nitrogenous foods, containing a large surplus of protein, phosphorus and fat, foods that would induce digestive disturbances in well people. How futile to attempt to cram into a patient food that is not digested, but rots and ferments, and poisons the blood. Although he eats more than he should, the invalid may be suffering from food starvation, because his food is lacking in the all important organic salts, or mineral elements.

Many cures of tuberculosis have been effected by fasting, or a severe restriction of the diet to the amount that the consumptive can digest. Hereward Carrington writes:

"Fasting seems to affect the lungs at once, more speedily and more effectually than almost any other diseased organ, the exception being, perhaps, the stomach. It must be remembered that the lungs are themselves the great purifiers of the blood, besides which they are one of the most important eliminating organs we possess. Elimination by means of the lungs is carried on with almost incredible rapidity, lung tissue seeming to possess the inherent power of healing itself in a far shorter time, and more effectually than any other organ which may be diseased."

Much care should be exercised in undertaking a fast. Usually a severely restricted diet or a fruit fast is preferable.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis recently issued a statement from which following is an extract:

"The United States Public Health Service declares that outside of three essentials in the treatment of consumption—namely, rest, fresh air and good food—there is no drug known, however rare or expensive it may be, that has any curative action in this disease, and all remedies advertised as such are to be avoided. Potent enough medicines are harmful; radium, X-ray or electricity in any of its forms have no specific value in tuberculosis of the lungs. No serum has yet been found that will cure it, and there is no plaster or poultice which has an effect on the disease itself."

Notwithstanding this, wonderful cures for consumption, "ethical" and "unethical," are announced from time to time, and are boosted in the press, raising false hope in the minds of sufferers, and often causing them to delay the adoption of natural methods, until it is too late. There was the Koch "tuberculin cure," now generally discredited and discarded, although it is still administered in some unprogressive establishments. The Friedmann cure was not only useless but harmful. United States authorities assert that within the last five years no less than 500 fraudulent cures for consumption have been put forth in the United States. These "unethical" cures are no worse, and sometimes less dangerous, than those coming to us with high sounding names, from Germany and elsewhere. They are all useless. No serum or drug can possibly cure consumption, or any other disease. Inhalations of various kinds merely afford temporary relief. They never remove the cause, and therefore, can never cure.

Next week I will say something about the rational treatment of consumption—tuberculosis.

Athletic Exercises.

Wellington said that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the cricket fields of England.

Gen. Pershing, in a letter to a friend in America writes:

"The avidity with which American soldiers are entering into the activities of the war on the battle line is astonishing to European armies. In the matter of grenade and bomb throwing the Americans become proficient in but a few days' drill. I attribute this in part to the American games, football and baseball, which makes strategists of them all."

Athletic exercises in the open air are a valuable preparation, either for war or peace. No brief period of military training can supplant long continued exercises of the body in sport or in work.

This exercise must, however, be participation, not merely "assisting," as the French say, at athletic functions. In England, young and old, and men in every station of life from the day laborer to the statesman, play cricket. Here in America, after early youth is passed, our men are too often satisfied to sit on benches and "root."

Let us encourage all kinds of manly sports. They are good both for the body and mind, making men not only strong and active physically, but also mentally alert and resourceful.

Smothering the Skin.

Not long ago officious and prudish neighbors sent the county humane officers to investigate a case of alleged cruelty to a child in San Bernardino county, California. They found a little girl three brown as a berry, never having experience of even the sparest ment, laughing in a cot under a picture of health.

Sensible parents. Foolish They would better direct their mothers who smother unfortunate in suffocating clothing. When clothed, and also overfed, is it a that children are so frequently die prematurely?

Hygiene.

Following is from a pamphlet issued by Public School Protective League:

"When the present Long Beach Board of Education went into office, in the spring of it found that the school system had department of child hygiene, with a highly salaried doctor at its head.

"The salary in question was insufficient, it was found expedient by the medidirector to recommend a Los Angeles specialist, as the operator in tonsilthe aforesaid director, administerthe anaesthetic for the modest sum of The Long Beach Board of Education, one of its first official acts, abolished department of child hygiene, or mediinspection of school children, dismissing the same time the director and his agof assistants and nurses.

"The proponents of medical inspection of school children may be embarrassed to no extent by the record of attendance our school system, which conclusively that since the abolition of the department of child hygiene from our schools, the dismissal of the director, there has been a less number of absentees from school on account of sickness than in any similar period in the history of the system."

Book.

Dr. Alma C. Arnold is a chiropractor, but she is not one of the narrow kind. She recognizes the fact that adjustment of the spine is only one of the methods of aiding nature to restore normal conditions.

In her book "The Triangle of Health" (Alfred A. Knopf, publisher, New York,) she shows that the human body builds itself constantly through the thoughts it thinks and the foods it consumes and assimilates. Among other things, she discusses exercise, diet, inoculation, drugs and operations. Of spinal manipulations she mpelled by well-meaning but sionaries to wear clothing, tuberculosis and die. "The average chiropractor and osteopath who squabble about their structural work forget that these sciences should be drawn together and that another link should be added—that is dietetics. . . . I am too intelligent to think that spinal correction means everything and this is the criticism among the better classes of patrons of the science today—that chiropractice claims too much. This criticism is just. It does claim too much. But supplemented by mental science, dietetics, hygiene and hydrotherapy, it spells the ne plus ultra of all healing sciences today."

Dr. Arnold shows that meat is not necessary, and is often harmful, especially to those who lead sedentary lives, but adds, "I think animals were created partly for the pleasure of man." With this I do not agree, since the "pleasure" of man too often leads him to treat these highly-sensed beings with gross cruelty, in the field, in the shambles and on the operating table.

This is a sane book, and is worthy of perusal by all who seek the truth in regard to the care of the body.

Buying Water.

In estimating the cost of food few people make any allowance for the water it contains. This is important also in shipping. I recently mentioned an estimate that it requires twenty-eight vessels to carry the same amount of canned vegetables that may be shipped in a dry condition in one vessel. The difference in this case is, of course, not all water. Part of it is tin and the tin industry is an important one, that must be taken into consideration.

Here is a table showing the percentage of water in certain foods and the price per pound of the dried food they contain, estimated at rates prevalent on the Atlantic Coast in March, 1918:

Food	P. C. Water	Cost per Water free
Whole milk	84.9	$ .533
Cream	74.0	.844
Whole egg	72.7	1.40
Cream cheese	34.2	.60
Pork chop	52.9	.728
Smoked ham	40.3	.868
Beef steak	61.9	.786
Dried beef	54.3	.972
Smoked herring	34.8	.632
Salt cod	52.5	.572
Oysters	86.9	2.441
Bacon	18.8	.868
Butter	12.9	.575
White bread	35.3	.231
Whole wheat bread	38.4	.372
Parsnips	83.0	.235
Onions	87.6	.442
Potatoes	78.2	.253
Beans, dry	12.6	.128
String beans, green	89.2	.925
Apples	84.6	.259
Dried figs	18.8	.369
Raisins	14.6	.232
Canned fruit	77.2	.756
Bananas	75.3	.355
Peanuts	9.2	.285
Cocoanut (desiccated)	3.5	.288

Remember, however, that protein and carbohydrates and fats are not the only essential things in food. The fruit acids and organic salts that abound in fresh fruits and raw green stuff are necessaries of life—nature's medicines.

Luxuries.

Writing in the Saturday Evening Post on "Luxuries" Albert Atwood says, referring to the times of Charlemagne, a great and good prince:

"Not so many years ago man and wife had to eat off the same plate. In the whole realm of Charlemagne, the greatest emperor of his time, there were only two bed sheets, one table cloth and one pocket handkerchief. Light at night either within or without the house, sidewalks in cities, shoes, windows and countless other necessities of today were almost unknown. The Queen of France was the only woman in her country who had more than two linen chemises. Many of the greatest nobles had but two beds in their palaces of a hundred rooms, and rarely any chairs or carpets. So scarce were shirts that kings gave them as presents to one another."

On the other hand, in Rome, during the decadence:

"Even the Roman baths were for diversion rather than cleanliness, and they used perfume instead of soap. A Roman dandy committed suicide when he found he had only $400,000 left to spend on banquets. They watered their trees with wine, melted expensive pearls in liquor before drinking, changed their clothes eleven times during a banquet, despite the inconvenience, and ate only birds which had been taught to talk and sing.

"Roman luxury became merely criminal. To pay for it all Italy was pillaged, the provinces were plundered, and every foreign ally was compelled to contribute. It was like the madness on a ship about to sink, or in a besieged city."

The congested centers of the United States have not been altogether free from these symptoms, modified to suit American taste.

Use luxuries in moderation, but do not become a slave to them. The less wants a man has, the more independent he is. It is not possession, but enjoyment that gives pleasure. An elaborate banquet is of little use to a dyspeptic. Hunger is the finest sauce and it cannot be bought. It must be earned.

The Lost Art of Thinking.

Few people really think. They only think they think. Prof. A. F. Lange of the University of California said:

"My students can neither think nor speak. They have, in general, a low degree of power to seize the organizing thought of chapter or book; reckless thought—aviation without steering apparatus, and little experience in starting a train of thought and conducting it on a straight track to some terminus; paralyzing embarrassment on being left alone with a problem; lack of resourcefulness for new uses of old knowledge and great weakness in handling the forms of discourse. They have acquired a certain technique for dealing with a small area of facts, but not a reasoned, resourceful command of mental business method."

Here are some remarks by Sydney Smith on the subject of thinking:

"A little hard thinking will supply the place of a great deal of reading; and an hour or two spent in this manner sometimes leads you to conclusions which it would require a volume to establish. The mind advances in its train of thought as a restive colt proceeds on the road in which you wish to guide him; he is always running to one side or the other, and deviating from the proper path, to which it is your affair to bring him back.

"I have asked several men what passes in their minds when they are thinking; and I never could find any man who could think for two minutes together. Everybody has seemed to admit that it was a perpetual deviation from a particular path, and a perpetual return to it; which, imperfect as the operation is, is the only method in which we can operate with our minds to carry on any process of thought."

One of the main objects of this department is to teach the rare art of thinking, and to encourage those who have acquired it to think for themselves about the care of their bodies.

Do not delegate your royal prerogative of thinking to priest, physician, lawyer or writer.

Healing Power of Nature.

A generation ago physicians, following the example of Hippocrates talked much of "vis medicatrix naturae"—the healing power of nature. Today most of them are unwilling to give nature a chance, but aim rather to suppress all her efforts to expel morbid matter from the system and restore normal conditions.

The result is seen in the great increase of chronic diseases.

Starvation Foods.

Following is a statement by George A. Sykes, manager of the United Cereals Mills, Ltd., of Quincy, Ill.:

"For twenty years I have made a specialty of nutrition, food principles and the paramount question of diet as a factor in healthful condition. . . . The public is suffering from malnutrition and constipation, incidental to excessive use of white flour products, which can be termed generically masses of clogging, constipating starch, with a misleading value in the calorimeter, but upon which alone birds and animals slowly starve and die."

IS IT REASONABLE

to attempt to cure catarrh by taking medicine into the stomach? The slime in the head consists of germs which develop constantly. They do not only affect the head but they also affect the air passages and running into the stomach and being washed from there in the kidneys will eventually poison the whole system. A prominent member of the American Medical Association wrote as follows:—

"Altho it is against the rule to give testimonials, I wish to say to you nevertheless that I have had excellent success with Sagine Catarrh Cure and you can refer anybody to me. Your idea for constipation is also an excellent one as I know only too well the irritation caused by laxatives and physics. I have had fine success with the capsules."

EVERY HOUSEKEEPER SHOULD KNOW—

What to Give Vacationists. By Retta Badger.

[All feasible suggestions for this page will be very much appreciated. Any pictures of attractive corners of the home or practical things will be very acceptable. How to keep house with little labor is the slogan of today and we would like the ideas of readers on the subject. Any information regarding anything published or illustrated on this page very gladly given by the editor of it.]

YOUR friends will be leaving every day from now until September for their annual vacations and you can help to make the long looked for time a pleasant one by adding some little extra comfort to the summer outfit.

A summer gift is usually twice as much appreciated as the Christmas gift, for it is sure to be a thoroughly friendly present bestowed because the giver wanted to give it. Besides, it comes, usually, singly, and receives twice the attention or use that hosts of gifts do during the holiday season. The vacationing friend is certain to enjoy even the most brief outing because of an appropriate remembrance that appears unexpectedly.

Think, for instance, of your friend who teaches school—either one of your own chums, or your children's teacher—wouldn't she be pleased to receive films for her camera? The money that she saves this way might mean an extra trip up a mountain or across a lake, and the films which she is sure to want, gracefully furnish the little extra money. If she has dependents and has to economize on her wardrobe give her a pretty outing hat, or some lingerie that she can launder easily in her room. And by the way there are very useful aluminum washboards, that come now, especially for travelers and your most intimate friend or neighbor surely wouldn't turn up her nose at the gift of one. Serviceable little collapsible clothes lines equipped with small clothes pins have been designed for the hotel room of travelers, and come all ready for use in pretty gift boxes.

Camping friends would appreciate a folding hot water bottle in a case, a camp cook stove, in some locations a pint ice cream freezer, and in others a first aid or anti-venom outfit for snake bites.

Your friends who are going to spend their vacation in an automobile would be pleased with a pair of sun glasses, a thermos bottle, a travel diary, or a wrist watch with unbreakable glass, and if possible a radium dial.

At the beach a vacationing friend would welcome a parasol, a pretty bathing cap, a Turkish towel or a bathing suit bag with a waterproof lining.

For the man friend there is an ever increasing choice of articles. How about an indelible pencil, fountain pen, collapsible drinking cup or a pocket flashlight?

Most any traveler needs a roll-up. A cretonne apron made with pockets of all sizes to hold toilet articles is a joy to any woman who must dress in a sleeping car dressing-room. Small week end sets that only cost 25 cents, and that contain soap, tooth powder and talcum are useful gifts. A wash cloth in a rubber case will be welcomed by most anyone. Stationery, stamps, postal cards, books, magazines, the home paper forwarded during the term of absence, candy, crackers or a tennis racquet are other suggestions for gifts to make anyone's vacation more comfortable, beneficial and pleasant.

A few of the very useful gifts for the summer vacationist.

SUMMER SAUCES FOR PUDDINGS.

The summer pudding may be made more appetizing if served with a fruit sauce, instead of milk or cream, chocolate, egg or flour and sugar sauces. Besides, it helps patriotically to save on sauces. A blanc mange, cornstarch, Rebecca pudding, farina, rice, cottage or bread pudding is nice with a fruit sauce. Crushed strawberries, raspberries, loganberries, pineapple, apricots and peaches all make delicious sauces and give enough flavor to any pudding so flavoring extract may be omitted. If a teaspoonful of lemon juice is added to any fruit mixture the flavor of the fruit is brought out still further. For the jelly dessert made from prepared gelatine, a fruit sauce is almost indispensable. It disguises the "gluey" taste, and will even reconcile men to a dessert that most men call "frip-frap." A combination of chopped pineapple, bananas, strawberries and nuts, served on cool gelatine, makes a dainty, tempting dessert for a hot day.

methods of modern efficiency. All is standardized, and it goes on of operation from the rough pistols packed up in boxes ready to France. The parts start in of the great room I have described, and pass through machine after machine and hand after hand as though on an endless belt, each machine and each man doing their special work until at the end the parts come out polished and ready to go into the pistol. They are in this condition when they reach the lower end of the room, where is the assembling department, in which they are fitted together into completed pistols. After this each gun is tested or targeted, and it is then soaked in oil and packed up in pine boxes ready for shipment as the Bureau of Ordnance directs.

Before this is done everything is carefully inspected by expert officers of the War Department, so that there is absolutely no chance of a bad weapon getting into a shipment. The inspectors examine the parts as they go through. They have each pistol fired to see that it functions, by which is meant that its machinery moves all right. They test the parts to see if they are interchangeable, and out of every so many pistols one is shot a thousand times or more as a proof of its accuracy. So far the number rejected have been only a small fraction of 1 per cent. of those made. In fact, of the many thousands turned out within the past two months, only two have not stood the test of the government inspectors.

to Central America. In itself, this was a great expense. The tree was felled, and hauled to the shore. To their utter consternation, they found that the schooner was inadequate as it was. It had to be practically rebuilt to enable them to safely transport the tree to New York.

The expense of this delay was serious because of the fact that all charter parties allow the owners of the vessel 10 cents per ton a day on the net tonnage for each day's delay. As the boat was 327 tons, this amounted to about $30 a day.

After further expenditure of much time, money and skill, the boat with its precious burden reached New York. The tree attracted a vast amount of attention and speculation as to its great value. Then, when the tree was cut into lumber, it was found that the heart was so imperfect that it was almost worthless. Ten times the number of feet of ordinary logs could have been bought for the same amount of money. So, instead of a fortune, there were these big bills to meet.

To return to the small companies operating small sailing vessels. The upkeep of this class of craft is enormous. There are really only about ten months in the year that they can be sailed because going to sea between August 20th, to the first of November, is so hazardous on account of the hurricane season. If protected by marine insurance the rates are so high that it is better to spend this time in generally overhauling the vessels.

The loss in perishable fruits is also an item, during the course of a year. There are certain to be some cargoes that have to be thrown overboard. To Honduras is over 1000 miles. Our boats have made the trip more than once in five days, but generally it is a little longer than this.

On the Whole a Profitable Business.

In spite of the above hardships we have managed to keep our company going. A few very good trips pay for the very bad ones, the average is fair.

It is a fact that these countries are rich, also that their riches are almost entirely awaiting development. Because the countries themselves have no shipping facilities the United States must take the initiative. The European war has but accentuated the fact that now is the most opportune time in the history of trade with South and Central America. The impediments in the way of foreign trading have placed these countries in contradistinction as most accessible and desirable for commercial activities.

The above mentioned difficulties are facts to be encountered and mastered by those engaging in any business enterprise.

CHICAGO, June 9.—S. J. Konenkamp, president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, admitted today that he had recently been summoned before telegraphers in Room No. 891 of the Masonic Temple. Both the Commercial Telegraphers' Union and the Order of Railroad Telegraphers were represented, E. J. Thomas, chairman of the general committee of the O.R.T., representing the latter body.

Beans on Villa Sites.

PARTLY within and almost surrounded by the far-flung annexed territory of Los Angeles is a 3000-acre ranch, two-thirds of which is regularly devoted to the production of beans. The bean crop from this suburban farm, which belongs to the Rodeo Land and Water Company of this city, is said to have sold last year, for $210,000, the ranch includes and surrounds, the exclusive residential suburb, .Beverly Hills.

Six giant tractors, fifty horses and sixty men have been for several weeks busily engaged in planting and cultivating the 1918 crop of the ranch, which, the owners believe, will exceed, in quantity and quality, that of any previous year.

The manager of the Rodeo ranch has (to use his own expression) "farmed all over the world," and all his life has grown beans. "You don't know beans," his neighbors say, "unless you have met and talked with J. W. Hogg." He has raised beans in Scotland (his native land,) Africa and Mexico, as well as in many parts of the United States.

ONLY LIMAS GROWN.

Mr. Hogg has selected lima beans, to the exclusion of all other varieties, for culture upon the Rodeo properties. This, he says, is because of their adaptability to the soil and climate, determined by experimental plantings of several varieties.

The bean fields are everywhere in the Beverly Hills district, from Coldwater Canyon to Pico street and from the Sherman city limits to the Country Club, but they are not continuous, for they are broken up by paved and palm-lined boulevards, beautiful private grounds and magnificent homes.

A tractor crew working just ahead of the planters.

The Rodeo company, it should be explained, is primarily in the real estate business and is merely farming its big land holdings until they shall have been disposed of. The shops and garage of the ranch are just behind the Pacific Electric depot at Beverly Hills, which is, therefore, "headquarters." Mr. Hogg's duties, in fact, include acting as marshal, fire chief, police force, garage manager and city engineer for Beverly Hills as well as agricultural director of the ranch operations. He is here, there and everywhere in his roadster, and, in addition to his other duties, finds time to farm a "little place of 500 acres" of his own "on the side."

MEXICAN SEED USED.

"We procured our bean seed last year from Mexico," he said the other day, in discussing the ranch. "We have found that seed brought from below the line produces a crop of better quality and uniformity than any we can buy locally. The 1917 crop showed such an improvement in size over the original Mexican seed that any planters will scarcely handle the beans this spring."

Mr. Hogg could not give the name of the variety, saying that the seed came from stock which had been grown in Mexico by the natives and was not sold under any trade name. These beans, he said, produce an average crop of about fifteen sacks to the acre, the land having been continuously cropped for years with no rotation.

About 1000 acres of the ranch is used for grain and hay. Enough barley hay is cut and baled to feed the ranch teams, and the grain for the work animals is also produced on the place. An experimental field of alfalfa, comprising sixty acres, which will be irrigated from a deep well, has recently been seded, and it is planned to put still more of the land into alfalfa.

THE FARM POWER.

The tractor "battery" of the ranch consists of two Holt "forty-fives," two Holt "seventy-fives" and two C. L. Best "Sixties." The company also operates a sixty-five-horse power Buffalo-Pitts steamer. The tractors are usually operated together to facilitate their management by the field foreman and "trouble-shooter." The sight of five or six of these monsters working in one field and dragging behind them big "gangs" of implements is an inspiring one. Each tractor has a crew of two men, and all the crews are in charge of the field foreman, who is always on hand to see that no delays occur, and who (being himself an expert mechanic) is prepared to "shoot" trouble of any kind. This foreman takes the men to and from their work in his car.

The tractors are run from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., with a short stop at noon. Although they are equipped with lights, they do not plow at night because of the complaint of some of the residents of the district that the "barking" of the engines disturbs their slumbers.

In fact, the protest has extended still farther, and the company is now about to equip all the machines with mufflers for daylight work. One of the "caterpillars" has already been silenced by a curious home-made muffler, fastened to the top of the cab. If this device, which was made in the ranch shops, proves satisfactory it is proposed to use it on all of the machines.

The oil, distillate and gasoline consumed on the ranch amount to thousands of gallons annually. In addition to the tractors

Hens on the Farm.

EVERY farm in the United States should support at least 100 hens and from every one of these hens there should be obtained annually at least 100 eggs, according to a recent statement of one of the government's poultry experts. This, he points out, would be easily possible, and if made a reality, would constitute a military asset not to be ignored, besides making for the prosperity of the farmers themselves.

Poultry raisers generally are not particularly optimistic, what with the high cost of feed and the not at all commensurate prices to be realized either for meat or egg production. With the average farmer, however, the case is different. One hundred hens on the ordinary farm is not a particularly big contract. There is hardly a farm in the country (using the term in the generally accepted sense, as distinguished from the California habit of calling every patch on which anything is planted a "farm,") that could not support this number of hens largely on waste material and without an outlay of cost sufficient to make the venture unprofitable.

One hundred hens to a farm is, in fact, considerably less than the average number per farm in many of the main poultry producing sections of the country. It is also an average that could probably be easily attained in many sections where the number per farm is now much less than this figure. One hundred eggs per hen, which is far below what could be obtained with proper encouragement of fowls, is considerably more than the average egg production the country over. Let the statistician tell the rest.

There are, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, approximately [illegible] farms in the United States. A hundred hens to the farm would mean 600,000,000 hens. With 100 eggs to the hen, the production from the farms alone would, therefore, be 60,000,000,000 specimens of hen fruit a year. This is indeed worth thinking about as a war contribution, if nothing else. It is also worth noting that from the point of view of the farmer, at least, this production would almost certainly represent a profitable business, under the prices likely to be obtainable for eggs.

Hens on the farms would seem to be one phase of the poultry industry that could really stand on its own feet and which would not seem to offer much prospect of [illegible] conditions.

Ask the Dealer.

SURROUNDED, as we are, with varied sources of agricultural information, including the United States Department of Agriculture, with its far-reaching branches, the State universities and experiment stations, the county advisers, and the printed results of hundreds of students and experimenters, we are apt to lose sight of one of the most valuable and accessible sources of farming knowledge—the implement dealer.

While most dealers in tractors and farm implements do not claim to be general agricultural and scientific experts, they constantly see, hear about and discuss the successes, practical experiences of the farmers among whom they work. Without in the least belittling the value of our theoretical informers some of whom, such as the county advisers, are also in direct contact with the farmers, there is every reason to recognize and take advantage of the implement dealer's knowledge, experience and willingness to help.

A man who has traveled extensively and continuously for years among the farmers of a comparatively small territory, has talked over their problems with them, sold them their implements and watched these implements in use in the fields, cannot fail to have assimilated a store of valuable information. That some of the dealers do not, themselves, realize the value of their experience, and do not always make the most use of it in advancing their business, is undoubtedly true. The average practical farmer, seeking useful information, but wary of new and theoretical ideas, appreciates and receives with the greatest interest suggestions arising from actual experiences of his neighbors. While a theory may arouse but passing interest, an actual accomplishment arrests his immediate attention.

The implement dealer's establishment generally is a veritable clearing house, for the "swapping" of ideas, and thus becomes a potent factor in advancing the agricultural methods and prosperity of his territory. Tactful use of the "tips" he receives almost every day, will not only serve to cement the friendship of his customers, but will relieve him of responsibility for results. For instance, the dealer may learn that Farmer Jones has successfully grown a new variety of beans by different cultural methods than those generally practiced in the community. Rather than advise Farmer Brown to do the same, he may merely recount as a matter of news the fact that Mr. Jones has secured a good crop of the beans, and Mr. Brown, if he is wide-awake, will do the rest by asking questions.

In the same manner, the patriotic farmer who believes he has discovered a labor-saving device or a new method which will increase production, will often look to his dealer to spread the gospel to his neighbors. Farmers will sometimes accept and make use of an idea received indirectly, which they would resent if suggested by the originator. At least this is the experience of one local dealer.

The successful implement dealer should be, he says, a student of psychology, wise in the ways of men, tactful, and willing to pass along a useful idea. The successful farmer is also likely to be the man who absorbs and puts to work the ideas of others. Therefore, the farmer and his dealer may work together, not only with mutual benefit, but to the advancement of the community, the State and the nation. For ideas, no matter where they originate, will, if they have practical value, spread rapidly through a broad territory.

And, Mr. Farmer, the next time you are a little puzzled as to just what to do and when to do it, and want some quick action, telephone the man who sold you your plows and tractor. There is a strong probability that he will have met with a condition similar to years, or have seen your problem solved on some other man's farm, and will be glad to pass along the information. Perhaps you have never realized just how wise a man your implement dealer is!

INCREASED FARMING COSTS.

It is a common observation in business that in a period of rising prices the earlier part of the era is the more profitable because, while the cost of production is also increasing, it lags behind the rise in price. As the rise in price begins to slow down, the cost of production tends to catch up, thus narrowing the margin of profit. This calls for more skillful handling of business. This general business principle applies to farming as well as to other business. The farmers' statement, "Give us the season and the price and we can make the profits," was fairly well complied with in many sections last year. In some sections almost any kind of farming paid at least some profit. It is to be expected that during the next few years margins of profit will be narrower and more skill in handling the farm business will be required.

FOR RED CROSS.

The first crate of cantaloupes received from the Imperial Valley, was sold at auction at the local Produce Exchange for the benefit of the Red Cross. The sum of $168 was realized. The first shipment, which consisted of this lone crate, arrived in Los Angeles, May 15

VALLEY SUBURB'S BEAN CROP TO BE THIRTY THOUSAND ACRES.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

THOUGH this is only the second season for the extensive planting of beans in San Fernando Valley, the marked success of the experiment has already assured a promising future for the industry in the great farming suburb of Los Angeles. Last year approximately 17,000 acres were planted. This year the total will be around 30,000 acres. When it is considered that all the acreage is within the city limits of Los Angeles, the achievement becomes all the more unique.

California produced last year 8,035,000 bushels of beans. This was 44 per cent. of the entire crop of the United States and exceeded by 5 per cent. the combined output of the next five States, Michigan, New York, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. A concentrated food of the highest nutritive value, in convenient form to ship, no contribution to the food supply of the nation and the Allies, say government officials, could be of more effective benefit at this time. The State has in this industry a very appreciable "bit" to contribute, and Southern California is certain to respond to this opportunity for food service by speeding up the bean production for this season to still more impressive figures.

An additional demand for production in this field has also come to the fore in the government request, as stated by Carl McStay, special representative of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from Washington for 1,000,000 cases of pork and beans to be packed by the Southern California canneries. With the installation of the government system of zone supply-purchasing, every inducement will be offered growers to raise as much as possible of these products locally. Fair prices to the canner and the grower will be assured.

There is still time for an even greater increase of bean acreage in this locality that has already been planned and a campaign for this purpose may be instituted through the local farm centers. The advantages of an all-the-year-around employment for the local canneries, to be kept at work on local products, is obvious. The question of varieties desirable for the canneries and adaptable for local production is one still to be worked out between the canner and the producer.

The climatic conditions of California seem especially fitted for the growing of beans, of which there are some fifteen staple varieties on the markets. The fact that these varieties vary greatly as to requirements of temperature and humidity, while being readily adaptable to any productive soil, give wide range to the possibilities of bean growing, though impelling a careful choice of kinds.

In San Fernando Valley last year some 10,000 acres of Henderson Bush limas were grown, with a large acreage also in Teparies and scattering amounts of Black Eyes, Lady Washington, Red Kidney and large limas. Here the problem of varieties was largely decided by the experience of Ventura growers, whose helpful advice was of great benefit in the successful launching of this new industry. Extensive experiments have also been carried on through the agricultural departments of the valley schools.

SCHOOLS INTERESTED.

At the Van Nuys High School, where R. W. Merrick is in charge of the agricultural work, a large portion of the school acreage was last year planted to beans. This year the bean field was increased by the use of the athletic field. The boys practiced careful seed selection and were able to sell their seed to the ranchers of the community for this season's planting at a profit of about $150, the hand-picked seed bringing as high as 25 cents per pound. Interest in this work is shown by the bean seed contest held at the school, in which seventy-six boys participated. Henderson Bush lima was the variety with which most of the experiments were carried on here.

San Fernando High School is undertaking similar experiments this year, Tepary beans being chosen for the greater part of the demonstrations. With the interested co-operation of the ranchers, much can be done in this way along the lines of increased production and improved quality. A wider range of varieties suitable to local conditions may also be discovered. The value of such educational investigation is of great moment to the growth of the industry, says Mr. Clower, head of the agricultural department of the school.

Green manure for bean lands.

The photograph was taken on the ranch of W. P. Whitsett near Van Nuys and shows the plowing of a heavy cover crop preparatory to bean planting. Mr. Whitsett (who is sitting on the plow-seat) wants to know just how much value preliminary fertilization has in bean culture and has planted two adjacent tracts to the legumes, one with and one without a cover crop turned under.

In the immediate vicinity of San Fernando about 2700 acres are being planted to beans. T. J. Walker, with 300 acres; Ludlow Bros., with 200; W. J. Millen, with 100, and E. S. Ford, with ninety acres, are the largest single planters. A considerable acreage here is to be planted between the rows in young lemon and orange groves, where the practice is believed to be doubly beneficial as aiding in soil fertilization, in addition to bringing a present profit from the ground.

EXPERIMENTS TRIED.

Though, in most cases, the local ranchers have made no effort at fertilization of the soil in preparation for bean planting, the sentiment is strong among a number of prominent growers that such methods will prove most profitable. T. J. Walker of San Fernando followed the plan of using a green cover crop, which was plowed under in advance of bean planting last season, and reports that he considered the experiment a markedly successful one. He also used inoculation.

W. P. Whitsett of Van Nuys is carrying through an experiment this year consisting of two adjacent plots to be planted to beans. On the one ten acres in size he has plowed under a heavy cover crop consisting of vetch and melilotus clover, the seed of which he inoculated. In all other respects the treatment of the two pieces of ground has been alike. He estimates that the additional cost has been about $20 an acre. He will keep accurate records, which may prove of great value to other ranchers of the valley in case he is able to show a material increase of yield.

Last season Mr. Whitsett kept full account of a forty-five-acre tract of Tepary beans, crediting $15 per acre for rent, and

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS. IN PARAGRAPHS.

WESTMORELAND.—Pigs must have their morning bath. Well-bred pigs are better than scrubs. A well-bred hog eats less to gain more. Pigs need a variety of food, as great a variety as the genus homo. Green feed is indispensable to a good appetite.

These are conclusions reached by Doris Leach of Westmoreland, Imperial county, after she had won the prize for raising more pounds of pork at less expense than any other member of the boys' and girls' pig club. Miss Leach's prize hogs, Gen. Pershing and Gen. Joffre, sold for 22½ cents per pound to the Cudahy Packing Company of Los Angeles, after gaining for their owner prizes aggregating $123.50.

The "generals" were taken over by Miss Leach when wee piglets not yet weaned. They started in the feeding contest when they weighed thirty-two pounds apiece, on December 22, last. When they "weighed in" April 18, they topped the scales at 245 and 220 pounds, Gen. Pershing being the largest. Under the expert care of the high school girl, Gen. Pershing gained one and two-fifth pounds every day. She put her services and a average of 4 cents per day into each pig.

"My pigs' feed," Miss Leach says, "consisted of skim milk, milo maize, tankage and a little green barley every day. I gave them their bath each morning. About two weeks after the beginning of the contest I moved their pen onto the green feed. I tried to drive them out into the field, but they refused to be driven. I went ahead and they followed. Regularity of feeding is very important. The pigs need good clean water. They enjoy it as much as a human being. Shade is essential in the summer time."

(The cover illustration of today's Farm and Tractor Section shows Miss Leach with the infant pigs as they were when she "took them to raise."—Ed.)

BRAWLEY.—Roy Gonder of the No. 5 water district is one of those who believe that there will be at least 50,000 acres of wheat grown in Imperial Valley next year, and that in subsequent years it will displace every other grain crop. He reports a harvest of forty-four bushels per acre on seventy-five acres, a net income of $90 per acre. He is clearing his field for a crop of milo maize which he will plant next month.

ZELZAH.—The Ennis-Brown Company of Sacramento has just closed a deal with the Zelzah bean growers to erect a bean cleaner and warehouse at this place. The plant when completed will cost about $25,000. Over 3000 acres of beans have already been contracted for the new concern, and it is believed that 5000 acres will be contracted before the plant is completed.

OXNARD.—Prospects for the tomato canning season of the McCrosky Packing Company are so encouraging that F. B. McCrosky, manager of the plant, is now endeavoring to interest ranchers in the Hueneme section in the growing of winter peas. If sufficient acreage can be secured, he will install equipment for handling this crop next winter. Local climate and soil conditions would permit the planting of peas as soon as beets or beans are harvested, and it is believed that the crop could be grown without irrigation. The growing of peas would enrich the land, they being a leguminous crop, and the crop would also enrich the rancher to an extent of some $100 an acre, it is believed.

VAN NUYS.—B. R. Holloway, proprietor of the Holly Poultry ranch, has been elected director of the Poultry Breeders' Association of Southern California. He will act as representative of the White Leghorn breeders and will have a part in arranging for the large exhibit the association will have at the Liberty Fair next October.

LINDSAY.—Every orange grove under the system of the Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation District now can be irrigated. Water has been turned into all the main canals, following a series of tests which showed them equal to all demands. Irrigating work will be started early this year, due to unusual lack of rain last fall.

VISALIA.—Plans are being completed for the extension of the Visalia-West rural telephone lines which will connect ranches lying along the Visalia-Hanford unit of the State highway with the local exchange. About 100 subscribers will be affected. The cost of the line, which will be met with assessments on property owners, has been estimated at $5000.

EXETER.—Apricots in the Exeter district this year promise to make 20 to 30 per cent. more than a normal crop. As far as can be told at this time, the quality of the fruit will be very high. Extensive additions are being made to local canneries to take care of the coming production.

YUCAIPA.—A larger acreage of potatoes has been planted in the valley this year than ever before. Much of it has been intercropped between the rows of young apple trees, although the amount of land given over entirely to the crop is large. The growers who have planted between the trees are having exceptional success. E. E. Chinn, a grower on the South Bench, has fifty acres planted to potatoes, twenty acres in one piece and the remainder between the apple trees. He expects a much larger crop this year than last, when he had the largest yield of the valley. Mr. Chinn now has 1000 sacks of seed potatoes in cold storage which he will use for the fall planting. So many growers lost their fall crops last year because they did not have proper seed potatoes. The orchards do not suffer from the intercropping, for the trees have put out the heaviest bloom yet this season. The apple crop is expected to be more than double that of last year and to take care of it an organization is now being formed.

VENTURA.—Members of the Farm Bureau held their annual farm bureau picnic at Foster Park June 1. A special barbacued dinner was served, the meat consisting of lambs and prime beef raised and donated by Walter Sexton, head of the Farm Bureau of Directors. Interesting talks were delivered by Prof. J. W. Gilmore, head of the department of the University of California, on "Rotation Problems in California Agriculture," by Prof. W. E. Packard, on "The Work of the Farm Bureau in California," and by Mrs. H. H. Neel on "Woman's Work in the Farm Bureau."

WARNING FOR ALL PEAR TREE OWNERS.

The following communication to The Times Farm and Traction Section from H. C. Tracy, teacher of horticulture in Hollywood High School, is timely:

"Pear blight has appeared in Los Angeles. The bees—little Huns—are spreading it like wild-fire.

"Pear blight is the worst of the bacterial diseases affecting trees. This year it will destroy practically all the fruit on your tree. Next year it will kill your tree and infect every tree within four miles of you—or as much farther as the bees choose to carry it.

"You'll know it has hit your place when you see a young twig (usually one with blossoms or young fruit on) wither and turn black as if singed by flame. There will be a sticky exudation, too, after a while, from the dying stems; this is sweetish, so the bees take it and spread it to more blossoms, which go the same way in a few days.

"Last year I hadn't a trace of it in my home orchard. This year my trees were clean, up to ten days or so ago. Then I got absorbed elsewhere and the blight got the start of me. It has gone through all four of my trees already, for all of 75 per cent. of the fruit.

"The remedy?

"It is simple, but trying; like amputation. In fact that is what it is. You've got to cut it out. Cut back to sound tissue. Cut out all of it. And sterilize the tool after each cut. Perhaps the tissue wasn't quite sound. Corrosive sublimate solution (one part to one thousand parts of water) is the safest for the tree, but not so safe to have around; so one may use kerosene and dip the saw or shears in it after each amputation.

"Don't forget to burn the infected branches at once."

PLANTS BELLADONNA.

Having contracted to deliver his crop to a Los Angeles drug house, Chris De Soto, a Tulare county farmer, has, according to a report from that district, set out 30,000 belladonna plants on his place. The soil and climatic conditions for the drug plant are said to have been passed on by experts before Mr. De Soto undertook the contract.

MAY BUILD PLANT HERE.

The Santa Ana Compounding Company of Santa Ana, which manufactures a preparation for the poisoning of gophers, ground squirrels, rats and other rodents, is planning to establish a plant in Los Angeles within the near future. The compound is known as "Jackson's Pocket Gopher Killer" and is the invention of S. C. Jackson, who first started making it in Kansas several years ago. The poison, under Mr. Jackson's process, is boiled into raisins that have been punctured by a special machine. An oil that is declared to attract rodents also one of the ingredients. and his associate, Lee A. vinced that the growing conservation justifies their manufacture of their scale.

A RATIONAL SYSTEM NEEDED IN THE PRUNING OF LEMON TREES.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON.

[illegible] in Citriculture, University of California, and Assistant Farm Adviser for Los Angeles County. (Written Especially for The Times Farm and Tractor Section.)

The subject of pruning citrus trees, particularly the lemon, is one upon which growers have never been able to agree. For twenty years and more this subject has been argued and discussed at various meetings of fruit growers and a large number of so-called systems of pruning have been advocated and used for a time only to be discarded or changed as experience has revealed their merits or demerits. Indeed, the fact that some growers who have not pruned at all have obtained fairly satisfactory results has raised the question in the minds of many citrus men as to whether citrus trees require pruning.

It is quite true that in California orange and lemon trees, if left unpruned, will bear and will sometimes bear large quantities of fruit, but that is a gift of nature and due to our unexcelled climate. Almost any tree if left alone will bear in California. Lemon trees will literally bear themselves to death and require thinning of the fruit. [illegible] to exhaustive investigations on the subject, the most important factors influencing the fruiting habit in California are low atmospheric humidity, high summer temperatures and intense solar radiation. These attributes are precisely those which characterize our long dry growing season. Therefore it is quite obvious that we do not prune primarily for fruit in California. We prune for reasons of convenience in gathering our fruit, for convenience in fumigating our trees and for the development and maintenance of long-lived trees.

We hear a great deal these days about trees going back and the necessity of renewing them, and this necessity is largely attributed to the old age of the trees. The writer ventures the assertion that, properly pruned and cared for otherwise, we need not expect any deterioration in our citrus trees for many years yet. On the authority of H. J. Webber, dean of the Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside, there are lemon trees in other citrus districts of the world 100 years old and more and still bearing.

There are many reasons why lemon trees should be pruned. The first is that, on account of their vigorous growing habit, the trees become too large and unwieldly if unpruned, which considerably increases the cost of picking the fruit and fumigating the trees. The second is that, if unpruned they become so dense as to exclude light from the interior of the tree with the result that all the fruit is borne on the outside limbs where it is exposed to sunburn, wind injury and other adverse climatic conditions. It is quite possible by pruning the tree so as to encourage the production of inside fruit to carry more and finer fruit on a small tree than on a large unpruned tree. The third and most important reason for pruning lemon trees is that, if left alone, many lemon trees grow up to a wood which is undesirable in that it fruits sparsely and deteriorates.

UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES.

Lemon trees, together with certain other cultivated plants, possess the remarkable property called "polymorphism;" that is, they produce different kinds of growth on the same tree. This is not a matter of bud variation in the ordinary sense of the word and should not be confused with it. It is well known that citrus trees are very prone to give rise to bud sports, but no two bud sports are alike, whereas there are several distinct classes of growth regularly produced on lemon trees and this condition is known as polymorphism.

A rational system of lemon pruning should be based on a knowledge of what kinds of growth one can expect in a lemon tree, what can be expected from these different kinds, and a judicious selection to the most desirable sort. One of the first to recognize the fact that lemon trees are polymorphic was J. P. Englehart of [illegible], who has pruned and lived with lemon trees for more than twenty-five years. Mr. Englehart, who comes from a family of horticulturists and nurserymen, has recognized that there are different kinds of wood in lemon trees, and the very satisfactory results which he has achieved as a pruner have largely been due to his many years of observation as to what kinds of wood are best.

KINDS OF GROWTH.

For convenience we may divide the kinds of growth into three classes, on one extreme the true fruit wood, on the other sucker wood, and in between an intermediate class. This latter class really contains several kinds of growth which are intermediate in nature between the fruit and sucker growth. Nearly every grower recognizes fruit wood as that slow-growing pendant, small-leaved, fine-stemmed type of growth which fruits early and bears the best quality of fruit. Similarly, most growers know sucker growth as that vigorous, fast-growing, upright, large-leaved, coarse-grained type which bears fruit only on the end and sooner or later loses its fruiting habit. The intermediate class gives the most trouble. In this class Mr. Englehart recognizes two kinds, "white wood" and "wood growth," both of which are intermediate in nature, being more upright, vigorous and coarse-grained than the fruit wood.

If a tree is allowed to grow to sucker-wood it may be expected to grow fast and rank. Trees of this kind of wood make large trees in a short time. They do not bear early, but look fine and make an excellent advertisement for the real estate agent. As such trees age they may be expected to bear satisfactory crops for a time, but the tree soon becomes unwieldy and shows a poor habit of growth. The fruit is borne on the end of fishpole-like canes which bend over with the weight of the fruit and then grow more fishpoles on top, which in turn bear fruit at the end and bend down. The fruit is whipped about by the wind and is wind-scarred. Moreover, trees from this kind of growth deteriorate relatively early, and there is some evidence that the fruit they bear is of poorer quality than that from fruit wood. This kind of growth is undesirable and should be vigorously excluded.

Trees made up of fruit wood grow slowly and do not make the fine-looking trees that are produced from sucker wood, but they are precocious and bear early. They bear the best quality of fruit, large amounts of it, and we have no knowledge of how long they may be expected to bear satisfactory crops. Our experience has been too short. Many full-bearing trees of this kind of wood are still bearing excellent crops, with no signs of deterioration. Moreover, the trees are compact and easy to handle. This kind of growth is desirable and should be retained in the tree.

Trees allowed to grow to intermediate types of wood are in the main of the same general nature as those formed from sucker wood, but are somewhat more variable. Some trees of this kind are much better than sucker-wood trees and some are apparently worse. Mr. Englehart believes that "white wood" is the worst kind of all. Suffice it to say that all kinds of intermediate wood are undesirable and should be avoided when possible.

When all three kinds are permitted to grow in the same tree there is a certain amount of competition between them, the sucker wood always getting the best of the bargain. Fundamentally, all sucker growth is parasitic and slowly but surely starves the rest of the tree.

RECLAIMING SUCKER WOOD.

Sucker wood can be induced to fruit in a number of ways. There are three factors which can act to cause this change. One is light. When suckers reach the light they branch out and fruit. If the tree is kept open enough to allow light to filter in, suckers will branch and fruit. Another factor is horizontal position. As long as a sucker is upright it does not tend to branch, but when it is bent over, either by the weight of the fruit on the end or by other means, it will branch out and fruit. Checking the rapidity of sap flow seems to bear a relation to inducing sucker wood to bear. By repeated severe pruning suckers can be caused to branch and bear fruit. The sap flow is cut down and the vigorous growth tendency checked.

Advantage has been taken of this fact that sucker growth can be curbed and induced to fruit by many lemon growers who use this kind of growth to form the main framework of the tree and then select to the best wood which is produced on the main limbs. In this way the grower can exercise some control over the framework formation of his trees, whereas, if he rigorously prunes out everything but the best fruit wood, framework formation is largely fortuitous. Also by thus being able to form the scaffold branches a somewhat stronger tree can on the average be obtained than by the other system.

BUD SELECTION.

It can be readily seen that, since there are different kinds of growth on the same trees, there is a possibility of getting different kinds of buds from the same tree. A lack of recognition of this fact has worked untold injury to our lemon industry. Buds from these different kinds of wood behave differently. Buds from the best fruit wood tend to produce trees of that kind and the same is true of buds from sucker and intermediate growth. Until comparatively recently buds have been

"SPUDS" FROM SEED TO SACK NOW HANDLED BY MACHINERY.

FROM the cutting of the seed to the delivery of sacked and sorted potatoes to the market or shipping point America's "spud" crop is now largely dependent upon machinery. Modern equipment is considered indispensable by the commercial potato-grower, who could not, in fact, compete on the market, under present conditions, if forced to depend upon hand labor.

Commencing with the preparation of the seed, we find the farmer employing a simple, yet effective, little hand-lever cutter, which, with its thin, sharp knives, slices the potatoes into chunks of the right shape and size for the planters

Digging "spuds" isn't the back-breaking job it used to be.

Present-day potato planters may be divided into two types—the "one-man" and "two-man" machines. Advocates of the one-man planters, of which the only operator is the driver, and which are supposed automatically to drop the seed, cite the high cost of labor as the greatest disadvantage of the other type, and assert that it is more economical to use a little more seed and even miss an occasional hill than to depend upon an extra man at planting time. In fact, the manufacturers of the one-man machines claim that they have reached a degree of perfection which makes their action almost perfect.

Those who prefer the two-man type, on the other hand, claim that the machine is 100 per cent. certain in its operation when manned by a man as driver, and a boy, on the rear seat, as assistant. It is the duty of the boy to place chunks of seed, by hand, in the divisions of the plate which are missed by the mechanism, and to throw out imperfect pieces, replacing them with good ones. The manufacturers point out that the benefits to be derived from this type of machine are a perfect stand, no missing hills and no wasted seed. They also claim that the device will save from one to two bushels to the acre of seed potatoes. They show that if a one-man planter only misses 5 per cent. of the hills, and if the crop averages 150 bushels to the acre at 50 cents a bushel, the loss would be $7.50 an acre. Meanwhile, as the controversy rages between the manufacturers, the farmer must decide for himself which type he prefers; both have strong selling points, and the buyer must be governed not only by his impressions, but by his farm conditions.

One make of planter has the driver's

TWO TRACTORS ON AVERAGE FARM ADVOCATED BY MANUFACTURER.

"THE all-motor, no-horse farm is coming," said H. M. Wallis, prominent Wisconsin tractor manufacturer, during a recent visit to Los Angeles, "but not as many people have pictured it. I do not think that the tractor manufacturers will evolve a true all-purpose machine, capable of doing the heavy plowing and belt work of a good-sized farm, as well as the lighter cultivating. The power farm of the future will, in my estimation, include in its equipment not only a large machine, suitable for the heaviest duties that will be required of it, but a small motor cultivator, for running the lighter belt machinery and cultivating between the rows of crops.

"It is clearly impracticable to combine in one machine the features necessary to perform all these duties, except for the small farm where there is not likely to be any really heavy work. To use a big machine for light work is a waste of power and fuel, even if the tread and general design of the tractor were suitable. Moreover, it is as unreasonable to expect that one tractor should perform all kinds of duties as to say that one motor vehicle should replace carriage and draft horses, taking the place of both the automobile and the motor truck."

Mr. Wallis, who is president of the Wallis Cub Tractor Company and the J. I. Case Plow Works of Racine, Wisconsin, was accompanied by his sales manager, Earl L. Woods, who stated that arrangements had been completed for a strong representation of these lines in Los Angeles, under the supervision of an experienced and capable tractor man, who is expected to come from the East to take charge of the local branch.

DEMONSTRATIONS ABROAD.

His tractor, Mr. Wallis said, was one of the thirty American makes which were represented in the "Scottish trials" or demonstrations held at Edinburgh, Glasgow and Perth, Scotland, in the fall of 1917. The American machines, according to Mr. Wallis, excelled in performance and reliability the foreign makes which were demonstrated, and completely justified the assertions of American engineers that the industry in America has secured a long lead over foreign competition.

The most conspicuous American achievement, he said, was the general use of power-lift plows, which are a curiosity in the old country. The scheme in Great Britain has been to use a hand-lift plow with a man to work the levers. If more than one gang was used a man was provided for each. Such crude methods, however, are rapidly being displaced, Mr. Wallis asserts, by the American way of doing it, popularized by imports of American-made machinery.

"The foreign demand is very heavy," the manufacturer said, "and we have many machines working in England, Spain and France. I see nothing but a bright future for the tractor industry. Even were the domestic trade saturated (and it has only been touched,) the foreign countries would offer tremendous selling possibilities."

American demonstrations, he declared, might well be conducted more along the lines of the Scottish trials. The ground selected for working was not level, Mr. Wallis pointed out, but "rough and tough." Some of it was sod which had not been touched by a plow for a hundred years. No restrictions were placed upon the entrants as to what equipment they should pull, or what work the machines should do. The event, he observed, was more of a comparative test than a contest, conducted like a sporting event. The machines were put through their paces by the demonstrators, who, of course, attempted to show off their engines to the best possible advantage; the spectators then judged actual performances. A fuel, known as "paraffin," which, Mr. Wallis said, has a lower specific gravity than kerosene was used in the trials. The official report of the observers contains the observation that, although "petrol" was used for starting, the engines performed very satisfactorily on paraffin, but would probably deliver better results, if after the war, petrol could regularly be used for fuel.

Other conclusions of the observers were that the weight of the tractor for average Scottish farms should not exceed 3000 pounds, that "spuds" or small blocks properly arranged on the drive wheels, are preferable to either spikes or bars, that the factors of accessibility and protection of working parts are of prime importance, and that speeds of from two and one-half to four miles an hour forward, with reverse, are most generally useful. It was recommended by the committee that a spring attachment be used between plow and tractor, with a safety, automatic release, which will break the connection in case of severe shocks.

Valley Suburb's Bean Crop.

including even the minutest details of expense. Irrigation cost $107; tractor plowing, $146; planting, $22.50; two cultivations, $36; threshing, $292; hauling, $51; minor expenses bringing the total up to $1588.46. The total receipts for the crop were $4810.65, leaving a balance of $3221.96 in excess of all expenses, including labor.

PROFIT ESTIMATES.

This account of Mr. Whitsett's shows a profit per acre of $71.59, with an expense per acre of about $35, including rental and all labor. With the addition of the inoculation costs as Mr. Whitsett gives them from this season's experiment, the cost would be increased to about $55 per acre, but the yield would increase proportionately, according to his belief.

Mr. Walker, who used the cover crop last year at San Fernando, estimates his cost at about $50 per acre and his profits for Henderson Bush limas, which yielded him as high as 1400 pounds per acre, at about $50 per acre. Seed prices are remaining normal this year, the best Teparies being obtainable at $13 cwt., and hand-picked Henderson Bush limas at $16 cwt., f.o.b. Ventura.

At Owensmouth, where about 7500 acres in all will be put into beans this year, the consensus of opinion after experiments in former seasons and as expressed by officials of the Chamber of Commerce seems to be that the green cover crop does not pay. The same belief obtains as to inoculation. Beans have been grown here on a commercial basis for four years. The largest acreages are being planted by C. B. Sexsmith, 110; G. W. Burch, 220; Alex Jeffrey, 1500; N. W. Robertson, 500, and W. E. Beckstead, 375.

No tractors have so far been used in the bean fields near San Fernando, though they have been quite extensively employed at Van Nuys and Owensmouth. Subsoiling has been practiced to some extent, and doubtless will be increased if the method proves a profitable one here as it is held to be in other districts.

After the beans have been stacked in the field and threshed, they are hauled from other parts of the valley to Owensmouth, where they are recleaned. It is claimed by growers near the other towns that the erection of recleaning establishments and warehouses at several points would be a profitable investment.

Recently the local warehouse at Owensmouth has been delivering seed at the rate of about five tons per day. While a considerable part of the acreage has, of course, already been planted, the planting will continue till well into June and possibly even later in some instances.

LABOR SITUATION.

The labor situation, both during the planting and with respect to the harvesting season, has been causing some uneasiness in this valley. The Owensmouth growers consider the situation a serious one. While the ranchers are, in most cases, handling their own acreage and are able for that reason to get the work done without experienced labor, the problem of securing even untrained help promises to be a rather difficult one.

The Chamber of Commerce at San Fernando has secured the promise of a camp of laborers from the Half Century Club for help with the fruit crop, and it is possible that similar arrangements will be made with reference to the bean harvesting. Already Farm Adviser Essick of Ventura county has called a conference of growers through the various farm centers who met recently with the local officers of the Women's Land Army of America, [illegible] established headquarters in the [illegible] Commerce Building in Los Angeles. THE HOMECROFTER AND OLD HI COST.

BY UNCLE MARSH.

"Hoe! everyone that thirsteth for a knowledge of gardening." 'Tis the only way to get it.

Our old edition of Webster's does not contain a definition of the term "homecrofting." If I were as spry as in the old days I'd run over to the new county library and see what the encyclopedias have to say about it. You who keep house by the year and have an out-door pantry growing in your back yards; you who are coining the sunshine of California into food crops; you who have a couple of walnut trees, a prune tree and a plum and who know how to grow muscat grapes and make them into raisins, and how to pickle and can olives from your own trees—you are homecrofters. You who don't do these things may now know what a homecrofter is.

If between these pastimes and your town job you find time to slip off trout fishing into the high mountains two or three times during the summer, then you are a thirty-third-degree member. It's a safe bet you have a milch goat nicely housed in the shed at the rear of your poultry yard and that the old climbing rambler rose that cluttered over the roof of your chicken house and flivver shed has long since been removed and replaced with a nicely-trained and controlled double set of mammoth blackberries that give your wife at least forty quarts of fine material for jelly and jam every summer.

There are other embryo homecrofters, and some of the merely first-degree members like to call themselves "war gardeners." That's the spirit, though.

Now I expect to break into The Times Farm and Tractor Section ever and anon (and the "anon" can also be interpreted to mean "anonymously") with something on homecrofting, although I won't always call it by that name. I know homecrofters who have it all over me when it comes to feeding themselves while enjoying life, and I'm mighty near being independent of the groceryman, at that. I'd like hear from them and how they do it. I'd be glad to pass it on.

We homecrofters don't profess skill in farming or market gardening. We can do things out of season in a small way for our own needs that would be preposterous in cost if done on a farming scale. When we start in telling about the stunts that we've done on a homecroft scale and schedule, don't make the mistake of thinking that we'd ever dream of tackling the same propositions on a big garden or farm tract. We let the commercial fellows work out their own problems in their own way. If this much is clear, I'm going to start right in.

Someone in Alhambra, signing himself or herself "B. L. C.," writes the Farm and Tractor Section to ask about potatoes. The letter no sooner arrives than it is sent out to me and I have a subject all ready made to order.

"I am told it is too late to plant potatoes now," says the writer, "but I know personally of some neighbors who planted last August and got good yields. Please tell me what I can do, as I was not here in the much-recommended February season."

Now potatoes thrive in cool, moist soil and will not do well during the heat of the summer on a commercial scale. Hence the best months for planting are February and August. The February crop ripens before the scorching sun heats the soil to an unbearable degree for potatoes; and the worst is over and the cooler weather begins before the tubers begin to form on the roots of the August planting.

But the homecrofter, growing only so many as he needs for his own use, simply uses a mulch of rotted manure or straw, or leaves or corn stalks and, plants nearly every month in the year. B. L. C. can get good potatoes by planting now if he makes his furrows at usual depth and gives the water a chance to soak in for many hours before planting. Then about the time the potato plants are coming through the soil he must give it a good mulch cover at least eight inches thick—the well-rotted manure being the best. The stems push through the mulch and the plants grow luxuriantly. The mulch material serves to protect the roots and tubers, and retains the soil moisture so that the plants continue to grow vigorously during the hot, dry weather when unmulched potatoes would either be stunted or killed. Mulched potatoes may be sprinkled instead of the regular irrigation by furrow, but not the thin, ten-minute sprinkling of the thoughtless ones. Instead, set the sprinkler on these mulched potatoes and give them a four-hour soaker. You will only need do this about once after the planting, providing you gave the full soaking run of water in the furrows before you planted.

This was an easy one for a homecrofter.

seat at the rear, so that he can observe the operation of the machine. This type, as well as some of the other makes, is manufactured in one and two-row sizes.

TYPES OF DIGGERS.

The potato digger, although a comparatively recent addition, in its practical form, to our harvesting machinery, has been rapidly improved, until now it may be used under almost any conditions. The diggers also, may be divided broadly into two types—one dumping the potatoes in piles and the other dropping them along the rows. All the machines, however, resemble each other in principle and general appearance. Different makes have special features and improvements, but all consist of a plow or digger, a shaking device and an elevator. Some machines throw the vines off on one side, while others drop them upon the potatoes to protect the tubers from the sun until picked up.

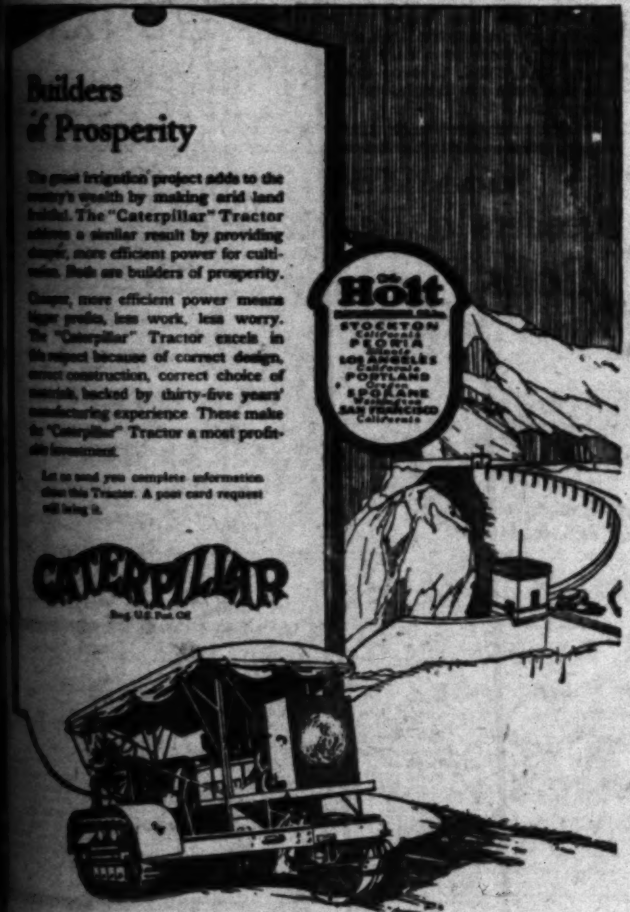
On land which is comparatively clean and without stones, it is possible to use a gathering box, which is furnished extra with one type of digger and is designed to measure the potatoes off into piles of one bushel each (dropped directly into boxes or sacks, if desired.) The usual practice, where this equipment is employed, is merely to dump the tubers at regular intervals on the ground, where they can be sorted before being picked up. The picking, as will readily be seen, is much easier than when the spuds are distributed along the entire row.

An auxiliary gasoline engine, mounted upon the digger, makes it possible to use the machine under difficult conditions, with only two horses, although four are ordinarily necessary even for easy digging. One make of harvester is especially constructed for engine equipment. The use of an engine is desirable in digging fields infested with crab grass and weeds or having exceptionally heavy vines.

Another machine, considered indispensable by many commercial potato growers, is the sprayer. Offered in different sizes and types to suit any condition, these "enemies of the enemies" that threaten the crop of tubers are being sold in ever increasing numbers to wide-awake farmers, as a form of crop insurance low in first cost as compared with the saving which may result from their timely use.

Many growers deliver their crop with a truck or tractor, thus completing the cycle of machine work.

"Junior fairs" for farm club pupils are the latest device for interesting the youngsters.



Builders of Prosperity

The great irrigation project adds to the country's wealth by making arid land fruitful. The "Caterpillar" Tractor achieves a similar result by providing cheaper, more efficient power for cultivation. Both are builders of prosperity.

Cheaper, more efficient power means bigger profits, less work, less worry. The "Caterpillar" Tractor excels in this respect because of correct design, correct construction, correct choice of materials, backed by thirty-five years' manufacturing experience. These make the "Caterpillar" Tractor a most profitable investment.

Let us send you complete information about this Tractor. A post card request will bring it.

THE BRENNEIS EXTRA HEAVY DUTY
ORCHARD CULTIVATOR

This 1917 Model Tractor Cultivator is built to meet the demand of the owners of the medium and small size tractors for an extra heavy cultivator that could be handled by the tractor driver. It is made on the same lines and of the same high grade steel as our well known Chisel Cultivator, but without the hand levers and rear wheels, and with a hand wheel screw lift, making it a perfect one-man, all-steel tool.

We make two weights, medium for the small tractors and extra heavy for the larger tractors, and in four sizes 5, 6, 7, 8 and 10 feet wide.

FEED, LABOR AND RANGE ALL FACTORS IN THE GOAT BUSINESS.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

IN BUILDING up the business of middleman for the goat industry, which promises to be one of the most important future developments of the business in Southern California, many local feed, labor and range conditions must be taken into consideration.

The man or woman who has a suitable foothill or mountain location to furnish open range at least during certain months of the year, and who can also provide a thoroughly reliable herder, has a nucleus for establishing this branch of goat growing. It seems safe to predict that, as the entire industry of raising goats increases, the demand for such a method of raising kids owned by the back lot goateries and for pasturing dry does will make itself felt in proportion. It may well be added as a profitable side line by the ranch goat grower, and breeders of pure blood stock find many advantages in the pen.

The goat breeder located in the hills has first to meet the difficulty of transportation. However, the surplus milk can be used for cheese-making in such a situation with quite as much profit, it is claimed by those who have tried it, as when sold direct to the consumer in its raw state. The matter of transportation, when only affecting the stock itself, need not prove a serious difficulty.

FENCING IMPORTANT.

The raising of the more concentrated feeds to supplement the range is made possible to a large extent by this arrangement. And the first step is fencing. More than with any other branch of live stock is the matter of fencing a supremely important one with goats. Contrary to popular opinion, goats are not inveterate fence jumpers. The problem is simply one of making the fence tight and strong and keeping it in good condition. Stock wire fencing about eighteen inches in height with several strands of barbed wire above has proved very satisfactory.

In order to assure succulent feed the year around, pastures should be fenced and crossfenced in such a way that the band can be kept out on range entirely during the spring months, if desired, while the forage crops in the home pasturages are reserved till later in the season. The best crops for such purposes constitute a subject in itself worthy of much study and experimentation.

THE FEED QUESTION.

The problem of grain feeds and grain substitute feeds that can be raised on the small ranch, often without the advantages of irrigation, is another field in which trial demonstrations are now being carried on by a number of goat growers taking up this work. To make the goatery wholly self-supporting in the matter of feeds is an object which promises fulfillment with proper management. No other branch of the live-stock industry is so favored with advantages in this respect.

A number of cases can be cited in Southern California where this has already been done with the aid of the brush range. Doubtless the next few years will see many strides forward in the matter of increased capacity, even on such ranches where the cost of feed has so far never proved a problem. By the use of silage and home-grown grain and root crops the range feed can be supplemented to great advantage.

Without the home growing of such concentrated feeds, the feeding of young kids must, of course, remain about the same as in the back yard goatery. The cost of the goat's milk they consume may be said to be lower where the doe is fed largely on range, but it still has a definite value through the opportunity of cheese production, and so cannot be estimated at greatly reduced cost. The labor of caring for small kids is not greatly lessened by handling them in numbers. Though the advantages of being able to place them under competent care is alone a great inducement to the owner of city goats in restricted quarters, the actual cost to him must remain very nearly the same under such conditions as though he raised them himself. There is an opportunity here for co-operative goat farms, where goat owners may come to own their plants and raise their own feeds in the foothills as a contributory arrangement in connection with their city dairies.

TRACTOR INFLUENCES BREEDING OF HORSES.

That the tractor will cause farmers to expect more of their horses and thus bring about a change in breeding methods, is the opinion of a local horseman of many years' experience.

"The tractors chug along steadily," he points out, "and deliver a regular flow of power. The farmer who drives a tractor comes to expect the same sort of performance from his horses, and, inasmuch as the nature of the demand is what influence the breeders, I look for a reform in the breeding of draft animals. Much has been said and written about weight in the collar, but too many breeders, failing to keep the utility ideal in mind, have construed this to mean simply size and weight. However, a horse may be big-boned and well-proportioned, and tip the scales at a ton, and still fail to produce the 'weight in the collar' that counts.

"What the farmer has now learned to expect is not alone the weight to move big loads, but the willingness to work and the endurance to deliver power continuously through a ten-hour day."

GOOD SIRE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR.

The economical production of milk is possible only when the machine used, the cow, is an efficient one for the purpose and when the person in charge knows how to manage the machine. A cow is born with a certain natural ability to produce milk if given proper conditions. The extent of this ability is mostly a matter of heredity or breeding. The high-producing dairy cow is not the result of any special manner of raising the heifer calf. The most skilled feeder cannot put this quality into a cow born without it. All the good feeder can do is to make full use of the ability to produce milk, which the cow has inherited. The extent to which this milk-producing ability is inherited varies greatly, as is well known. Even in the well bred dairy herds not all the heifers raised prove good enough to retain in the herd. Constant culling of the inferior cows has been found one of the most important measures in maintaining a profitable herd.

The ability to produce milk is inherited through both dam and sire, but since the sire is responsible for half the inheritance of each young animal, he is clearly the most important factor in improving the herd. If the cows in a herd are capable of producing only 200 pounds of fat a year and the sire used represents a breed or family, the cows of which average 350 pounds of fat a year, it would appear reasonable that the heifers would average half-way between, an increase of 75 pounds of fat a year.

A Rational System Needed.

selected indiscriminately from all kinds of growth, the preponderance being from sucker and intermediate kinds of wood, and our orchards are now conglomerate mixtures of good, fair, poor and worthless trees.

But bud selection does not go far enough. Even the best strains from fruit wood give rise to sucker and intermediate types of growth and these must be excluded. Trees grown from poor buds require constant pruning to keep out the most undesirable classes of wood. In other words, after bud selection must come wood selection, and the latter is by no means the unimportant half. From these remarks one can readily see why one tree may require little or no pruning, while the next in the row may need vigorous pruning several times a year. One is from a good bud; the other from a poor bud. The writer has seen young orchards from very fine buds where the pruning shear has never been used, but sooner or later some undesirable growth will appear, when it must be cut out.

In brief, a rational system for lemon pruning is, first, to insist on having trees propagated from the best type of fruit wood; second, to rigorously exclude all other types of growth where necessary to build the framework, and, third, to keep the tree open enough to induce the bearing of heavy crops on the inside.

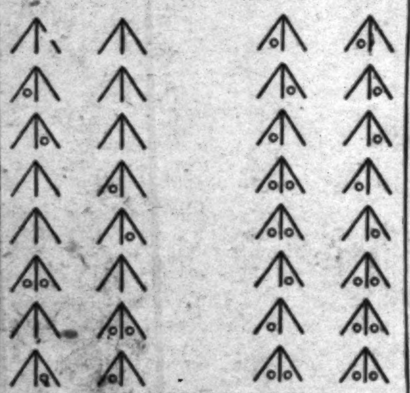
It has been said by some that the brown eggs are richer than the white. This statement is not borne out by chemical analysis, and the physical examination proves that the main points of superiority, although extremely slight, are possessed by the white eggs. The minute differences that are found between the two groups are exceeded by variation between the varieties within the same group.

Therefore, both from a chemical and physical point of view, there are practically no differences as far as the food value is concerned between the white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs.

Another factor in favor of the white-shelled eggs is a larger degree of transparency, which makes it more economical to candle them—a practice that is now almost universal among commercial egg handlers. It has been stated by some commission men that if the brown-shelled eggs are carefully selected, clean, properly packed, etc., they will pay the same price for the brown as for the white-shelled, but such is not the general rule here.

Allowing for the fact that the breeds producing the brown-shelled eggs are also the meat breeds, it would seem desirable that their eggs should occupy a place level with the whites. Here is an opportunity for the handlers of the American, Asiatic and English breeds to do some missionary work. To our way of thinking, a case of well selected standard brown eggs is quite as attractive as one of the lighter color, and since there is no difference in nutritive values, should command an equally high price. For certain it is that our markets are rather destitute of first-class poultry meat; that, in this respect, we are far behind England and the continent of Europe. If the hen fruit of Rocks and Brahmas, Orpingtons and Wyandottes is as prolific as that of the Leghorns and of equal value, the meat breeds will then have the advantage of presenting a carcass that has a value beyond that of the Mediterraneans. Eggs and meat is the war cry of the hour, and both may be advanced if the prejudice against the brown-shelled eggs could be fully removed. In the vernacular of the street, what are the handlers of American, Asiatic and English breeds going to do about it?



NOT HIEROGLYPHICS,

But toe marks for chicks. Poultry raisers frequently make the mistake of keeping old hens on their farms and killing the younger hens and pullets because they are unable to distinguish them after the pullets have matured. Marking the chicks when they are young with a toe punch will help to avoid this and will enable the poultryman to determine readily the age and breeding and to keep any other records desired.

Eggs and Their Food Values.

The use of hen fruit in our scheme of domestic economy is rather limited as compared with what the French and Italians have recourse to in the wide uses of eggs in the preparation of human food; nor are we really appreciative of the nutritive and assimulative values of the product of the hen. That it is when boiled or fried a good breakfast food is about the extent of its direct use in the average American household. A closer scientific study will, according to Hutchinson's book on "Food and Dietetics," show at a glance that eggs contain almost the same total of nutritive matter as meat, being relatively richer in fat, but poorer in protein. Eggs are thus admirably adapted chemically to supplement of food rich in carbohydrate. The addition of eggs to rice and cereals in puddings makes a complete food. It is also a matter of common knowledge that some foods appease the appetite and the feelings of hunger longer than others. Such foods are said to be "satisfying." Eggs possess the quality in no ordinary degree—whatever the explanation of the quality is, it is to be reckoned with in estimating the value of a food from the stomach point of view.

These are but straws which go to substantiate our contention that eggs should not only be more widely used, but that when their nutritive values (compared to other food products) are considered, they should command more money. And until they do the producer is not getting what he is entitled to. What the egg needs is an advertising campaign as the best and most universal breakfast food known to man.

Popularizing Poultry Meat.

America is essentially a nation of beef, pork and mutton eaters; hence, it is not surprising that our people are somewhat laggard in the production of really good table poultry; that England, Belgium, France, and indeed most of the more advanced European countries, are much more progressive in this respect and grow a product that is really worth while. Not only are we derelict in growing good chicken meat, but we are also lacking in the art of its preparation for human food. Possibly these two facts explain why Americans do not eat more table poultry. Like many other things, this branch of the industry needs development and exploitation, but where are the poultrymen that will take the initiative and do it?

As compared to other meat products, there is a comparatively light demand for chicken meat, and, on the whole, many consider it a luxury, which may explain its limited use. The waste on chicken meat averages less than that on beef, and hence it is often more economical. In the light of these facts it would seem that something ought to be done to popularize poultry meat in our markets. A good way to begin is to improve its quality and methods of preparation.

The Specialty Clubs.

The Los Angeles Poultry Association is not only broad minded, but democratic in its policies. In other words, its members are aiming to stimulate the love of pure-blooded fowl and to broaden the interest in poultry culture; its ambition is to serve the poultry breeders and fanciers of the Southwest. As an evidence of this, its show committee has consulted the specialty breed clubs as to a selection of judges (from the corps engaged by the association) to handle their respective breeds, which has resulted in the following allotments:

W. S. Russell of Concord, Cal., was selected at the May meeting of the Wyandotte Club to handle all varieties of Wyandottes and also the Barred Rocks. At the monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Red Club Judge O. L. McCord of Peoria, Ill., was chosen to handle that breed. The Orpington Club, at its May meeting, also decided on Mr. McCord. W. M. Coats of Vancouver, B. C., was selected to handle the Anconas, Cornish and White Rocks. The show committee of the association has assigned all the Leghorn classes to Capt. Harlo J. Fiske of Ft. Leavenworth, Kans. It has also offered the following proposition to all specialty clubs: $25 for the first 100 birds of each breed entered and $25 for each additional fifty birds, this money to be given to the clubs in addition to the regular prize money, to be distributed as they may decide.

An announcement will be made later as to who will judge the remaining classes. Further information may be secured by addressing the secretary, W. H. Hocking, No. 4421 South Main street, Los Angeles.

Metal in Poultry Yard.

In nearly all industries metal is more or less taking the place of wood, and in no direction more so than in the matter of fencing on the ranch, and yarding in the poultry business. Not only does this apply to the fencing proper, but also to the posts, which are now to be had in steel, 1¼x1¼x1⅛ inches, serving the purpose much better than wood, and at nearly the same price. The advantages of metal over wood are indeed worthy of consideration. By it the risk of fire is reduced to a minimum; it is vermin-proof, cleanly and durable; it occupies less space, requires less repairing and is more lasting. The all-metal poultry fence is certainly a winner, but war conditions just at this time may be inimical to its wide introduction, due chiefly to price and availability. But, with normal conditions restored, we predict for it a growing popularity.

The Pasadena Show.

Our sister city of Pasadena is again in line for a good poultry and pigeon exhibition this year. At the last regular meeting of the Pasadena Poultry Association E. M. Moore was elected secretary and treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. D. Klepper. This meeting voted to hold the next show from December 17 to 21, inclusive. Judging will be by comparison. There is a wealth of enthusiasm among the members and Pasadena is going over the top when show time comes.

CHICAGO, June 9.—S. J. Konenkamp, president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, admitted today that he had recently been summoned before Hinton G. Clabaugh, local chief of the bureau of investigation of the Federal Department of Justice, and telegraphers in Room No. 601 of the Masonic Temple. Both the Commercial Telegraphers' Union and the Order of Railroad Telegraphers were represented, E. J. Thomas, chairman of the general committee of the O.R.T., representing the latter body. About fifty persons were present at the meeting.

RURAL SOUTHLAND DOING ITS BIT.

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY.

Southern California was in the midst of its hay harvest the last week in May when I had occasion to make a trip from Los Angeles to the south end of Riverside county. There was scarcely a half mile along the route that didn't have its hay field. The ranchers were cutting oats, alfalfa and barley hay simultaneously.

From El Monte to Walnut there was an almost unbroken series of hay fields, and from Walnut to Rincon, by way of the South Hills roads, the country was just one hay field after another. In the Chino district, where water is so plentiful, were the choicest hay brops of all.

The outstanding fact is that the oats crop in all the districts was marvelous, and the alfalfa crop quite good, although the barley production was poor. Lack of early rains interfered with the barley. It grew stubby and headed out too soon. The result is a tonnage production far below normal, and a grain supply below the average, too. There will be little if any second-growth barley, although cattle might gain some sustenance from the stubble.

It would be hard to find in Northwestern Iowa or the Dakotas a more bountiful crop of oats than that of the fields of Los Angeles and southern Riverside and San Bernardino counties. I saw nice, straight grain, in most instances waist high, beautifully headed, and strong-stemmed. The hay tonnage from this crop will contribute greatly to the success of livestock growing here this year, and the grain will sustain horses, calves and chicken until another year.

The recent thunder showers which visited nearly all sections of Southern California doubtless did some damage to hay in the windrow and cock. The extent of damage cannot be estimated just now, but it will doubtless not run high. At the same time the showers, copious in some districts, were beneficial where citrus and deciduous fruits and legumes are growing. The cool weather accompanying the rains is favorable to a heavy setting of citrus fruits and if it continues, the danger of a heavy "June drop" of navel oranges will be slight.

Interplanting of beans and other crops, between tree rows in young orchards, as a war-winning measure, is decidedly noticeable this season. Nearly every grove I saw was either bringing on a splendid crop of potatoes, beans peas or onions, or growing barley and oats. The favorite go-between crop seems to be the white, pink, or black-eyed bean which does not sap soil occupied by fruit trees, but rather adds nitrogen to it. The growing of beans in orchard middles will add hundreds of thousands of dollars to the wealth of the ranchers this year.

It is a little early to estimate deciduous fruit production for the year, but peach and apricot trees are looking fine and setting well, and there has been no dangerous cold weather to hinder the young sets as yet.

Out in the country the people appear to be utilizing every available foot of ground for some worth-while crop. Pumpkins will be grown on some of the hay land, as a second crop, and double-crops of potatoes will be produced wherever moisture is available. Rural California is apparently doing her full share this year to win the war

Forty dollars a ton has been offered for both black and white grapes, delivered at the wineries, in the Calistoga region, according to recent advice from Napa county. It is said that most of the prunes in that vicinity have already been sold on an 8-cent basis, although 9 cents has lately been offered.

the company owns and operates four large trucks, six Ford trucks and four pleasure cars. A completely-equipped garage, machine shop and blacksmith shop is manned by a crew of five men, who keep the ranch machinery running, and the engines and cars in first-class order. They are now engaged in overhauling and repairing the wagons and harvesting machinery, to the end that no delays shall occur when the harvest season opens. The machinery is largely stored under sheds when not in use, special "hangars" having been constructed for the tractors. The company owns its own threshing machinery. An expert blacksmith keeps the horses' feet in good shape.

SOME FINE HORSES.

The ranch teams are calculated to attract the attention of any farmer or horse-lover, and are a well-bred, well-kept lot—all brood mares. No stock is raised upon the ranch except the horses, in which the manager takes great pride. The mares are bred to a jack, and a number of fine mule colts may usually be seen in the pastures. A three-year-old jack, purchased in the northern part of the State, for a consideration of $3000, is a recent acquisition. He is a big-boned young animal, of good proportions, and very active. From all indications he will attain great weight and size at maturity. He has, according to the manager, already proved to be a good breeder.

The horses are stabled in galvanized iron buildings with dirt floors, conspicuous rather for order and cleanliness than for elaborate design and equipment. A "stable boss" at the headquarters cleans the barns and lots and feeds all the teams. There are no sore necks or shoulders, as the horses receive constant and individual attention, and their harness is well-fitted. Another "field foreman" looks after the teams and, whenever possible, keeps them at work in one section of the place, where he can readily look after them.

MANAGEMENT OF MEN.

The two field foremen have direct charge of their crews, while a Mexican "boss" has the management of an exclusively Mexican crew, which also has its own bunk houses, commissary and cook. Every man employed on the ranch has his own room, and the bunk houses are grouped about a lounging and bathhouse. Good meals are served in clean mess halls, and regular hours are observed. These conditions, combined with good wages, have served to simplify the labor problem on this ranch, and, according to Mr. Hogg, very few changes are made, a majority of the "hands" being steady men. A separate "village," with comfortable cottages, is provided for married men.

A number of movable kitchens are used during the harvest season, the meals being taken to the workers in the fields.

The ranch help also includes a "gopher getter," who devotes all of his time to poisoning squirrels and gophers. He has a single-horse "rig," with which he travels about the place. He is employed by the month and makes war upon the pests the year 'round. Another interesting character, among the ranch help, is an old-time Oklahoma "fire-eater," who has fought everything from red-eye to redskins and who may be seen about the dark corners of the ranch almost any night, on the lookout for prowlers and mischief-makers of the I.W.W. or Hun stamp. He is assisted in his duties by a

The manner in which the various desirable features of different types of cultivators have been combined in the P. & O. Cantonian make it particularly desirable to the particular farmer. We believe that no other cultivator combines so many special features.

The OC is specially adapted to use where there is a demand for a low wheeled narrow cultivator with wide range of adjustments.

Balance lever adapts poise of machine to weight of operator.

Depth of each gang regulated independently of the other.

Center lever permits instant spreading or narrowing of gangs.

Telescoping axles give variety of width adjustments.

Pivot wheels with parallel gang movement.

Offset axles give extreme narrow widths.

Low wheels, pivoted by means of foot levers.

Gangs work under spring pressure.

Double pointed shovels.

Horses assist operator in raising gangs.

Can be used in beans, corn, potatoes, tobacco and truck—any place where a low cultivator with a variety of adjustments is wanted.
